There is a possibility an acting mayor will be appointed during the election campaigning, she said. It has been done before in other centres.

"That doesn't mean to say I am going to do that," she said.

"I have to let the people of the community and my council know after the nomination what I intend to do," said the mayor.

Present Site Best For New Bridge: Mayor

Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey says a bridge to connect Belleville to Prince Edward County must be built on the most economical site — exactly where it is.

During a press reception where the mayor outlined the aims she will pursue if elected as Progressive Conservative member for Quinte riding, she said emphatically "The bridge will be built between Belleville and Rossmore."

The mayor said "the province will be making a decision within the next few weeks' concerning the bridge site — an issue that has been under investigation by study teams for the past several months.

She emphasized economy as her reason for this location saying, "we must concern ourselves with every dollar spent by the province."

"Information provided by technical staff at city hall shows that location as the most economical," she said.

On Campaign Trail

Mayor Robin Jeffrey says she enjoys the excitement of the campaign trail. After four successful municipal elections, the mayor is going for larger stakes—to represent the Quinte riding as a Progressive Conservative in the upcoming provincial election. Checking the list of delegates who will choose a Tory candidate is her husband Roy Jeffrey. Tha nominating convention will be held Monday in Trenton High School.

New Program Uses Horses To Teach Handicapped

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Six teen-age boys — five from Belleville and one from Rossmore — and all students at the William R. Kirk School for the Mentally Retarded are participating in a new developmental program in the Quinte area.

The boys, aged 14-18 years, are learning the equestrian art from a new group called the Quinte Association for riding for the Developmentally Handicapped headed by Eric Caulfield co-ordinator of the mental retardation counsellor course at Loyalist College.

Mr. Caulfield said Thursday the program is a twice-a-week affair each Tuesday and Thursday mornings, at the Simca Stables at RR1, Corbyville. It began July 3 and will end Aug. 28.

So far, the boys have learned stable management, grooming and riding control, he said. By thier final week, they will be able to embark on a trail ride — unhampered by corral fences.

The instructress is Nancy Allin, proprietress of Simca Stables, who is aided by volunteers from the early childhood education program at Loyalist, the South Hastings branch of the 4 H club and other riding enthusiasts.

Mrs. Allin said when the boys first arrived, they knew nothing of horses and some were even overly-cautious about approaching the animals However, it took only one day for them to grasp the idea of equestrianism and build up their confidence, she noted.

Mr. Caulfield pointed out the program was not designed just for the boys to have a good time. "they are actually learning the equestrian art," he said.

There are offshoots from the program which are benefitting the boys inwardly, he said, in the areas of self-confidence and socialization.

Tape Player Taken

An eight-track tape player was stolen from a car parked at a city car dealer's lot sometime between 8 p.m. Tuesday and 6:40 p.m. Thursday.

Fish Warning Issued

New York state fisheries officials have warned that Lake Ontario salmon they have tested have been found with higher than acceptable levels of a toxic substance in them.

The substance is PCB, used in a number of manufacturing processes in the U.S., but banned in Canada.

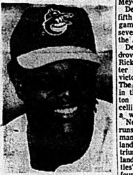
Salmon caught and analyzed by the U.S. researchers had levels of [illegible] to 20 parts per million of PCB. The acceptable level set by U.S. federal officials is five parts per million.

Baylor Roars In Stadium

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There's something about Detroit's Tiger Stadium that turns Baltimore Orioles' Don Baylor into—what else—a tiger.

After going six for seven in sweep, the Tigers cooled Baylor off somewhat Thursday night, holding him to a single and double in five at-bats. However, the single drove in one of six runs in the sixth inning and the double delivered the winning run in the 10th as the Orioles nipped Detroit 7-6, extending the Tigers' losing streak to 12 games, one short of the all-time club record.



DON BAYLOR

In other American League baseball action, Boston Red Sox defeated Milwaukee Brewers 4-2, New York Yankees beat Clevelond Indians 6-3, Oakland A's dfeated Texas Rangers 10-1, Kansas City Royals beat Minnesota Twins 10-2 and Chicago White Sox defeated California Angels 8-4.

Baylor's latest performance gave him 15 hits in his last 20 at-bats, raising his average from .250 to .287. Against the Tigers this year he is 21-for-44, including 15-for-25 in six games at Tiger Stadium.

"It's just one of those things," Baylor said. "In this ballpark you see the ball good. The dimensions are right. This is just a good hitting park. It's like Boston's. You get all psyched up in parks like that."

Singles by Bobby Grich and Tommy Davis preceded Baylor's decisive double off ex-Oriole Bob Reynolds. Trailing 3-0, the Orioles scored six times with two out in the sixth, including two-run singles by Brooks Robinson and Mark Belanger. The Tigers tied it with two in the ninth on Gates Brown's pinch homer and singles by Ron LeFlore, Dan Meyer and Bill Freehan.

Despite the triumph — their fifth in a row and 19th in 25 games—the Orioles remained seven games behind Boston in the AL East.

Denny Doyle and Fred Lynn drove in two runs apiece and Rick Wise pitched an eight-hitter for his eighth consecutive victory and 15th of the season. The Red Sox scored three runs in the third inning off Jim Slaton on a double by Rico Petrocelli, a single by Rick Burleson, a walk, Doyle's two-run single

New York combined home runs by Graig Nettles and Thurman Munson with three Cleveland errors to post its first triumph in five tries at Cleveland Stadium this season. Nettles' two-run homer in the fourth inning erased a 2-0 Cleveland lead and the Yankees took a 4-3 edge with two more in the fifth on a walk, singles by Bobby Bonds and Sandy Alomar and an error. Munson homered in the sixth.

Joe Rudi's grand slam and two home runs by Billy Williams backed Vida Blue's four-hit pitching and enabled the A's to remain 6 games ahead of to remain 6½ games ahead of Kansas City in the AL West.

Kansas City's Fred Patek hit an inside-the-park home run on the first pitch from Minnesota's Vic Albury in the bottom of the first inning. Al Cowens cracked a double and two singles and drove in three runs and Cookie Rojas contributed three singles as the Royals rolled to their fifth consecutive victory.

Nyls Nyman's tie-breaking two-run single in the third inning and the relief pitching of Dave Hamilton led Chicago over from Pete Vuckovich in the fourth and blanked the Angels on three hits the rest of the way.

Ilie Nastase – Headlines Open

The Only Name Needed at Gate

TORONTO (CP — Tournament chairman Don Fontana isn't concerned about the absence of Arthur Ashe, Jimmy Connors or John Newcombe at this year's Canadian open tennis championships. He's got Ilie Nastase.

Nastase—the Romanian who has withdrawn, defaulted and been thrown out of various tournaments this year for wild beheviour—will be one of 64 men's singles competitors when the seven-day event begins here Monday.

"He's the most unpredictable, disorganized person I know," said Fontana. "But probably one of the best drawing cards in a game that is sometimes taken a bit too seriously."

Fontana said Nastase was thrown out of last week's Louisville tournament for a prank he played in the men's doubles event. Stretching the rule that doubles partners must wear the same color of clothing, Nastase put dark coloring on his face. His doubles partner was Ashe, the first black player to win the men's singles event at Wimbledon.

Guillermo Vilas of Argentina—defending Canadian Open champ and currently the hottest player in the world—has drawn the No. 1 seed in the tournament. Vilas has won four tournaments, including last week's Louisville event, and has a commanding lead over Manuel Orantes of Spain for the Grand Prix points standing.

Bjorn Borg of Sweden is seeded second and Orantes is No. 3. Nastase is seeded fourth and Rod Laver of Australia fifth, John Alexander of Australia sixth and Harold Solomon of the United States seventh.

Rejean Genois of Quebec City and Dale Power of Toronto are two of the five who will represent Canada in the men's singles event. In the first round, Power has drawn Jan Kodes, the eighth seed from Czechoslovakia, and Genois will take on Solomon. The remaining Canadians will be the top points winners on the Canadian circuit which winds up with the national championship at Winnipeg this week.

Today and Saturday, 16 players will attempt to qualify for eight open spots in men's singles event.

Margaret Court of Australia is the top seed among 32 competitors in the women's singles—including two who will come from 16 qualifiers today and Saturday. Julie Heldman of the United States is second and Marcie Louie of the U.S., is third. Kerry Melville-Reid of Australia has drawn the No. 4 seed, Janet Newberry of the U.S., is fifth, and Terry Holliday of the U.S., is sixth.

Jane O'Hara of Toronto has drawn Mrs. Court in the first round, and Susan Stone of Vancouver, one of three other Canadian women in the event, will take on Donna Ganz of the U.S. The other two Canadian entries also will come from the points leaders after this week's Winnipeg tournament.

First-prize money for the men's singles in the Rothmans-sponsored tournament is $16,000. Women's singles winner will take home $6,000, as will the winners of the men's doubles event. The women's doubles winners will win $2,000.

Invitation to South Africa Withdrawn

Government Wraps Canadian Masters Officials in Red Tape

TORONTO (CP) — Canada has withdrawn its invitation to South African sportsmen to compete in the world Masters athletic competition rather than face a showdown with the federal government.

Don Farquarson, president of the Over 40 World Masters Committee, said Thursday he was forced to take the last-minute stand after the government refused to subsidize the world meet, which gets under way Monday, if South African entries were allowed to compete.

He said he was aware of the situation in May but was encouraged up to the end that it would change, allowing the South African team—currently competing in the U.S. Masters at White Plains, N.Y.—to compete here.

Farquarson said the government's refusal came in the form of a telegram Wednesday night and he informed South African track officials through the South African ambassador in Ottawa Thursday morning.

Harry Pampert, an executive member of the South African Masters Association, said late Thursday he had been informed by cable that the invitation had been withdrawn although the 15-member team, already competing in the U.S., had not been officially informed.

"It's not the decision I'm in disagreement with," he said. "It's the lateness in which the final decision was made, especially in view of the repeated requests for clarification of the government's stand on the issue."

He said he had heard in April that the Canadian Track and Field Association "would be embarrassed" if South Africa competed as a team but would welcome the athletes to compete as individuals, but later heard that Roger Jackson of Sport Canada was of the opinion that under the regulations the federal government would not support financially any sporting event involving South African competitors.

He said the same day, he received a government cheque for $24,000 supporting the event "with a set of attached rules . . . none of which mentioned the visit of the South Africans."

In view of the doubt, he wrote to Marc Lalonde, federal minister of health and welfare whose department has jurisdiction over Sport Canada, but was finally informed by a deputy minister that "he didn't know when the ministers would meet to consider" the letter.

South African applications to enter the world meet were received by the July 1 deadline but "held in abeyance." On July 6, the South Africans phoned to determine the status of their registrations since they had to deposit money for a charter flight.

"There was no ruling, only an opinion, and no official letter, so I gave them the go-ahead to make their arrangements," said Farquarson.

On July 23, he received a letter from a Mr. Woodstock, apparently a deputy minster in Mr. Lalonde's office, who said it had been decided to refuse any contributions to the meet if South Africans took part.

"I told him we had already received $24,000, of which I am sure he was not aware, and said we had spent most of it. He then told me that if we went ahead, the federal government would request a refund."

Farquarson was told the decision had been made at the external affairs department level. When he telephoned External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen's office, explaining the position, a deputy minister agreed to make further enquiries.

"Then I received a cable message on phone Friday night stating exactly as they had before—there would be no exemption, they would ask for a refund, they would not pay bill for national officials who are to officiate at the meet, it would not support the Masters event morally or financially if South Africans participated.

"The printed copy got to me Wednesday."

He said he could see no way out other than to withdraw the invitation to South Africa.

Top Men's Seeds Hang In

WINNIPEG (CP) — The top four seeds are the only competitors left in both men's and women's singles play as the Canadian National Tennis Championships head into semi-final rounds today.

The women's semi-finalists in the $12,000-tournament are Jane O'Hara of Toronto, Susan Stone of Vancouver, Andree Martin of Montreal and Vera Komar of Cambridge, Ont.

Although there have been few surprises after four days of competition, the path each player took to get to the semi-finals has differed greatly.

Third seed Bardsley, twice runner-up in the tournament but never a winner, had a few anxious moments earlier in the week in his match with former champion Bob Puddicombe of Vancouver.

However, after defeating Glen Booth of Winnipeg 6-3, 6-4 Thursday, he said all the matches had been tough.

On the other hand, second-seed Power had a relatively easy time in the first three rounds of play before a taxing match Thursday with fifth seed David Brown of Toronto. Power won in straight sets 6-4, 7-5.

Genois, top seed in the tournament and the number four ranked player in Canada, also had his hands full Thursday while facing eighth seed Richard legendre of Montreal.

"The games were closer than the scores would indicate," he said after his 6-4, 6-2 win.

And Boyce had to come from behind Thursday to defeat Peter Pospisil of Toronto 2-6, 6-4, 6-2.

In women's play, O'Hara, Stone and Martin, the top three seeds respectively, advanced to the semi-finals Thursday with straight-set victories, while fourth-seeded Komar dropped the first set of her match with Mandy Parsons of Vancouver, won the second 6-3 and finally managed a 7-5 triumph in the third-and deciding set.

O'Hara defeated Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa 6-2, 6-0, putting an end to Blackwood's title hopes after a strong showing earlier in the week. Stone had little trouble getting past Pam Gollish of Toronto 6-1, 6-2, and Martin beat fifth seed KathyMorton of Cambridge, Ont., 6-2, 6-4.

In today's matches, Genois goes against Bardsley and Boyce plays Power in men's play, while Stone meets Komar and Martin meets O'Hara on the women's side.

Along with some taxing matches, the eight surviving players have also had to contend with violent weather conditions at mid-week.

Wind gusts of up to 35 miles an hour whipped over the courts at the Winnipeg Canoe Club Wednesday and a severe thunderstorm Thursday forced the cancellation of the day's last four doubles matches.

The tournament, with first-prize money of $1,500 for the men's singles champion and $800 for the women's champion, ends Sunday.

U.S. Volleyball Squad Dumps Canadian Entry

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The United States men's Olympic volleyball team defeated the Canadian team Thursday night, but the Americans must beat Cuba in three consecutive games in the finals to qualify for the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

The U.S. team beat the Canadians 15-9, 15-4 and 15-4. But Cuba defeated Mexico 15-12, 15-3 and 15-12 to remain undefeated through the North Central American and Caribbean Olympic qualifying volleyball championships.

Since Cuba has a better won-lost percentage through the tourney, the U.S. team must win three in order to capture the title and qualify to represent the zone in the Olympics. Only one men's team and one women's team will qualify from this competition.

In women's competition, Cuba downed Mexico 15-2, 15-6 and 15-5, and the Canadian team beat the Dominican Republic team 16-14, 15-12, 7-15 and 15-4. The Cuban and U.S. teams will meet in the finals for a best three-of-five match since both teams are undefeated.

The finals are to be played tonight.

Phillies Pay For Comment

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If Mike Schmidt had his way, he'd probably take back what he said last winter about Chicago Cubs.

The Philadelphia Phillies third baseman classified the Cubs as seond-class citizens in baseball's National League East Division and Chicago has made the Phillies pay for it this summer.

"Schmidt's remark rubbed us the wrong way," said Rick Reuschel after pitching the Cubs to a 5-3 victory over the Phillies Thursday night. "Last winter Schmidt said that for the Phillies to win the division, they had to beat teams like the Cubs.

"I don't think Philadelphia is that much better that they can classify us that way. It gave us a little extra incentive against these guys."

The victory was Chicago's eighth in 12 games with the Phillies and prevented them from gaining ground on the East-leading Pittsburgh Pirates. The Pirates were beaten 6-1 by Rouston Astros and maintained a four-game edge in baseball's most competitive race.

Andre Thornton's three-run homer in the eighth inning helped the Cubs beat the Phillies. Jose Cardenal started Chicago's winning rally with a two-out double and Jerry Morales was intentionally walked before Thornton hit his sixth homer off Larry Christenson, 6-3, giving the Cubs a 4-1 lead.

Reuschel, 8-12, then gave up a two-run homer to Dick Allen in the bottom of the inning and a double to Jay Johnstone before shutting the door on the Phillies.

Greg Gross hit two doubles and knocked in two runs and Dave Roberts fired a three-hitter to lead Houston past Pittsburgh. Gross doubled and scored in the first inning and then hit a double for two runs in the Astros' three-run sixth. The Astros supported Roberts, 7-12, with a nine-hit attack against loser Bruce Kison 9-8.

RICK REUSCHEL

Tom Seaver pitched a three-hitter and Mike Phillips capped a five-run rally with a three-run double in New York's victory over Montreal. It was the 15th victory for Seaver and the second in two tries for new manager Roy McMillan, who replaced the fired Yogi Berra Wednesday.

Seek Injunction To Stop Tonelli

TORONTO (CP) — A lawyer for the Ontario Hockey Association predicted Thursday that the OHA will take legal action against player John Tonelli and others involved in his signing with Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association.

"We will ask for an injunction to prevent Tonelli from playing hockey until this matter is sorted out," lawyer Joe Kane of Toronto said.

Tonelli, 18, was a star centre with Toronto Marlboros of the OHA Major Junior series until late last season when he signed a conditional contract with Houston.

At first, the WHA balked at approving his Houston contract because it considered him still bound by his junior contract which, under Canadian Amateur Hockey Association rules, does not allow him to turn professional until his 20th birthday.

Kane said when he heard of the WHA's approval Thursday: "I believe the Ontario Major Junior A League will commence action immediately against the WHA, Houston Aeros, Tonelli and his agent Gus Badali, and I think at that time it will be proved that Tonelli is bound to our contract."

Badali said he was pleased with the WHA's action.

"The legal age of 18 is finally being upheld and a boy finlly has the choice of his profession," said Tonelli's agent.

"I felt all along an 18-year-old had the right to do what he wanted and obviously the WHA agrees. Finally an 18-year-old is not being held back by unconstitutional rulings."

John F. Bassett, Toronto Toros president and a league trustee, confirmed Tonelli's signing but said he hoped to see similar action taken against the Aeros as was taken against him when he signed Mark Napier another Marlboros 18-year-old, last spring.

"We had to give up draft choices and player considerations for signing Napier and I hope the league sees fit to assure Aeros do likewise," said Bassett.

Napier's signing was different from Tonelli's because he had his OHA contract rewritten to release him at the end of last season.

Ashe Rolls Over Mayo

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Arthur Ashe defeated Joachim Loyo-Mayo of Mexico with a consistent net game to advance to the third round of the $150,000 United States clay court tennis championships Thursday night.

Ashe, 1967 champion and No. 2 men's seed, came to the net at every opportunity and usually put the ball away on the first shot thereafter, winning 6-1, 6-1. Loyo-Mayo had difficulty handling the 32-year-old Wimbledon champion's service and won his own serve only twice.

Ashe, top-ranked Guillermo Vilas and the other remaining men's seeds advanced with little difficulty although several leading women didn't fare as well at the Indianapolis Racquet Club.

The key upset of the day came when No. 2 Julie Heldman lost 7-5, 6-4 to West Germany's Katja Ebbinghaus, who has won all her matches in successive sets. Also eliminated was No. 6 Terry Holladay of the U.S., who lost to unranked Donna Ganz of the U.S., 6-3, 6-3.

The 22-year-old Vilas put his smooth ground strokes and powerful backhand to work against Patricio Cornejo of Chile for a 6-3, 6-2 win.

Manuel Orantes of Spain beat Dick Dell of the U.S., 6-1, 6-2; Onns Parun of New Zealand defeated Sherwood Stewart of the U.S., 6-4, 7-5, and Jaime Fillol of Chile topped Austria's Hans Kary 6-3, 6-4.

In women's singles, the only seeded player in action who won was No. 5 Janet Newberry, who defeated Marianna Simionesco of Romania 7-6, 6-3.

FLYERS SIGN TWO

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The National Hockey League-champion Philadelphia Flyers have signed two players to multi-year contracts. General manager Keith Allen said singers Bob Ritchie, the Flyers' second amateur draft choice this year, and Dave Kelly, a free agent, reached agreement with the club Tuesday. Terms were not disclosed.

May Build Arena Himself

TORONTO (CP) — Ted Tobias, who has been granted a conditional World Hockey Association franchise for Hamilton, says he'll build an arena in Hamilton himself if the current arena a group makes no move by next month.

John F. Bassett, president of the WHA Toronto Toros who supported Tobias's bid for a franchise, said Thursday he would assist Tobias in raising the estimated $10 million needed for an arena in Hamilton.

Bassett and Tobias met recently with Hamilton mayor Vic Copps and told him of their idea. They cannot proceed unless the group of 10 Hamilton businessmen, which has options on a 20-acre, city-owned building site, fails to raise the capital.

The group has been trying for three years to raise the money and Hamilton city council has given it a Sept. 30 deadline.

"It's astonishing to me that they haven't got the money yet," said Bassett. "They've been working on it for three years. The league would like the team to begin play in Hamilton in 1976."

Bill Dewey was just a little late with his slide on Thursday night in Quinte Fastball League play. Catcher Paul Hall of Howard and Robert had little trouble making the play on the Bardon Supplies runner. The score ended up in Bardons favor as they won 5-0 to take a firm hold on first place.

Peculiar Night For QFL Fans

It was an odd night for Quinte Fastball League fans Thursday. Anyone showing up late for either contest was apt to be a bit confused.

In the first game Rorabeck Real Estate lost by default to the Ellis Juniors, yet the two teams agreed to play for five innings anyway.

It was just Rorabeck's luck that the one game that didn't mean anything they tied the Juniors 3-3. It could have been their first victory of the season.

In the other league contest, Howard and Robert Printing found themselves without either of their regular pitchers.

Still, Bardon Supplies did defeat them 5-0, with making five errors behind him — something highly unusual for a team like the Printers.

The winning hurler was Earl Foster on a two-hitter in five innings he ;received relief help from Ken DeMille. Combined, the two pitchers struck out nine batters.

For Bardon, Denis Neron had two singles, with other one baggers coming from Bill Harrison, zearl Foster, Warren Ostrander, Leo St. Denis and Bill Dewey.

The two Howard and Robert safeties were both singles from Terry Pope and Genereaux.

The win gives Bardon 37 points and wrapped up the league pennant for 1975.

Two Sires Stakes Headline Tonight's Races

The two Sires Stakes races will be held in the fifth and ninth, for three year old colts and gelding trotters.

Getting back to the big money, entered in the fifth race is Snegem Flight, who won over $53,000 last year and already has $33,362 for 1975. Driven by William Megens, the horse is definitely one of the finest to be seen at the QER this year.

Inthe ninth, another big winner, Delvin Herbert, is entered. $53,168 was its winning total from last year. Driving the big horse will be Jack Herbert.

The purse for both races will be $4,695 with just five horses competing in each event. Usually there are seven to a race.

In the tenth the Mel Barriage Invitational will be the attraction, as a number of local horses compete for the cooler (blanket) and $500 purse.

They are driven by Pat Hunt and Jim Mayo Jr. respectively, two of the better drivers in the area.

In one other race, not yet determined, another cooler (blanket) will be presented, this time by an official of One Hour Martinizing.

Comparative figures show that this years attendance is over last season's. The QER is doing better than ever and area residents seem to have taken a greater interest in harness racing.

Madoc Takes Series

A grand-slam home run from Joan Bailey gave the Purinaettes a 13-11 victory over Oshawa and their Provincial Women Softball Union's Intermediate B series two games to nothing.

The loss was shared by Lorraine Merchant and Shawn Essex; they had two strikeouts.

Bailey added a triple to her long shot for Madoc in leading them at the plate. Bonnie Jones hit a homer and three singles, while Penny Graham also homered in the win.

The race for positions in the South Hastings Baseball League this year was so close that a tie breaking game had to be played to decide third place.

The game between Foxboro and Read was a tight match with Foxboro edging by Read 3-2. It was the first time this year Foxboro had come up with a win over Read.

The losing chucker was Ken Abrams, who struck out seven batters.

Macs Have Point To Prove

Optimism has to be the key word for the Belleville McDonald's upcoming road trip.

The Macs will make their final overnight trek this weekend playing Burlington in a doubleheader Saturday night and Kitchener in a twinbill on Sunday.

Burlington is a solid well-balanced club currently riding second place in the East Division.

Kitchener is one of the league's weaker teams. They have jockeyed all year with Toronto for last place in the West Division.

The McDonalds already have a 5-0 win to their credit over Kitchener, while games with Burlington have been tight.

After going three for four on the weekend the Belleville team knows what victory is and they are enjoying it.

It is expected that both Ted Hoy and Gary Goyer will make the road trip with the Macs.

One member of the club who won't be returning to the field again this year is third baseman Wayne McTaggart.

"The doctor told him not to put a strain on his arm because he's pulled some tendons and could ruin it," said general manager Doug Adams, "but we'll still be able to use him as a pinch hitter."

McTaggart has been hot at the bat for the Macs, and at this time has an average well over .260.

Hal Kemp and Vern Agnew are the two top threats for Burlington at the plate. Kemp batted .273 last year, while Agnew came in with a .272 average. He was named the league's all-star shortstop.

Bill Drennan is a top flight hurler for the Provicioners winning 16 games last season. Al Few and Kemp can also be relied on to pitch well.

This is a crucial weekend for the Macs, who must prove to everyone that last weeks three for four performance was no fluke.

Woodstock won just 11 games last year and was in last place in the East. This year Belleville has seven wins.

Wright, Rossit Winning Duo

The Belleville Minor, Baseball Association Tadpole division was the scene for a 10-5 win for Belleville Conductors over Trudeau Motors.

Jim Wright and Valdy Rossit combined to strike out 12 batters in the victory. Rossit also tripled and homered in the victory, while Wright added a triple.

In Tyke action Cablevue stuck it to Alhambra 109 with a 26-3 victory.

Trevor Powell struck out six batters on the way to the easy win. Bob Revoy had two doubles and four singles to lead the awesome attack.

Bob's Sports hung in to take a 17-13 win from Mel Barriage in their Peewee hook up.

Steve Taylor went all the way to take the win. Chris Morton singled three times for the winners, Lyle Kelleher hit a triple in his teams losing cause.

Dick Ellis squeaked by H&M Variety 12-10 on the hitting talents of Scott Woodall, with two singles and a double. The winning hurler was Al Thompkins. He struck out eight batters.

The loss was absorbed by Aileen Barr.

Jane Bailey had a double and two singles for the winners. Cathy Smith and Darlene Bedore both singled twice.

AGREE TO TERMS

BOSTON (AP — Four draft choices have agreed to terms with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, the club said Thursday. They were third selection Rick Adduono, a centre from St. Catharines Black Hawks, who led the Ontario Hockey Association in scoring two seasons ago; fourth pick Denis Daigle, a left winger from Montreal Juniors; fifth choice Stan Jonathan, a left winger from Peterborough Petes, and seventh pick Gary Carr, a goaltender from Toronto Marlboros.

Jack Nicklaus – First Round 70

PGA Frontrunners Riding in Back Seat

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Jack Nicklaus shot a first-round 70 in the Professional Golfers' Association championship and his reaction was predictable when he was told he was trailing such names as Benson, Wampler and Dougherty.

"Who?" Jack asked. "I know Wampler, but the others—how do you spell that last name?"

Nicklaus' consternation was generally shared as the pros' big family championship—one of the game's Big Four—moved into the second round behind a phalanx of the most implausible pace-setters imaginable.

Oldsters and rookies, the in firm and the insecure, the downtrodden and the down-and-out are on top, kicking divots in the faces of golf's aristrocrats—Nicklaus, Tom Weiskopf, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player.

Hayes shot 67, three under par over the back breaking, 7,-180-yard Firestone course. "It's too soon to get excited about leading this tournament," he said nervously.

Tied for second with 68 were Bob Benson, 35, a club pro who operates a couple of bowling alleys on the side, and Larry Hinson, a gaunt young man with a withered left arm whose fortunes of late have been so depressing he was considering a different career.

"It's been awful the last couple of years," Hinson, a seven-year tour player, said. "I've been tempted to look for something else to do."

Only four other players managed to break par. They included Fred Wampler, 51, who hasn't played the tour in 15 years, and Billy Casper, 44, a two-time Open champion who has been devoting more time to his 7,000 fruit trees in Utah than to golf.

Nicklaus was tied at 70 with eight others, among them Weiskopf and British Open champion Tom Watson. The others were [illegible], Ray Floyd, Art Wall, Bruce Devlin, Jim Dent and Mike Morley.

Player, seeking his third PGA crown, shot 72. Trevino and Palmer had 73s. Johnny Miller, pro golf's Player of the Year in 1974, skied to a 78 and was so disgruntled that he hinted he might take the next plane home to San Francisco.

Nicklaus found traps on two of the last four holes—15 and 18—and bogeyed them.

Weiskopf birdied the last three holes, wedging a shot to within two feet of the cup on 16, sinking a 16-footer on 17 and slashing a four-iron out of a fairway bunker to within a foot on the closing hole.

"It looked like I was going out of the tournament, but I got right back in it," Weiskopf said. "It's that kind of course. Don't get discouraged. Anything can happen."

Hayes produced the most brilliant round. After bogeying the par five second, he played the next 16 holes almost flawlessly with birdies at the third, seventh, eighth and 10th. He sank two putts of 30 feet.

Out of Oklahoma State and a former state amateur champion, he turned pro while serving a two-year army hitch in Fort Jackson, S.C.

Memories Linger

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Nine years and 14 days after his death in a fiery plane crash, the legend of Tony Lema lives on.

Around the locker rooms and in the gay receptions of another PGA championship at Firestone, those who remember pause to reflect on the tragedy that erased one of the great golf talents.

"He was the best—if he had lived he would have overshadowed everybody, even Jack Nicklaus," said Lee Lynch, a white-thatched, wrinkled caddie of 68, Lema's favorite bag-toter.

"I was the last one to see him alive," said Bill Kelly, veteran locker room attendant at the Firestone Country Club. "Everybody else was gone. Tony came back to say 'goodbye.'

Having putted out in the 1966 PGA tournament, Tony and his wife, Betty, rushed to catch a small charter plane for Chicago where he had a Monday date to compete in a pro-am.

The date was July 24, 1966.

Within a couple of hours, the small plane, apparently out of fuel, had crashed south of Chicago. Ironically, the wreckage was strewn over a golf course. All occupants were killed.

Lema was 32, he had won the British Open and four othr tournaments. In 1965, he had earned $101,800 to finish second to Nicklaus in the tour's money race.

Producer Rejects Hollywood Trappings

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — From the outside it looks like a skid-road rooming house, but the two-storey brown brick building in a beachside slum, stylishly done up inside, is a hotbed of Hollywood talent.

The owner of the house is 35-year-old Tony Bill, a one-time aspiring actor who made himself a millionaire by producing one of the biggest money-making films in Hollywood history, The Sting.

The Sting made Bill an overnight hit with Hollywood studios. The only trouble was that he didn't enjoy the studios, the way they work and their endless personality intrigues.

So he bought himself the rundown rooming house in one of the few remaining remnants of the hippie culture in California—Venice Beach.

Other Hollywood writers and artists who thought about studios the way he did joined him there. Bill let offices to some of them, gave free office space to those who were hard up and even let out a couple of rooms for living accommodation.

Among his "roomers" are Nicholas Meyer, who wrote the best-selling novel The Seven Per Cent Solution and the screenplay for this bizarre drama about Sherlock Holmes; Ula Grosbard, director of both the stageplay and film of The Subject Was Roses and Terry Malick, producer and writer of the critically-praised movie Badlands.

"It's really very difficult making movies—it's not very pleasant," says Bill, who admits he is sometimes tempted to retire on the fortune he has made from The Sting.

The difficulties he dislikes are the human-created ones.

"Dealing with people's egos is never pleasant. It's rewarding to overcome technical or production problems but I don't get any kick out of being a referee."

The personality in-fighting was what made him move to the beach.

Bill originally came to Hollywood to look for acting work after graduating in English and arts at Notre Dame University.

Through introductions he had to Hollywood producers, he landed a role as Frank Sinatra's younger brother in Come Blow Your Horn, based on his more than passing resemblance to the young Sinatra.

He landed other roles but finally decided to switch from acting to production.

His beginnings as a producer were inauspicious. His first production, Deadhead Miles, was so much disliked by the head of Paramount studio that it was never released.

But his third, The Sting, made box-office history.

Bill's latest production, Hearts of the West, a comedy about a Midwestern farm boy who becomes a cowboy in B movies in pre-war Hollywood, resulted from a chance meeting with a young script writer in a Hollywood bar.

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Six plays by Shakespeare, a comedy by Congreve, a drama by Chekhov, an adaption of a recent Canadian novel and a musical are planned for the 1976 Stratford Festival, Robin Phillips, festival artistic director, announced Thursday.

Four of the Shakespeare works are planned for the Festival Theatre's thrust stage: Romeo and Juliet, Antony and Cleopatra, A Midsummer Night's Dream and a revival of this year's critically-acclaimed Measure for Measure. Playing in repertory with them at the theatre will be Congreve's 17th century comedy, The Way of The World.

On the Avon stage, the festival will present Hamlet and The Tempest by Shakespeare; Chekhov's Three Sisters; the premiere production of a play by Larry Fineberg based on Constance Beresford-Howe's The Book of Eve, commissioned especially for the festival; and a new musical.

Mr. Phillips said this marks Stratford's first attempt to cover the full spectrum of Shakespeare's works in one season, ranging from such early plays as Romeo and Juliet through the comedies and later tragedies.

Casting for the plays and further details of the production will be announced at a later date.

CAROLINA BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Tourist interests of Carolina Beach will ask Universal Studios, producer of the movie Jaws, to run before each showing a streamer across the screen stressing that it is fictional.

That was the outcome of a poorly-attended meeting to assess what might be done to ease the impact on resort business of the movie which tells about a [illegible] shark with a taste for humans.

A restaurant owner who called the meeting said business at Carolina Beach was off 10 to 20 per cent last month, when Jaws opened in North Carolina and South Carolina. "That's the only factor that makes this year different from any other year," he said.

TORONTO (CP) — Spring Thaw, the annual Toronto revue that ran from 1948 to 1971, will be revived next spring at the Queen Elizabeth Theatre in the Canadian National Exhibition (CNE), it was announced Wednesday.

Bob Johnson, who started with the show as an usher in 1948 and was its producer from 1966 to 1969, said in an interview he will co-produce the new revue with actress Tedde Moore, granddaughter of the show's founder, Dora Mavor Moore.

This is the first time the Queen Elizabeth building has been rented for a commercial theatrical venture, he said. It seats 1,316—large by revue standards—and is complete with two built-in turntables, the only ones in Canada.

Mr. Johnson said he and Miss Moore are seeking satirical material for the show from newcomers as well as such veterans as Pierre Berton and Don Harron.

LONDON (AP) — U.S. singer and composer Harry Nilsson, 34, who wrote the music for the film Midnight Cowboy, was fined one British pound, 50 pence (3.30) Thursday after pleading guilty to "behaving indecently while drunk" in London's downtown Belgravia district of the West End.

Nilsson's lawyer said the singer had health trouble recently and was on "pretty hefty doses" of tranquilizers. He had some alcohol and "completely under-estimated the combined effect of the two."

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Specialists at Illinois Research Hospital have diagnosed the illness of actor Pat O'Brien, 75, as severe exhaustion.

Mr. O'Brien was taken to hospital July 24 after collapsing just before he was due to go on stage here in the play Skip and Go Naked.

Doctors said his condition is stable.

Jewell, 69, had been in hospital since Friday with a chronic lung ailment. He suffered a heart attack.

Kink May Cause Stomach Noises

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes noise in my stomach? All of a sudden my stomach makes terrible rumbling noises. Nothing seems to stop it, and it is driving me crazy. My doctor has no idea, and he wants me to get x-rays.

I hate to go to that expense for such a stupid reason. It feels like I'm full of liquid. I haven't changed my eating habits recently, and I really don't know how to cope with this. It is embarrassing and driving me up a wall.—Mrs. S.

The stomach lining secretes gastric juices, and this along with the muscular waves that grind ingested food creates a liquid-like content called "chyme." The waves occur at a rate of about three a minute, thus forcing the chyme through an opening into the duodenum.

Any irregularity in this process, an obstructed opening, for example, can result in abnormal passage of the chyme. And if air is in the stomach, the result can be the audible rumble. Hyperactivity of the stomach can be a factor.

Barium x-rays will show the progress of the chyme and will reveal such things as an abnormally small opening. Often a kink in the digestive tract will cause this also. Sometimes, in nervous persons, there can be reverse waves which disturb normal stomach rhythm and produce stomach noises.

The reason your doctor wants the x-rays is because, as you say, "he has no idea" what's causing this, and he wants to find out. Your problem isn't stupid, and by your own admissions it bothers you considerably.

An overactive stomach, if that is your problem, can be tamed by a mild sedation. Occasional rumblings have little significance, but continuous occurrence, as in your case, should receive attention.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Several years ago we heard about good results from breathing a high-pressure high-oxygen atmosphere in cases of senile memory loss. This was supposed to be quite effective in advanced cases.

Is this no longer recommended?—S. B.

The procedure is called "hyperbaric oxygen therapy," and it did enjoy a flurry of enthusiasm about 10 years ago.

But enthusiasm has waned somewhat since the patients who used it did not hold their gains when they returned to ordinary breathing conditions.

Hyperbaric oxygen has some advantages, especially in treating burns and certain infections in which germs thrive in an oxygen-poor medium (anaerobic infections).

The memory loss in senile patients is often due to poor circulation in the brain arteries. They are narrowed and the oxygen essential in brain tissue health does not get to the diseased parts, nor are sufficient nutrient materials delivered and waste removed. Reports on the oxygen therapy indicated better results in mild or early cases.

There are not many hyperbaric oxygen chambers around. The therapy involves elaborate procedures and skilled personnel. The patient and attendants must be carefully decompressed on leaving the chamber. The time in the chamber required is from one to five hours at a cost of $50 an hour. Results, as I said, are uneven, and reports I've seen are more unfavorable than favorable.

If sustained improvement could somehow be achieved, then of course the therapy would be more attractive and more practicable.

It is rather difficult to beat the ravages of time and aging.

FOR WOMEN ONLY

TORONTO (CP) — Harborfront '75, the urban playground centre run by the federal government on the shores of Lake Ontario here, staged a women's sailing regatta recently. Two-women crews from various yacht and sailing clubs in the Toronto area were aboard the 20 Albacores in the race, which was halted because of a storm warning.

Sometimes the defenders set up a squeeze for declarer by cashing their tricks right off the bat. Thus, West was mighty proud of his spade opening, when he cashed four spades as a starter. He was less proud when South ran off the last nine by squeezing East in the red suits.

It wasn't a difficult squeeze. All South had to do to make sure of his contract was to win trick five with his ace of hearts, cash dummy's ace of diamonds. (The Vienna coup) and then run off his clubs.

South's last two cards were the queen of diamonds and the eight of hearts. North held king and a small heart and East couldn't guard hearts and hang on to the king of diamonds.

Note that South knew where the king of diamonds was located. East needed it for his opening heart bid. Also note that if declarer did not cash dummy's ace of diamonds before running clubs the squeeze would not have worked.

Ask the Jacobys

An old timer from Florida wants to know how Hal Sims and Ely Culbertson, the first great contract players, would stack up against the modern experts.

The answer is that bidding and playing as they did 45 years ago they would be outclassed, but if they were around today and in the prime they would be right at the top as they were then.

Contract is only 50 years old and the game is improving all the time.

Peterborough Citizen Space Age Pioneer

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Allan E. Williams watched the Apollo-Soyuz space mission with more than ordinary satisfaction. The engineer, now retired, was one of the pioneers in American rocket technology which made the joint Soviet-United States venture possible.

Mr. Williams worked on the Redstone rocket project, the fore-runner of today's manned rockets and bomb-carrying intercontinental missiles.

He had been a professor of mechanical engineering at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute at Ruston, La., in 1952 when he was asked by the Thiokol Chemical Corp. to take over the Redstone project which was then in trouble.

He was sent to the Redstone arsenal at White Sands, N.M., where he worked with German rocket scientists who were brought to the U.S. along with missiles that Germany had used to terrorize England in the Second World War.

"When I took the job over, it was in serious trouble, everyone told me it would not be successful but we managed to overcome the problems and scheduled flight tests at Cape Canaveral with four test shots of non-guided rockets."

Mr. Williams remembers his first exposure to the space vehicle launching centre as a great contrast to the way space shots now are handled.

"Things were so unsophisticated. Cape Canaveral was a town of just about 500 people. We brought our test rockets through the own hidden under covers. The project was supposed to be secret, but we had to remove the stop lights in the town to let the rockets pass through. We did this with just about everyone in town standing around watching," he recalled.

The facilities in 1952 included only four concrete pads about 20 yards square and one block house for observers.

"We sent planes out over the ocean to warn people to get away from the area, we didn't know where the rocket would go, but we thought it might have a range of 75 nautical miles," he said.

"We set out trace planes to follow the first shot. The rocket had dye-markers on it to indicate its impact area in the ocean. The plane couldn't find it at first but 50 miles out in he ocean he picked up the dye-markers.

While working on the Redstone project, the idea of space travel seemed a long time away for Mr. Williams, but others like the German expert, Werner von Braun, were actively thinking about space.

Later in his engineering career Mr. Williams developed the retro-rockets that are used as safety devices on all manned missions. They were used on the first missions and still are being used on the Apollo flight series to slow down re-entry into the earth's atmosphere.

Mr. Williams retired in 1973 and lives in Peterborough part of the year with his wife who is from this area. The rest of the year they live in Florida.

Leyland Finds Ways To Save Oil

LONGBRIDGE, England (CP) — An experimental "thermal wheel" is helping Britain's biggest car manufacturer to reduce factory-heating bills.

The unit—which recycles heat—has been undergoing trials as part of an energy conservation program which has already cut the British Leyland Motor Corp. annual power and heating costs by $5,00,000.

The 12-foot diameter thermal wheel is a heat exchanger. It revolves slowly, picking up heat from a car paint-oven, then using it to warm purified air in a nearby work area.

The oven's 775-degree heat had previously been vented outside the Austin car factory in this suburb of Birmingham at the rate of 10,500,000 British Thermal Units an hour—enough to heat 100 average-sized houses.

Another warm-air recycling system, of a different design, is being tested at British Leyland's Jaguar car factory in Coventry.

The blitz to cut the corporation's annual $50,000,000 energy bill is in full swing at all 60 of its United Kingdom plants.

To date, oil consumption is down by 13 per cent and use of electrical power has been cut by 12 per cent.

Among measures that have been taken:

—Tighter control and monitoring of fuel oil use.

—Switching off of all motorized equipment when not in use.

—Stepped-up maintenance of boilers and heating equipment. Critical checks of plant and equipment insulation.

—Splitting of electrical circuits to enable more selective use of lighting.

MUSIC TO PAY BY

READING, England (CP) — The accounts department in the new council offices will pipe out soothing songs when ratepayers turn up to settle their bills. Staff have suggested that numbers such as Hey, Big Spender and Money is the Root of All Evil would cushion the blow of paying up.

Trudeau Played Role

Foreign Car Buyers Get Rebate

OTTAWA (CP) Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie said Friday he is pleased that Ontario has extended its sales tax rebate on automobile purchases to include foreign automobiles.

Mr. Gillespie said the original decision by Ontario to rebate the five-per-cent sales tax on only North American cars "was taken rather hastily and without any real consideration of the full implications."

Both Japan and the European Economic Community (EEC) had protested the rebate program—instituted July 7 to run until Dec. 31—saying it violated International trading rules under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

Prime Minister Trudeau and other federal ministers, including Mr. Gillespie, agreed and asked Ontario to reconsider. Trade department officials were concerned that the foreign nations might retaliate against Canada.

Mr. Gillespie said in an interview that these nations "will be pleased to see that an error has been corrected."

Ontario Premier William Davis announced earlier in the day that the rebates would be extended to include foreign cars retroactive to July 7. It applies to cars with engines less than 460 cubic inches in size.

Mr. Davis said recent increases in car sales had justified the program's intention to stimulate the Ontario auto industry. The plan is expected to increase new car sales in Ontario by 15,000 by the end of the year.

However, the premier said the extension had been made to ease the hardship on dealers of foreign cars and in response to a letter from Mr. Trudeau expressing concern about the effects on GATT.

The minister declined comment on the over-all value of the rebate program, but noted that 80-per-cent of the cars produced in Canada are exported to the United Stats.

"It's certainly hard for me to see that the Canadian industry is going to be the beneficiary."

A spokesman for the West German embassy in Ottawa expressed satisfaction at the inclusion of foreign cars in the rebate program and said "it is a good solution in terms of the friendly relations that have always existed between our two countries."

A spokesman for the Canada-Japan Trade Council also welcomed the move, saying: "In the end, all concerned will be happy."

Davis Picking Sept. 18

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis is poised to call a provincial election for Sept. 18, The Canadian Press learned Friday.

Sources close to the premier said Mr. Davis would interrupt a Northern Ontario tour to announce the election Monday.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon and Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic party, are ready for an immediate election call. Both leaders have their parties on a full election footing.

A June Gallup Poll commissioned by the Toronto Star showed the Liberals with 39 per cent in popular support compared with the Progressive Conservatives' 36 and the New Democrats' 25.

But that poll was taken before the federal government's June budget, which imposed a 10-per-cent tax on gasoline. Shortly after, Mr. Davis initiated a freeze on gasoline and oil prices, thus forestalling a further increase in gas and oil prices.

North Bay Fugitive Still Eludes Manhunt

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — The massive search for suspected murderer Donald Kelly entered its second week today as police pursue leads on the whereabouts of the 36-year-old North Bay native who escaped from jail last Saturday.

A provincial police spokesman said late Friday that residents of this 126-square-mile city continue to telephone police with leads on the heavily-armed escaper's trail.

"We've had a lot of bum steers," the spokesman said. "But someone sooner or later will give the right lead if he stays in the area."

And police believe Kelly is still in the area.

The latest lead Friday had tracking dogs and a helicopter searching for seven hours in an area on the northwest fringes of the city after a man fitting Kelly's description was sighted outside a cabin.

Police said that when a resident shouted at the man, he ran into the cabin.

The cabin was surrounded by ground search teams, but police later began an intense search of the surrounding woodland.

Insp. W. C. Craig of the provincial police told a news conference Thursday that a clue to Kelly's whereabouts might turn up this weekend when cottagers check their premises.

Typhoid Case Here

An eight-year-old Belleville girl has been placed in an isolation room at Belleville General Hospital while she undergoes antibiotics treatment for typhoid.

Officials would not disclose the girl's indentity but said she is "improving."

The girl, along with her parents, were among 200 persons who attended the Light and Life Methodist Camp recently, 20 miles north east of Kingston.

Reports show 16 of the 200 have been admitted to hospital for treatment of the disease. Neither of the girl's parents contracted the disease. She is believed to be the only case to appear in Belleville.

Acting Kingston Health officer Dr. Vera Soudek said the first case appeared last Wednesday in Michigan affecting persons who had visited the camp. The Kingston department is screening other families who also attended the camp.

The camp has been inspected but it already has closed for the summer, the health spokesman said. Kingston residents have been advised to boil well water.

Local Health officer Dr. C.R. Lunk said he was notified of the Belleville case Friday. "Belleville's water is safe. There's no question of it," he said.

Century Place to Act as Giant Mirror

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Before the ribbon is cut officially opening Century Place, more than 250,000 bricks will be laid and a final polish will be given to a 7,000-square-foot mirror.

George Leverton, project coordinator representing Cornerstone Builders Ltd., described some of the shopping list of construction materials that will be required to build the five-floor structure during an interview Friday.

Construction site work force has not yet peaked though it now is numbering more than 50 men — all performing a variety of chores and keeping the job on schedule.

By October the builders believe the structure will be "closed in" from the weather, drastically swelling the work force as a full contingent of plumber, electricians and variety of sub-tradesmen come onto the job to do the building's interior.

"They'll be coming in swarms by Oct. 1," said Mr. Leverton.

"By the time we have finished the pouring, we will have used about 10,000 tons of concrete — re-inforced by 300 tons of metal rod."

Once the floors are poured the entire structure will be covered corner to corner, top to bottom with scaffolding in preparation for masons to begin brick laying. Some masons will begin laying ground floor, block and brick walls as early as Monday.

The crowning touch of the $5 million project will be the building's front wall — a semi-circular face rising 87 feet directed at the centre of the intersection of Bridge and Front Streets.

Consisting completely of reflective glass, "the wall will be just like a big mirror catching the color of the sky and reflecting anything that passes before it," said Mr. Leverton.

While it has no major importance as an architectural effect, the reflective glass has a practical side. "It prevents sunlight from heating up the building and over-taxing the air conditioning," said the project co-ordinator.

The two ground floors — dedicated to retail space — will have standard glass to allow shopper browsing. The top three floors will be occupied by offices.

Project completion is anticipated next July.

Meat Market Comes Down Next Week

White's Meat Market — a long-established downtown business — will fall to the wrecker's hammer making way for Century Place parking, a project spokesman said Friday.

Brian Holmes of Cornstone Builders Ltd. said workers have already cleaned out much of the shop's interior and structural demolition will begin Monday.

The building should be completely down by the middle of the week, said Mr. Holms. Cornerstone is supervising the construction of Century Place.

Mr. Holmes said the land occupied by the meat market is shown in Century Place plans as a parking area and that no changes have been made to this concept.

The $5 million Century Place project — a combination of commercial and office facilities — is proceeding on schedule and should be complete this time next year, builders says.

Junta Threatened

Another Crisis Hits Portugal

LISBON (AP) — Members of key military units endorsed a document drawn up by dissident moderate officers today in a move that threatened to capsize Communist-backed Premier Vasco Goncalves' day-old government and split apart the ruling three-general junta.

President Francisco da Costa Gomes and internal security chief Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho, members of the junta with Goncalves, were reported wavering in favor of the moderates.

Military units said the document was circulating freely in all three branches of the armed forces and gathering support in favor of the moderate officers.

Among units reported against Goncalves were the Amadora commando unit outside Lisbon, the armored unit a Santarem, a cavalry unit and an armored regiment at Caldas da Rainha.

The entire centre military region approved the document. A transport unit voted 29 to 0 in favor. An anti-aircraft unit at Cascais was 70 per cent in favor and an infantry unit in Mafra backed the moderates by 90 per cent.

Refugees from war-torn Angola also added their demands for jobs to expressions of discontent facing Portugal's new Communist-backed government.

Nearly 1,000 white refugees from the Portuguese colony marched in Lisbon on Friday chanting: "We want work, not hunger," and "We were turned out of our homes and don't have anything to eat."

The marchers were among tens of thousands of white settlers who have fled from fighting among three black liberation movements in Angola, which is to become independent Nov. 11.

Earier Friday, Premier Vasco Goncalves formed a new cabinet that he hoped would appease the opposition and quell Portugal's unrest and economic decline.

Introducing the new ministers, Goncalves said: "In the fight against the neo-Fascist phenomenon that lately has been multiplying in our country, severity and repression will be used."

But there was little hope that the new government could end anti-Communist rioting that erupted across Portugal in the last week, taking at least four lives and leaving Communist party offices in many cities and towns a shambles.

The new government included both military men and civilians, but it did not include members from the two biggest political parties—the Socialists and Popular Democats. The parties precipitated a political crisis by walking out of the government last month to protest Goncalves' Communist-line policies.

Fire Sweeps North

MANITOUWADGE, Ont. (CP) — A forest fire which has swept over about 2,000 acres of wooded land since late Wednesday is being contained 200 yards from this community of 4,000, 250 miles east of Thunder Bay.

But a second and separate fire broke out Friday, spreading over an 1,100-acre area 13 miles southwest of the town on both sides of Highway 614.

A provincial police spokesman said police are escorting vehicles through a ½-mile section of the highway because of immediate danger to travellers.

The spokesman said the cause of the second fire has not been determined, but that it broke out near a rail line.

About 300 men from the Ontario ministry of natural resources—assisted by local firemen, employees of Noranda Mines and Ontario Pulp and Paper and town residents—were fighting the two fires with the help of two helicopters and three water-bombing planes.

Late Thursday, the fire caused a mine in the town to be closed when smoke billowed down the shaft. It also forced a temporary evacuation of residents nearest the fire line after flames came within yards of oil storage tanks.

Bill Shure, manager of the Ontario Pulp and Paper mill, said late Friday that flames were threatening the plant's railroad siding.

He said employees of the mill have been holding the fire for two days and "we've been very lucky so far."

Mr. Shure said the mill lost about 5,000 cords of raw cut wood Thursday, when the fire swept through the company's timber area.

"The fire is by no means under control," he said. "Just say that we are containing it at present.

Tourist Area Tinderbox

TORONTO CP — Cottagers, campers and tourists are urged to be careful with campfires and cigarettes this weekend as unusually dry weather continues in southern Ontario vacation areas, the natural resources ministry said Friday. Forest fire hazard continues extreme in the Parry Sound area north to the French River, and high in the Muskokas, Haliburton, Algonquin, Kawarthas and eastern regions. Five small fires are under control in the Parry Sound area and there are two fires in the Algonquin region, two in Bancroft, seven in Tweed and two in Lanark.

Peach of a Market

For Judy Fuzzen, peaches are big business — and Belleville is good for business. She and her husband Dan were out of bed and on the Highway at 3 a.m. today to make the trip from St. Catharines to Belleville's market square. "It's a good market . . one of the best," said Mr. Fuzzen. The peaches were grown on his father's 33-acre farm.

401 Crash Sends One To Hospital

BRIGHTON — A 76-year-old Willowdale man is in Toronto General Hospital today after being transferred from Cobourg Hospital following a single-car collision on Highway 401, four miles west of here Friday.

Provincial police say Fred Litchfield of Willowdale was taken to Cobourg where he was diagnosed as having serious chest and head injuries. He was transferred to Toronto shortly after his admittance to Cobourg.

Police say the Litchfield vehicle was eastbound when its wheels dropped off the pavement. The car then veered across the highway, rolled over in the median, and came up upright in the westbound lanes of Highway 401. Damage was estimated at $2,000.

Paintfest Popular

MERRICKVILLE, ONT. (CP) — Residents of this small town about 50 miles south of Ottawa got to paint the town red—and white, green, black and brown—this summer.

It was all part of a "paint fest" sponsored by the Merrickville Tourist Association in late July to spruce up the 180-year-old town on the Rideau River.

"We are going to have almost a spanking new town," said Jim Milne, one of the organizers of the paint-in.

ontributionCs for th e 350 worth of paint came from building owners, town council and private citizens.

"It's very much a community undertaking," he explained.

Nearly half the 50-odd people who made up the volunteer work force were children, some of whom got almost as much paint on themselves as on the buildings.

Some, like two-year-old Laurin Beazley, had to paint objects close to the ground, but others were able to help adults with doors and windows.

Education Beat

New Act Has One Drawback

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

During the introduction of Bill 100, the legislation which now governs teacher-board negotiations and gives teachers the right to strike, many opposition groups protested the section concerning the right of principals and vice-principals to strike.

Their efforts were futile and perhaps could have been better directed at the section that deals with extra-curricular activities. The legislation defines a strike as complete or partial withdrawal of services and this includes extra-curricular activities, such as clubs, coaching and other after-school events.

This seems to be a hard line for the ministry of education to take against teachers considering that for years the implementations of activities has been on a purely voluntary basis and not part of the contractual arrangement between the individual teacher and the board.

A spokesman from the ministry of education in Kingston said recently that he doubted whether the legislation would apply to one teacher deciding to drop an extra-curricular activity. He said he doubted whether this could be interpreted as an act of withdrawal.

However, he did say that if an entire staff at a school decided to curb or drop all after-school clubs this would be interpreted as an act of withdrawal and would be illegal.

This part of the new act is a slap in the face to many teachers in Hastings County who have given up hundreds of hours of their own time for the benefit of students.

The new act will make teachers hesitant to take on club activities or to do anything beyond what their contract calls for in fear of triggering a strike action. In many cases some teachers decide to drop an activity in order to pick up another one.

Would this be interpreted as an illegal act? It's indeed unfortunate that those opposing the legislation couldn't bring enough pressure on the government to change this section.

Fearful Britain Awaits Assault from Rabies

LONDON (CP) — Like a castle under siege, Britain is bracing itself against the approaching menace of rabies.

The disease, with its grisly symptoms of muscle spasms and painful death, has been creeping across Europe toward the English Channel at the rate of about 20 miles a year since an outbreak in Poland in the 1930s.

By 1980 it might reach the French ports.

But two men died of the disease here in July.

Although both caught rabies abroad, their deaths have heightened public and official fears of an epidemic that might ravage wildlife and pets in these animal-loving isles.

Britain long ago raised strict defences, with ironclad requirements for quarantine of every animal brought into the country from abroad.

Dogs, cats and all other mammals vulnerable to rabies must be kept in isolation for six months after arrival.

Penalties for violating the rules are harsh, including a maximum one-year jail sentence and unlimited fines.

And enforcement is rigid.

Actress Zsa Zsa Gabor once tried to smuggle her Chihuahua through customs snuggled somewhere between her breasts and her furs. The animal was found.

Last year, the family of the Argentinian ambassador tried to bring a dog into the country on their diplomatic passports. Again, the answer was a polite, firm no.

In recent months, officials at airports and seacoasts have been increasingly vigilant, and courts have been levying ever-higher fines against smugglers who have been caught.

Picton Boater Critical Of Council Decision

PICTON — Commodore of the Prince Edward Cruising Club, Harry Smith, says town council has based its rejection of the club's proposal to lease water lots for six additional moorings in Picton Harbor on "misinformation."

Council voiced opposition to the request this week after hearing a delegation from Prince Edward Yacht Club headed by Commodore Kenzie MacDonald.

Mr. MacDonald, who presented a petition signed by 40 persons objecting to the plan, said "Such a plan viewed in the scale of Picton Harbor presents a hazard to navigation in the harbor."

"To begin the piece-meal division of the harbor by granting water lot leases to private commercial groups will seriously impede the future organized development of one of Ontario's finest natural small harbors," he said during the delegation's presentation to council.

Mr. Smith in a telephone interview Thursday, stressed his plans for additional moorings would be "in no way a navigation hazard."

"Our surveyor made certain we would not interfere with the channel," he emphasized.

The cruising club's commodore noted he is not proposing to build docks. He is seeking permission for mooring buoys that would extend about 100 feet.

He objected to the term "absentee landlord" used by Prince Edward Yacht Club Commodore Kenzie MacDonald in describing him at council this week.

Mr. Smith said he is the owner of the Claremount Apartments on Bridge Street in Picton and does spend time in this community.

He has been a member of the Prince Edward Yacht Club for almost ten years and has actively promoted its junior sailing programs.

Mr. Smith, who is chairman of the seamanship sailing course across Canada for the Canadian Power Squadron, observed he would make no proposal that might lead to a navigation hazard in Picton Harbor.

"I feel the people of Picton should be aware of what the Prince Edward Cruising Club is," he commented.

He added that the group has 120 members from Canada and the United States and each day during the summer more than 20 couples visit Picton stores from his dock.

"They shop here. I sell them nothing for I am in the general insurance business. I am not running a marina," he said.

Mr. Smith said he is principly concerned with providing facilities for out-of-town boaters who want to enjoy Picton.

Forum to Discuss New LIP Program

A public forum will be held Monday at 8 p.m. at Centennial Secondary School here to discuss all aspects of the Local Initiatives Program (LIP) in the Quinte area, the federal department of manpower and immigration announced Friday.

Corinne Nemy, an information services officer with the departments in Toronto, said the panelists will include Barbara Heiler, LIP officer for the Belleville area, James Fraser, supervisor of operations at the Canada Manpower Centre in Belleville and an un-named sub-regional supervisor from Toronto.

The moderator will be Pamela Allan of Cablevue Channel 4 in Belleville.

Ms. Nemy said anyone interested in LIP is urged to attend and questions from the audience will be welcome.

She explained the manpower department is attempting to publicize the 1975-76 LIP program due to budget increases announced earlier this year.

"We want to make sure we can get a good number of applications and a good quality of applications," she commented.

Missing Boat Found

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville are investigating the theft of a 14-foot Crestliner fibreglass boat with a 40-horsepower Johnson motor valued at $800 from the shoreline in front of Willow Cabins at RR2, Trenton late Friday.

A police spokesman said today details are still sketchy but apparently the owner, whose name is unavailable, found the boat at an undetermined location early today.

He said the boat was apparently undamaged but was minus the oars, a life jacket and a small, gold-colored knife. The initial report indicated an unknown person climbed into the boat, started the motor, and drove off.

Fewer Dairy Cattle, But Production Consultant

The number of milking cows in Canada has dropped by about 900,000 since 1960, but milk production has remained about the same.

Charles Hickman, a geneticist with Agriculture Canada's Animal Research Institute here, holds this as proof of the success of a program of genetic improvement for dairy cattle which started about 15 years ago.

"We had forecast an increase of one per cent in milk production per year, and that is what we have attained," the researcher says.

Because of the program, Canada produces the same amount of milk with fewer cows, each giving more milk than their predecessors. There now are about two million milking cows in the country, half of which are serviced by artificial insemination (AI).

Total annual milk production has stayed at about 17 billion pounds — enough to satisfy domestic dairy demands.

Genetic improvement comes from combining AI with careful selection of bulls. The goal is to produce offspring with the most desirable dairy traits.

Quality and quantity of milk are prime considerations although ease of conception and calving are also important factors.

The program starts with selection of a test group of potentially superior young bulls.

Semen from the bulls is used in AI in many dairy herds, and records are then kept of performance of female offspring.

"We estimate that for every 2,000 conceptions per bull, we get about 200 daughters with the present level of herd recording," says Dr. Hickman. "Close to half the offspring are bull calves. Some of the females are born in non-recorded herds, some are infertile, die shortly after birth, or are exported."

Results of the offsprings' performance are used to decide which of the test bulls are worth keeping. The best continue work at the AI station, while the others are slaughtered.

"This way, in a continuing program, the milk-producing ability of our dairy cattle has improved," Dr. Hickman says. "We get improvement with each generation."

The geneticist estimates that production of milk per cow has increased an average of 300 pounds per year in recorded herds.

"Of this, 40 per cent is because of genetic improvement. The balance is by better management, using fewer but larger herds."

He says the cow population of Canada is likely to continue decreasing. Milk production will remain the same.

"The important factor is that if we should ever want to boost milk production for either ourselves or for aid to needy nations, we can do it. We can simply increase the number of dairy cows."

Most Farm Mishaps Involve Young Adults

The majority of farm accidents involve teen-agers and young adults under 30 years of age, the Farm Safety Association of Ontario reports.

Preliminary data for 1974 reveal that of the 471 reported accidents in Ontario's tobacco industry, 283, or about 60 per cent, occurred in the 10 to 30 year-old age group. The figures show that in the general farming sector, 224 of 491 mishaps — about 45 per cent — took place in this age group.

J.K. Weeden, agricultural engineer with the Ontario ministry of agriculture and food, says one reason for the high incidence of accidents involving the young is that the shortage of farm labor in some areas has resulted in many people taking part in farm work without previous knowledge or experience of farming, such as younger brothers or "city cousins."

"The problem is that young people are not prepared for farm machinery." It's bigger and more complicated than ever before, and the kids simply don't know how to operate it," Mr. Weeden says.

One of the ways to reduce youthful accident statistics is through training. He lists a few pointers for both farmers and newcomers to the farm.

Tractors are more a part of farm accidents than any other piece of equipment. A great many of these accidents are caused by faulty or improper shielding of the power takeoff. Mr. Weeden advises farmers to ensure that shields or guards are in place and properly lubricated.

Before any repairs or adjustments to equipment are made, make absolutely sure the PTO has been shut off. If, for example, the baler has become clogged, do not attempt to clear it without first disengaging the power takeoff. This rule extends to all other machinery as well — turn it off before making adjustments or repairs.

High tractor speeds lead to serious accidents in the form of side roll-overs. Speed induced accidents are a particular problem with the under-20 year-olds. Farmers should emphasize that tractors must be driven at low speeds.

Mr. Weeden advises farmers to follow the example of other industries and provide 15-minute coffee breaks in the morning and afternoon. "It's a known fact that accidents are often caused by fatigue and boredom," he says.

Farm workers should be instructed to wear personal safety equipment. Hard hats, gloves and steel-toed boots reduce the risk of serious injury. The wearing of loose-fitting clothing around operating machinery should be discouraged.

"Training is just a matter of taking the time to show a person how to operate a piece of equipment," Mr. Weeden emphasizes. "And it will pay off in the long run by helping to reduce physical injury and economic loss."

Apathy Kills Creative Drive

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — What this town needs is a long weeknd highlighted by things to do.

In Picton the Civic Holiday came and went with only a sports night at the Legion Hall offered for community entertainment. It was a repetition of the uninspired activities staged to celebrate Dominion Day this summer.

The town's "old-timers" can recall band concerts in the park, picnics and parades during those lazy, hazy days of summer but for today's youth there are no such memories in the making.

Community apathy seems to stifle imaginative uses for existing recreational facilities. There are no band concerts in any of Picton's parks although the few band performances held here have drawn capacity crowds.

The Prince Edward County museum is a centre enjoyed primarily by tourists. On holiday weekends no special events are planned to attract local residents.

The Ameliasburg Township museum last weekend took the lead with an oldfashioned Activities Day and this weekend Mariners' Park Museum will held its perennially popular Mariners' Service. But in Picton, the Prince Edward County Museum offers no special program to point up its identity.

MORE

Picton Column Take 2

Throughout the summer months the Prince Edward Horse and Pony Club and the Sophiasburg Riding Club hold regular shows enjoyed by hundreds of participants and spectators.

Why not an inter-club show featuring novelty classes such as an egg and spoon race as a holiday event? Held at Picton fairgrounds this type of program could close with a picnic or barbecue. A street dance in the square also might be considered.

The long weekends this summer lacked the "good time was had by all" note that should be a part of any holiday.

If the Prince Edward Chambr of Commerce was to name a special events committee possibly each holiday weekend could be highlighted with enjoyable programs for young and old. Often this would involve nothing more than utilizing existing facilities as Ameliasburg museum did during its presentation of Activities Day.

Just as the proverbial cobbler's children go barefoot, Picton's residents may go bored while enthusiastic bids are made to woo the tourists.

Gold Cup fever is great but not all Picton and Prince Edward residents are boat racing fans. Other activities are needed for a balanced recreation program on Labor Day weekend.

Experimental Supplement

Steers on the Hastings Farm Service Club's Pancake Hill experimental pasture farm are getting a bonus in their diet. Liquid protein supplement — mainly composed of molasses and urea — is available to a selected group of animals to determine if it will significantly contribute to their weight gain. Beef specialist from the Brighton provincial agriculture office Bob Murray shows how wheels pick up liquid so steers can lick it off. Average daily intake is about two pounds per animals.

Annuals Can Bloom All Year Round

By ROSS HAWTHORNE

Lately, we've had quite a few visitors from the area dropping in to see our gardens and growing chamber at Venture Farm and the visits have provoked quite a few worthy questions. And so I'll answer some in the hope they might be of iniversal interest.

Probably one of the commonest: "How do you keep annuals blooming through the season?"

Actually, there's only one way. Remove the dead or wilted flower blossoms daily if necessary. And be sure to remove the whole flower head, expecially in the case of petunias. You see, the very nature of an annual is to germinate, grow, flower, seed and die. All in one season. As soon as it reproduces a good crop of seed, it figures its job is done, and stops blooming. But if you interrupt the cycle by removing the frtilized flower heads, your annuals will kep on blooming in order to produce an adequate supply of seed.

In fact, now is about the time when that white carpet formed by sweet alyssum starts to look patchy. When that happens, just shear off the top inch of the whole blooming mess — and in about two weeks — a new crop of flowers.

"Why are so many cedars turning brown and will they recover?"

Cedars in this area this year are suffering from an attack of the cedar leaf miner insect It may last another year and your cedars should recover. But a good spraying with Cygon 2 will help prevent reinfestation.

And incidentally, those wormy traces in the leaves of clumbine and those Xrans parent patches in the leaves of birch are also caused by leaf miners. The treatment, on a regular basis, should be the same.

There are probably eight reasons. Type of rose, Pruning. Insect & fungus protection. Weeding. Feeding. And the last three reasons: Water. Water. Water.

Certain types of grandiflora or floribunda roses, such as Camelot, are classified as everblooming — clusters of silver pink floweheads that come on in wave after wave. Expecially if you prune them correctly. As soon as a flower is spent, prune it out of the cluster. As soon as the cluster is spent, cut the cane ¼ inch above the first five-leaved (not three-leaved) floret, below the spent cluster. And new canes will start from below that point within days.

Of course, flower production will suffer if roses are not protected against insects and fungus. That means a regular spraying with a combined systemic insecticide and fungicide every 10 days. Or better still, in this weather, every seven days. And of course, rose beds should be kept spotlessly free of weeds that can both hide insects and rob the soil of nutrients. And roses should be fed every two weeks with a liquid fertilizer with a higher middle and last number on the tin or jar. But no feedings after mid September or you could produce too much soft growth leaving them wide open to winter kill. And finally, water, water, water. Not a splash from the hose or watering can, but a deep soak, at least a full gallon of water twice a week with the soil cultivated around the shrub so the water will soak in well.

And incidentally, if you have any questions you'd like to ask us personally, or if you'd like to just deop in and see our gardens, at Venture Farm, we'd be happy to see you. We're just off No. 14 Highway between Foxboro and Stirling, two miles up the Baptist Church Road.

Loans Might Aid Fishermen

By AL ZABAS
Staff Rportr

It's unfair to romanticize their life, their ruggedness their roots in the pioneer history of the Brighton-Gosport area.

It's a form of cop-out, a method by which the reality of a pretty tough existence as a commercial fisherman on Lake Ontario is negated. Concern should definitely be shown, but not concern based upon an outlook gained by peering through rose-colored glasses of yesteryear.

About 35 men fishing Presqu'ile Bay do have a problem. Perch, their bread and butter fich, is being harvested too quickly and too young for rejuvenation of stock says the provincial government.

It tells them to increase the size of their nets so more of the small fry get through to spawn again. It tells them that if they don't stop using nets below legal size Ontario will likely haul them into court, seize their boats and their nets.

Boats idle. No money coming in. Men, some with 30 years of experience fishing on the lake, sit mending nets they can't use in port. Some apply for welfare, but the government says its policy is simple: It's a labor dispute and the men are able to work, so they aren't going to get help.

The men say they'll work if they can use nets they've used in the past. The nets tario wants them to fish with can't produce enough of a catch to make it worthwhile for them to spend hours fishing.

Yes indeed, they do have a problem. And the problem isn't that they're facing an obstinate government that's in the wrong. If, as the government claims, the fishermen continue to fish with smaller-meshed nets, the perch stock will eventually become scarce. Their livelihood will thus dwindle to nothing.

There's no doubt the Gosport fishermen would recognize this "theory", as they claim, if they were given some inducement to do so.

That inducement should come in the form of repayable bucks to tide them over to that time when using the legal-sized nets would again be profitable. And profitability, of course, will depend upon whether fishermen's claims that fish are stunted are proved false. If those claims are true, the natural resources ministry should allow the Gosport men to return to the smaller nets.

Their plight is simple, and their reaction is direct. Gosport's men fighting for their jobs, the same way you and I would if we were faced with a problem that cut into our take-home pay. (Remember, the squawk you raised over the 10cents a gallon of gas price increase.)

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — What Parliament, in wonder and amazement, has come to know as the "Perks of Pierre," continues to fascinate in their infinite variety.

The Prime Minister's unique lifestyle provides a rich vein of high-grade politicial — and, they trust, public interest — for the Official Opposition.

So they have been mining it tirelessly all through the session, unearthing all manner of exotic Trudeau treasures — charged, of course, to the public purse.

And they will be back digging deeper when the Commons reassembles in the Fall, in the pure hope of discovering other political riches.

Riches, because while the Prime Minister indulges his personal privileges without regard to cost, his government and especially his Finance Minister, John Turner — pleads with the taxpayers who are picking up the PM's tab, to show restraint.

It has not been just the big, flashy items — like a pair of $85,000 Cadillacs and the $250,000 swimming pool — that grabs your interest, stirs your imagination and perhaps — obviously hopes the Opposition — fires up your indignation.

Though, as the PM surely knows, but apparently doesn't care, two limos and a quarter million dollar swimming holes are scarcely standard equipment in your average comfortable Canadian home.

It's the little things, too, that arouse public interest, and who knows, even public ire.

The latest list of high-priced knick-knacks purchased for the Trudeau mansion at 24 Sussex Drive covers just short of two pages of Hansard.

It details all the prime ministerial domestic acquisitions made in the last year and a half.

You must nod approvingly at the exquisite Trudeau taste in the purchase of an "antique French bergere, circa 1820," as catalogued in Hansard, for a mere $950.

And a further $1,100 for what's listed as "one antique French directoral bergere."

What is a "bergere?" you may ask.

The dictionary reveals it's an easy chain.

But for chairs ,at a total 2,050 for the bergere pair, it's only a starter.

Itemized, too, are two antique French airmchairs at another $1,251 — an antique Regency chair at $331 — two eighteenth century English elbow chairs at $595 — one sofa, $740 — two loveseats, $1,240 — two plain chairs, $644 — a Sesann three-seat soft, $1,055 — two Sesann armchairs, $1,210 — two Elda chairs, $2,052 — an oak chair $142 — and a Cooey chrome stool, $33.

It comes to a shade over $11,000.

Just for a place to sit.

Makes you wonder, doesn't it, with a touch of compassion, how Prime Ministers Louis St. Laurent, John Diefenbaker and Lester Pearson toughed it out in their years in residence at 24 Sussex.

Pierre moved in when Pearson moved out so were Mike and Maryone making do with upturned orange crates that the Trudeaus required all that fancy new sealing?

The list provides other rare insights into the Trudeau lifestyle.

Did you know, even for a minute, how seriously the Prime Minster took last Winter's oil crisis, threatening, as it seemed at the time, a fuel shortage and so an electric brownout?

Well, get this.

He stocked up on 459 candles at a cost of $361.

But he didn't give up entirely on electric power, going for a pittance $3,000 for "an antique Georgian chandelier."

Now about coasters.

For a dozen of them he paid — or you did — $84.

That's a mere $7 a copy.

And here's something, two sheets 108 by 115 inches — $70.

Sheeets for "kingsize" beds.

This, though, is Super Pierre.

Look Out for the Kids

The sign "Children Playing" is one of vital relevance during summer holidays.

Back in May a letter from Mrs. Marlayne McCann of Dunnett Boulevard drew attention to a dangerous situation in that area.

Mrs. McCann took exception at that time to a suggestion from Ald. Arthur Keegan that "where children want to cross such roads to join playmates, let the parents take them by the hand."

Clearly this contingency is not one that can be relied upon on a regular basis. If it were, parents would be doing little else. Mrs. McCann sees it as "most unsatisfactory and highly unrealistic."

Happily though things have improved in the interim. For one thing the police monitored traffic on Dunnett. Recently, another hazard presented itself in the form of truck traffic at construction sites on nearby Hope Crescent, but again, Mrs. McCann says that with most of the equipment on-site traffic has tapered off.

Still, it's a situation requiring constant vigilance. As Mrs. McCann noted in her letter in May: "Children, and not just pre-schoolers, play and forget where they are, and there is always the danger that one will run out on the road. . ."

Several weeks remain before the youngsters return to school. Let's ensure that the period is free of tragedy. Drivers have a responsibility to look out for the children; as the Dunnett Boulevard mother points out, a youngster may all too easily forget.

Ontario's Rural Heart

The small villages and towns of Ontario are the kind of places Alice Munro describes in her books. And more particularly, the people of such communities who have their counterparts everywhere and are recognizable by Mrs. Munro's increasingly international following.

A native of Wingham which is not far from Goderich, Mrs. Munro knows the rural heart of Ontario, with its settler stock, and nowadays an increasing number of refugees from big-city life: artists, writers and craftsmen.

Such a place is Lonsdale, a village of great charm mentioned here recently. Another is Queensborough up Madoc way. Queensborough with its tranquil air, the general store, its waterway, but hinting also of more raucous moments: souped-up beetles in backyards and the ubiquitous four-letter word on a small frame building.

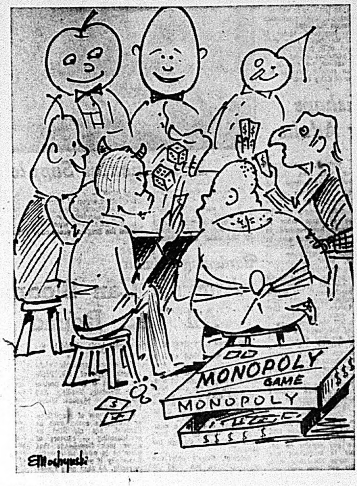
Peyton Place? Well, maybe not that far out, but the subtly provocative world, with its moments of drama, of Mrs. Munro. Remember too the Rock Festival of just a few years ago that created such a stir in these parts.

The reference to Lonsdale struck a chord with a Hastings Manor reader who, coincidentally, had been writing in similar vein about the rural parts for the September "Manor Times."

Flora Carver, widow of former Intelligencer sports editor George Carver, writes of the character of such places and the personal identity a person finds there, be it a great city such as Paris or a hamlet. And it is Queensborough with its "old-world charm," and typical, she feels, of the British countryside, which Mrs. Carver says catches her fancy.

Queensborough incidentally, was home for a time to Irish-born Leo Simpson whose novel, "Arkwright," won critical acclaim. Finding winter driving in the area hazardous, Mr. Simpson moved with his wife and five-year-old daughter to Madoc where he is still busy writing. "The Lady and The Travelling Salesman and Other Stories" is due for publication by the University of Ottawa Press next month and the Limerick native says he is "three-quarters way through a novel." Its evocative title: "The True Adventures of Invisible Jack."

Two other scenes of the region stick in the mind: a man with a tent in a field, near some outbuildings, perhaps roughing it anew pioneer-style, or farming. And at a roadside farm just north of Madoc: horses, pigs, hens, cats, and a small girl, about 8, cycling back and forth to the roadside, and making sure her dog did as it was told. A scene the urbanite takes in with a sense of something missing from his life — something from our day and age, yet reminiscent of the past.



Government Acts

Menace of The Drinking Driver

Sudbury Star

We welcome the government's announced plan to get tougher with drinking drivers, and particularly to start cracking down on motorists before they get out on the highway to kill. But one section of the new impaired driving legislation which the government unveiled in the Commons recently the section which would provide for conditional discharges for drivers who promised to take treatment for their drinking — scares us white.

The worst aspect of the impaired driving legislation we now have is that individual judges have too much discretion in the sentences they hand down. Most judges are pretty impartial, but not all by any means. there still are courtrooms today in which an impaired driver can be reasonably sure of escaping with the very minimum fine and suspension the law provides, if only because some of those on the bench are more soft-hearted than their fellows.

The conditional discharge provision — like the provision under which a motorist who uses his car for a living has been able to continue to drive to and from work, even though under suspension — is wide open to abuse.

Smart drunks and smart lawyers have already found plenty of ways to get around or beat impairment charges. More than one criminally irresponsible driver is loose upon the roads today because he was able to sway the judgment of the man called on to deal with his case.

Getting drunk drivers off the roads shouldn't be a matter of judgment; it should be a matter of cold, hard policy.

Arctic Sovereignty Issue

Montreal Gazette

Given that Canada has taken to pressing for vast extensions of its managerial competence over areas surrounding our coasts, it is natural for Defence Minister James Richardson and his chief of staff, Gen. J.A. Dextraze, to seek a site for a High Arctic base.

A High Arctic base has been essential since the Canadian government expanded its claim to a vast non-land area to protect the northern environment.

The wonder is that it has taken the defence department so long to seek out such a site to back up the claim.

Expanded territorial claims require expanded maritime and air partrol functions by the Canadian Defence Forces Until there is a base to handle warships and long-range patrol aircraft in the High Arctic there will remain a void in one of the major areas of the Canadian defence system.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

August 9, 1955

A grass blaze fanned by a stiff breeze raced across approximately 60 acres of hayfields and dried pasture lands on the Mohawk Indian Reserve in Tyendinaga township yesterday afternoon, threatening several homes and farm buildings before it was brought under control. Volunteer workers and city firemen fought the blaze for nearly three hours before it was finally extinguished. Witnesses said the flames raced across dried hayfields almost as fast as a person could walk. The fire was beaten down by firemen before it approached close enough to endanger buildings, but heavy smoke billowing into the air was plainly visible from No. 2 highway two miles to the north.

40 YEARS AGO

August 9, 1935

Single men have deserted the city street corners and usual haunts during the past few weeks since about 85 per cent of the men placed in positions during the past two months have been single men — most of them have been placed on farms.

50 YEARS AGO

Over 300 people participated in a costume parade from the upper bridge to the market square August 7. Dancing was enjoyed until 2.30 a.m. and the festivities put a happy end to the week's celebration.

Soviet Grain Needs And Dependence on West Plus The Realities of Inflation

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

As a new crop year begins, the long-term outlook suggests an intensification of feast-or-famine conditions in world grain markets.

Just three years ago, the Soviet Union placed huge orders for Canadian and United States wheat and other grains.

Within a year, grains were in short supply everywhere, and world commodity prices surged ahead—even though Canada's 1972-73 grain exports were pushed to nearly 800-million bushels, or about twice the rate of 1968-69.

Last month the Soviets came to the market again in spectacular fashion, to take two-million tons of milling wheat and one-million tons of durums from Canada, and 4.2-million tons of wheat, 4.5-million tons of corn and 1.1-million tons of barley from the U.S.

In the weeks since the Soviet orders were placed, the initial impression that this was the result of a freak of nature has been giving way to a realization that the U.S.S.R. may be coming to rely on North American agriculture as a more or less regular supplement to its own vast farm economy.

Even though a drought has undoubtedly hit some grain-growing areas of the Soviet Union this year, the crop is not a disaster and the people of the U.S.S.R. are not going hungry.

The Soviet Union's recurring difficulties with food supplies can probably be blamed as much on the rigidities of the collective farming system as on the vagaries of the weather.

As a matter of domestic policy, Soviet planners have embarked on a plan to increase meat consumption.

This project requires that an increased amount of grain production be set aside for expanding the herds of livestock down on the collective farm.

Since animals require from four to eight pounds of grain to produce one pound of meat, the project is likely to result in still greater shortages of grain than if the wheat production were to be converted directly into food for the Soviet people.

The consequences are a mixed bag.

For the leaders of the Soviet Union, economic co-operation with the West becomes more of a necessity as dependence upon North American wheat increases.

But the Canadian and U.S. economies are faced with the danger of another 1973-type round of inflation in food prices, which would set back the economic recovery.

For the Soviet people, diets are becoming more varied and satisfying. But for the people of the grain-hungry countries of the Third World, basic foods remain in short supply and will probably become more expensive.

Grain-growers on the Great Plains of North America will receive substantially higher prices for their crops than they would have otherwise. There is even a demand for low-quality No. 3 utility wheat.

But those other agricultural producers who have to buy feedgrains will be faced with still higher operating costs.

And when it comes down to the consumer, the likely result as usual — will be out-of-proportion increases in prices of bread and bakery products, beef, poultry and dairy items.

Summer Swimming Hazards

The Trentonian

We don't like to be kill joys. This hot summer makes swimming a real escape for many. So many are disposed to be tolerant toward jumping off bridges and similar things.

But we watch with some dismay those who swim in the river or canal directly in the path of boats. The possibility of tragedy is very great. The folly of doing need hardly be stated. Parents who go with their children should keep them away from such areas. Those who let them go should advise them against swimming in the channel areas.

Better still, swimming needs to be done in supervised areas. There are too many youngsters and even adults, jumping into areas where there is no one around to help.

Most distressing, the lifesaving equipment posted around the town's waterfront has in most cases been removed by vandals, and there is nothing with which to go to the aid of someone in trouble. There is no way to stop this, because one cannot catch the vandals. But one hopes they have enough conscience to feel that they have killed someone if somebody drowns because the lifesaving equipment is not there when it is needed.

Meanwhile, those who swim the Trent should use common sense. Swimming in the path of boats or using the CNR bridge as a diving platform are both foolhardy stunts.

Do We Have a Welcome Hand for Immigrants in Our Midst from Third World?

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

GENEVA PARK — How do we reach out to the Third World. That part of our globe which S. R. Ramphal, secretary-general of the Commonwealth and the keynote speaker at the 44th Couchiching conference here, called "the World's Poor?"

We cannot do it through the vast, impersonal and highly bureaucratized international agencies. They are remote from the man-in-the-street and what they have to say is often jargon.

Nor can we do it on what is called a one-to-one basis since in many of our visits to Third World countries, be they Jamaica, Morocco, Mexico or Haita, we are "ghettoized" in high-level luxury hotels.

Perhaps we in Canada can begin at home and with what is familiar. This is the "Third World Person." In our midst from the English-speaking countries of the Commonwealth with whom we cannot beg off contact because "we don't speak the language."

We have decided to let Asians, Africans and Caribbean peoples share our country. In the case of Commonwealth Caribbean arrivals, the familial ties between Canada and their homelands are close and intimate.

A most interesting case in point is the keynote speaker himself at this conference, directed to the topic, "Canada and the Third World: What are the choices:"

He is himself Guyanese. Having risen to the impressive and influential positions of minister of justice and foreign affairs in his country.

Mr. Ramphal's education was in Britain and in the United States in the prestigious seats of legal earning, Gray's Inn in Britain, the Harvard graduate law school in America.

But Mr. Ramphal's mother, his married sister and brother a doctor, all alive in Toronto.

His press secretary is an arts graduate of McGill University, 1947 and her husband in dentistry from the same university.

Dr. George Eaton, professor of economics at York University is one of six children all but one living here of Jamaican parents who still live in suburban Mona Heights in Kingston.

Prof. Eaton who still functions actively as consultant to many of the Commonwealth Caribbean nations on sugar and labor problems, is a Canadian with a Canadian life-style.

Now this is not so easy with those Third World immigrants who come to us and are not middle class with professional skills, and therefore face both racial and job discrimination.

It is with their dilemmas where we in Canada come to the crux of the problems facing the new countries of the Caribbean who see a richer and more promising Canada as a natural outlet for their net surpluses of trained people, nurses, public administrators, technicians and the like.

In many instances they should not be here because their own country desperately needs them. The Commonwealth Caribbean nations are not thinly-endowed with government planners who can do a better job of placing their own trained and skilled people at home.

To rely on Canada as an outlet for their bad planning which sends many Caribbean people here who would be happier at home and should be gainfully employed there, rather than have unhappy lives here, is a problem the Commonwealth Caribbean nations must meet.

Ours is to accept more graciously the Third World immigrant who does come, as fully as we can into an open Canadian society which once accepted many of us from the steppes of the Ukraine and the pogroms of Russian czars and Austrian emperors.

THE UNEXPLAINED
by Allen Spraggett

Healing Hands

Nobody could look less like the stereotype "faith healer" than Alex Holmes.

He doesn't wear a white robe. He doesn't scream, shout and exhort the sick to get well by having faith in God. He doesn't go into a trance or mutter strange incantations. He doesn't appear on weekly television.

Rev. Alex Holmes is a Presbyterian pastor (his parish is in Caro, Mich.) and he looks, talks and acts as you would expect such a person to do. He is soft-spoken, conservatively dressed in a clergyman's collar, and looks about as likely to go into a trance as into a temper tantrum.

There's one thing different from the average cleric about him: He does "lay hands" on sick people and a high proportion of them seem either to get better or dramatically improve.

Praying for the sick with the laying-on of hands isn't something Alex Holmes took up last week, the way some of the clergy pick up the latest fad. He has been practising his brand of "prayer therapy" (healing through prayer) for more than 20 years. And with some spectacular results.

When Holmes, by special invitation, demonstrated his abilities at Princeton Theological Seminary, the student paper, The Seminarian, came out with the headline: Two Seminary Students Are Healed By Prayer.

One of those on whom Alex Holmes laid hands was a student minister named Robert Opie who said he had been "bothered in his spine when sitting" ever since being thrown from a farm wagon when he was a kid back in Vermont.

When Holmes asked the student to sit in a chair and stretch out both legs, a marked difference was visible to observers. One leg was noticably shorter than the other.

Then, without even touching Opie, Alex Holmes "projected a healing thought" as he put it, to the student's spine and a moment later the legs were equal in length.

Mere muscular twitching?

Some skeptics said so. But recently I stood beside a physician as Alex Holmes prayed for a woman with an undeniable shortening of one leg (about an inch) as the result of a severe childhood injury. The doctor satisfied himself that the difference in leg length was real. Then Holmes quietly prayed for the woman, not touching her leg at all.

"Incredible" murmured the physician as the two legs suddenly became equal length. They stayed that way.

There are many physicians who privately attest to Alex Holmes' healing ability and some have praised it publicly.

Dr. Claire King, an ophthalmologist (eye specialist) in Canton, Ohio, said he knew of a case of glaucoma, a serious eye disease sometimes resulting in blindness, which improved enormously following Holmes' prayers.

"I've also seen arthritics get up and walk as they never had walked before," Dr. King said. "Frozen joints have become free before my eyes as Mr. Holmes prayed."

Alex Holmes urges that medical science and prayer therapy work together to heal mankind.

"I go to the best doctor I can find when I'm sick," the Presbyterian pastor-healer says, "and I expect everybody else to do the same. But prayer therapy provides a plus factor."

The plus factor was strong enough to heal — according to his own testimony — a very prominent clergyman from what had been called an incurable eye defect.

The clergyman, Dr. Henry Smith Lieper (who recently died at an advanced age), was former associate general secretary of the World Council of Churches, one of the most respected jobs in Protestantism.

He said publicly that in 1957 a damaged optic nerve in his left eye had failed to respond to treatment at clinics in Paris, Geneva and New York but when Alex Holmes laid hands on him "the condition cleared up and never returned".

Dr. Lieper also reported seeing cases of arthritis, withered limbs and spinal defects respond dramatically to Alex Holmes' prayer therapy.

Why does this particular clergyman have — as many insist he has — "healing hands"? What makes him special?

Well, scientists are currently studying Alex Holmes to find out and soon there may be definite answers.

A partial answer came some years ago when a noted physicist, Dr. Julius Weinberger, then with RCA, placed Holmes' hands on a specially prepared photographic plate. The idea was to see if anything detectable emenated from his hands when he was in a "prayerful state of mind" — the state of mind he strives for when he's doing his healing work.

When the plate was developed it showed striations — streaks of light — streaming from Holmes' right hand. The energy couldn't be identified but it was real enough to be photographed.

"Somehow," says Alex Holmes, "my hands when I pray become the focus of the loving thoughts and prayers of others beside myself and this focussed love probably is what does the healing."

Rivers Threatened

TIBERIAS, Israel (CP) — Two of the Bible's most famous landmarks — the River Jordan and the Sea of Galilee — are threatened by pollution and may soon have suffered irreversible damage, Israel conservationist warn. They predict that the thousands of tons of nitrates, fertilized soil, industrial waste and raw sewage dumped into the two waterways in several years may choke the lake where Jesus is said to have walked and the river in which the Bible says he was baptized.

Complaints From New Home Owners

This is the time of year new owners of homes are moving into their built-in dreams Financial problems have usually been squared away and, finally, moving day arrives.

For a great number of new home purchasers, problems are just beginning — and you're not as home free as you thought you were.

Box 99, Ottawa, the consumer complaint arm of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs reports that the largest number of complaints it receives are about new homes.

What kind of complaints?

Your foundation might leak or you might find cracks in the ceiling. Or maybe just a kitchen floor tile is loose.

For the most part, according to the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, defects in new homes requiring remedial action are normally cosmetic: that is, structural adequacy and safety are usually not affected. And, they say, the majority of builders usually respond promptly to justifiable complaints.

When you have a complaint, what should you do?

First, write down your complaint in a letter to your builder. He should supply an answer; do not accept being passed on to the subcontractor. After all, you're paying the builder for doing just this work. It is his responsibility to make sure subcontractors carry out repairs.

Keep copies of all your correspondence; keep a running diary, if the situation warrants, of developments in your dealings.

If you've got a legitimate complaint, don't just let off steam in a letter and then forget about it. But don't expect action too soon: investigation and rectification within a month is reasonable.

Don't forget that to the builder, a cosmetic or minor problem is not as important as it is to you; be sensible.

If your house is financed under the National Housing Act and your correspondence with the builder results in a stalemate, get in touch with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 1082 Princess Street, Kingston.

Make your requests in writing and let CMHC know the whole history of your dealings with the builder.

If after you have taken these steps, you are not satisfied that you have gotten a fair deal, write to Box 99, Ottawa or The Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, 480 University Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

If this action does not bring results, in the end you will have to contact a lawyer.

On the topic of new homes, J.C. Button, department of environmental biology, Univtrsity of Guelph, says that soil around newly constructed homes is frequently in appalling condition and unsuitable for plant growth. The subsoil, having been compacted by heavy machinery is covered with a few inches of top soil and planted with trees and shrubs. Naturally, they won't do well.

Instead, have the subsoil loosed mechanically before topsoil is replaced. You might even consider having organic matter incorporated: the Wellington mushroom house is a good source of cheap compost. The result will be an open soil through which rain water may percolate, air may penetrate and roots grow rapidly.

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. James White are pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter Linda Margaret to Harold Leslie Buchanan, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Buchanan. The wedding will take place Friday, September 5, at 4 p.m. at St. Mark's United Church, Cannifton.

Rogers – Brooker

The marriage of Wendy Mary Anne Brooker and Philip Gregg Rogers took place July 12 in Christ Church Anglican Church in a service conducted by Rev. John Uttley.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Brooker of Winnipeg Manitoba, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Rogers of Bridgewater, Nova Scotia.

Given in marriage by her mother and father, the bride wore her mother's ivory satin and lace wedding gown with an embroidered veil held by a wreath of baby's breath. She wore a heirloom necklace of seed peals and diamonds and carried a bouquet of gardenias and stephanotis.

Maid of honor was Deborah Damery of Montreal, Quebec, assisted by bridesmaids Wesley Brooker of Point Claire, Quebec, Susan Rogers of Bridewater, Nova Scotia, and Betty Moult of Belleville. All four attendants wore floral voile gowns with ribbon headdresses and carried matching nosegays.

Michael Murphy of Montreal was the groom's best man, and the ushers were Peter Brooker of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Kenneth Burns and Stuart McKenzie of Montreal.

A garden reception at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Rodger Greig of Cherry Valley, followed the wedding.

After a camping trip through Ontario and Quebec, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will reside in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Rogers

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Ellis

Ellis – McDonell

St. Paul's United Church was the setting for the summer wedding of Shirley Anne McDonell, duaghter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan McDonell of RR 3, Stirling, and Dennis Charles Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ellis, of Campbellford.

Rev. John May performed the service.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a princess-style gown of flocked nylon over taffeta with a roll collar. Pintucks on the bodice were accented with lace and satin ribbon, and long full sleeves were trimmed to match the bodice. A back tie fell along the self-train, and a waist-length illusion veil was caught by a headpiece of flower petals. She carried a cascade bouquet of red sweetheart roses, carnations and baby's breath.

The bride's sister-in-law Linda McDonell was matron of honor in a yellow princess-style gown with short puff sleeves and a roll collar. The bodice was trimmed with yellow velvet ribbon outlined with a self-frill.

Bridesmaids were the groom's sister Suzanne McCourt, and the bride's cousin Janet Hodges, who wore peach-colored gowns in a style identical to the matron of honor's.

The groom's niece Tammy McCourt and the bride's nieces Pamela and Connie Lee McDonell were flower girls in dresses matching the matron of honor's.

After a reception in St. Paul's Church parlor, the newly-married couple travelled to Niagara Falls and the United States on their honeymoon. They now live at 210 Portage Street, Campbellford.

CHARLES DENIS NEWMAN, son of Mr. and Mrs. A.F. Newman of South Porcupine, Recently received his Bachelor of Arts Degree from Queen's University, Kingston. Mr. Newman is a graduate of North Bay Teacher's College and is presently teaching at The Sir James Whitney School in Belleville.

ANTIBODIES A CAUSE

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (Reuter) — A South African gynaecologist claims that as many as one out of five childless marriages may be caused by the wife's "rejection" of her husband's sperm. This is because the women's blood serum contains antibodies against sperm which prevent conception. Investigation of 60 infertile women revealed antibodies in 13.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Lott

Lott – Cronkright

Vickie Jean Cronkright and Douglas Bruce Lott were joined in marriage by Rev. Leslie Dean in a service July 26 in Tabernacle United Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Cronkright and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elvin (Pete) Lott.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown featuring a very full skirt of full chiffon, with an overlay of lace on the bodice scattered with seed pearls. The high neckline and bishop sleeves carried out the same detail, and the juliette cap was also edged with seed pearls. The cathedral train was trimmed with Swiss lace and the bouquet was coral roses, white carnations and lily of the valley.

Matron of honor Shellie Hine, the bride's sister, wore a coral sleeveless gown with a halter bodice and plunging neckline. Over the gown she wore a hooded capelet of floral printed chiffon and she carried a bouquet of tinted daises and white carnations.

Bridesmaids were Diane Lott, the groom's sister, and Tracee Brennan, the bride's counsin, attired in gowns the same style as the matron of honor's but in yellow and green respectively.

Serving as flower girl was Shannon May and as ring bearer, Robin Hutchison.

Richard Denis, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. Ushers were Steven Conkright, the bride's brothr, and Barry McGarvey, the groom's brother-in-law.

The newly married couple have settled in Belleville since their honeymoon through the Thousand Islands.

50th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lajoie of RR2, Marmora, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Sunday, August 3, at a reception in Sacred Heart Church Hall. They were presented with a Papal Blessing from Pope Paul by their pastor, Rev. T. G. Scanlon.

A dinner prepared by members of the Catholic Women's League preceded the reception, attended by Jack Ellis, MP, and Mrs. Ellis, and Clarke Rollins, MPP, and Mrs. Rollins, and several local civic officials. Telgrams, gifts and cards were received congratulating the couple.

Married at St. John the Evangelist Church in Flinton, Charles and Hilda (nee Dion) Lajoie soon moved to a farm in Marmora township, where they raised one son, Albert Lajoie, who now operates the farm and six daughters, Marion Packard of Douro, Rita McCarthy of Peterborough, Marjori Brownson of Marmora, Theresa Thompson of Cobourg, Frances Garrison of Belleville, and Ann Brownson of Bonarlaw. Mr. and Mrs. Lajoie have 34 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Lajoie is an active member of the Marmora CWL and also of the Marmora Agricultural Society. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lajoie are active in the Marmora Senior Citizens.

Focal point at the reception was the three tier wedding cake, made by the Lajoies' daughter Marjorie and decorated by Irene Clemens. Tea was poured by Mr. Lajoie's sister, Annie Rivers of Madoc, Mrs. Lajoie's sister, Mrs. Duquette and their four sistrs in law.

A family smorgasbord concluded the days activities.

Ann Landers

Monogamy Equals Monotony?

Dear Ann Landers: Regarding the husband who had to look elsewhere because his wife was "too tired, too busy, or not in the mood": I was interested in your cop-out response that 'many women have the same complaint and isn't it a shame they can't reshuffle the deck and put the too tired, too busy and out - of - the - mooders together." Try this for size:

A fifth grader got up in English class and said, "In the U.S., a man can have only one wife at a time. This is called monotony."

From the mouths of babes, maybe?—A Philosopher

Dear Phil: I'm sure it's monotony for many, but it doesn't need to be if at least one person has imagination and cares enough to keep the physical side of marriage exciting.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 13-years-old and am writing this letter not only for myself but for my four younger brothers and sisters. They are 11, 10, 9, and 6.

Our parents don't miss a night to fight. We are fed up with the yelling and screaming and name-calling, door-slamming and plate-throwing

Dad works hard and is a great guy. The minute he walks in the door Mom hits him with a list of complaints. He tells her to shut up and then the battle is on.

After the fight is over, Mom cries and says Dad doesn't love her. She is wrong. He loves her a lot. But if he didn't, would you blame him? Who wants to get chewed out all the time?

Please help us straighten these two out. We don't want our family split, but this is no way to live.—Five Unhappy Kids.

Dear Kids: I hope every pair of battling parents who sees your letter will pretend it was written by their children. (Too bad you were so explicit about your number and ages.)

Your mom and dad need a third party to sit down with them, listen to the complaints from both sides and set up some House Rules. This means counselling.

There are many places they can go—The Salvation Army, YMCA, to their clergyman, Catholic Charities, or to the county or state mental health society. Please show them this column and tell them I hope they get moving.

Dear Ann Landers: I took a job as a telephone operator four months ago and it has been an education in human behavior. I had no idea there were so many crazy, stupid, rude and downright foul-mouthed people in the world.

I've been asked how to get gum out of a kid's hair, how many eggs to put in a sponge cake, what to do about cockroaches and a dog who snores.

When I have been unable to find a number because the person doesn't know how to spell the name or give any clue to the address, I've been cussed out in language I wouldn't write and you couldn't print.

I hope you will print this letter so the public will get wise to itself and have some consideration for us telephone employees who are trying to earn a living, like anyone else. — Blistered Ears

Dear Ears: Don't expect miracles. "The public" is "people" and it takes all kinds to make a world.

'Natural Childbirth' Means No Drugs at All

CALGARY (CP) — Many women who believe they have experienced natural childbirth are mistaken, says Rhondda Evans Hartman, author of True Natural Childbirth.

"Natural" childbirth means no drugs, not even aspirin, said the registered nurse, teacher and mother of five.

The native Albertan, now living in Denver, said in an interview studies have proven that any medication given to a mother, either before or during birth, does get through to the child.

"In some cases, effects of medication still are there eight months later."

The techniques won't make childbirth painless, but they will make it tolerable, with the mother aware and in control of the situation, she said.

Mrs. Hartman, who previously worked with Dr. Robert Bradley, president of the American Academy of Husband-Coached Childbirth, said most women are frightened of childbirth because of old wives' tales and numerous horror stories about birth.

In actual fact, there are very few absolutely painless childbirths, she said. The trick is to be able to control pain, trust your doctor and enjoy the experience.

She suggested women shop around for a suitable doctor, consulting with other women and bringing husbands along for the initial appointment.

"It's a minor thing in the doctor's life really, but it's a major one in yours and your husband should be involved."

Mrs. Hartman, who said there is no way she would promote home births, said she believes mothers can safely be sent home two hours after birth, if everything goes smoothly and heavy medication is not administered.

Marriage May Be Changing But Will Not Be Replaced

SASKATOON (CP) — Marriage and the family are alive and well in Canada and will remain so despite experiments with alternative life-styles, says a Saskatoon sociologist.

Prof. S. Parvez Wakil of University of Saskatchewan says an analysis of census data and available sociological information indicates that the family-marriage system will undergo changes but will not be replaced.

Prof. Wakil said in an interviw that some sociologists have taken the position that marriage will become redundant when such alternatives as consensual unions become more widespread.

However, he said, most of these non-marital unions, which are entered into for indefinite or for specific, renewable periods, appear eventually to end up in conventional marriages. Experiments with communes as an alternative to marriage had run into economic and other difficulties.

Prof. Wakil said that although the marriage rate in Canada reached a post-war low in 1963 of 6.9 per 1,000 people, it has climbed steadily since then and in 1972 was 9.2. Not only was this trend visible for the total population but in recent years it had also been true of the younger people around age 20.

Prof. Wakil said the divorce rate in Canada has been among the lowest in the Western world since the early 1900s. The rate in 1968 of 54.8 divorces per 100,000 people almost tripled in the next four years following the widening of grounds for divorce. However, a large part of this was attributed to a backlog of cases facilitated by more liberal laws and declines in the rate had already been reported in some provinces.

The average size of families has been dropping in recent years. The number with no children or with only one or two has been increasing whereas the number with three or more children has been falling.

The entry of married women into the labor force has risen dramatically since the Second World War and in 1972 more than one-third of Canadian married women were holding jobs outside the home. Prof. Wakil said these developments will likely result in community and other agencies playing a larger role in child-rearing.

He expects to see increasing numbers of one-parent families, not only because of widowhood and divorce, but because more unwed mothers are keeping their children and single people can be expected to adopt children to a greater extent than they have been doing.

Another development Prof. Wakil said will become more common is the use of marriage contracts which spell out rights, duties and preferences that may differ in many respects from the traditional terms of union.

The contracts, usually drawn up by a lawyer, deal with such subjects as individual assets and income, the division of household tasks, careers, sexual fidelity, whether to have childrn, the names of any children, religion of the partners and the offspring, relationships with friends and members of the community and the renewal or termination of the contract.

Prof. Wakil said that although this practice "seems and sounds avant-garde" it is as old as the ancient Jews, although today's contracts are "individual-centred" rather than "kin-or state-centred."

"Marriage contracts are a departure from the notions and practices of the recent past when love was supposed to overcome all obstacles, personal, social or other, a notion proven so wrong by such a large proportion of our unhappy marriages, most of which end up in divorce.

"It is a more business-like, rational practice which, with our increasing emphasis on individuality and individual happiness, we are bound to see more of in the future."

Elegance Takes Over

NEW YORK (CP) — Elegance in women's fashions will continue into fall and winter. A definition of true elegance was given in 1960 by Carmel Snow, then editor of Harper's Bazaar fashion magazine.

She said: "Elegance is good taste plus a dash of daring."

It is this sort of elegance that is with us again, says Eleanor Lambert, fashion expert for the recent American designer shows here.

The big coat and the cape have their place this fall, although a slimmer line seems to be the coming trend. However, the big coat has found a new role in the daring definition.

It tops a second coat, worn over a dress or suit. It's a three-piece layered effect.

Bill Blass liked the look so much he included several versions in his fall collection. A practical trio is his snake-patterned weatherized topper over a racoon coat over a slim brown wool dress.

And John Kloss has a beige and pumpkin Harris tweed coat over a rust mohair in exactly the same style over a rust wool and rabbit's hair dress.

The layered look came into fashion a season or so ago, with a sweater worn over a shirt under a suit jacket. This look continues strong for fall.

The new fashion rule is soft over soft. And the layers are controlled and planned. It isn't the past helter-skelter gathering together of items that the wearer liked. This time around, it's a pulled-together look for elegance. The daring that Carmel Snow spoke about is found in color and fabric contrasts.

Layered looks also include the jumper, a positive look this fall and usually worn with a soft printed shirt or skinny turtleneck sweater.

But Anne Klein and Associates introduced several jumper variations, as a black wrap skirt in a double-breasted style worn with a black ascot-tie shift, and another black jumper with the armholes and round neck edged in red leather, worn with a black hooded sweater. Everything is soft. There's few chunky layers over chunky layers.

This softness is also found in many returning fabrics. Mohair is back. It hasn't been around for several seasons. Bill Blass showed it in a pink shirt, ful skirt and shawl trio.

Jerseys are being re-introduced and perform like knits. Matte jersey especially is getting a fashion play for fall. For evening, it's mostly soft fabrics, too, as panne velvet but there's a new mood in some collections for stiffer, stand-alone fabrics such as taffeta.

In fall colors, the earth tones of last season are giving way to brighter shades. One of the strongest contenders is rust. Some call it pomegranate. It's actually a sunset rose. Other colors that are hard to define are a rose with a brownish cast, and purple that is almost navy and a blue-grey slate shade.

Woman Manager Restores Profit For Major Supermarket Chain

MONTREAL (CP) — After languishing in the red since 1970, the Miracle Mart department store chain will once again show a profit, predicts Mitzi Dobrin, general-manager.

Mrs. Dobrin anticipates that the chain's latest fiscal year, which ended July 31, will show a $1-million profit.

Since the financial statements of Miracle Mart are included in the consolidated earnings of its parent, Steinberg's Ltd., they are not required to be disclosed publicly.

However, Mrs. Dobrin said in a recent interview that Miracle Mart recorded a loss "substantially greater" than $1 million last year and that the last profit, in 1970, was small.

Mrs. Dobrin is confident Miracle Mart's bleak days are over and that within five to 10 years the chain will be "the biggest profit-generator" in the Steinberg empire, which lists her husband, Melvyn, as president and her father, Sam Steinberg, as chairman.

To fulfil that prophecy, Miracle Mart has a distance to go. For the financial year ended July, 1974, Steinberg's consolidated earnings reached $16.2 million on sales of $1.2 billion.

Mrs. Dobrin credits Miracle Mart's financial recovery to stern measures taken since her arrival in the executive suite two years ago.

Following the chain's most catastrophic years in 1971 and 1972, Mrs. Dobrin's father asked her to leave a law practice and join the firm.

After a few weeks, the new broom had swept out about a dozen key executives—virtually everyone at the top, she said.

"The changes created a terrific morale problem at first," she said. "But they had to be made, so we could make the needed corrections."

She also credited Miracle Mart's expected recovery to the closing of some Ontario stores, which were "bleeding quite heavily." The company now has 23 stores in Quebec and Ontario compared with 33 stores two years ago. Quebec has 22 of the remaining stores.

The chain's performance has also begun to improve with the elimination of some slow-moving items and with better staff training programs, she said.

The best potential for growth was in Ontario, which is "a market we really haven't tapped." Growth beyond Ontario and Quebec, however, was not anticipated.

Self-defence Expert Advises Women: Run First, Scream and Fight Last

Miss Conroy, who teaches self-defence to women, kicks, stomps, jabs and gouges.

"I borrow a little bit of karate and a little bit of aikido," she said. "But it's mostly dirty fighting or street fighting. It's the street fighting I find the most effective. It can be learned by anyone. That's what makes it effective."

Even so, Miss Conroy, 33, said: "My best students never have to use self-defence. They learn to recognize danger and avoid it. That's the best self-defence of all; avoid danger."

An associate professor of physical education at California State University at Los Angeles, she was recently hired to teach self-defence techniques to teachers in the county and city school systems.

The teachers in turn will teach self-defence in physical education classes under a new state program enacted by the legislature.

It started about 10 years ago when she was attacked at knifepoint one night while studying for her doctorate at Columbia University in New York City.

"I did all the wrong things," recalled Miss Conroy, a native of Ogden, Utah. "I talked to him. The police said it was crazy. They said I should have just given him whatever he wanted. I thought a lot of people could learn from my mistakes.

"The point is, if you're attacked and all he wants is money, don't resist. Just give it to him. Don't talk to him. If you have no money, offer to give him anything of value you have. Demonstrate that you're co-operative. It may save your life.

"But if you see that your health or life is in danger, then fight. Fight 100 per cent. Go for the vulnerable parts of the body."

She listed the vulnerable parts of the body as the knee, groin, throat and neck, nose and eyes. A kick to the knee or groin can disable an attacker, as can a follow-up blow to the throat or bottom of the nose.

Miss Conroy said she has developed three strategies:

1. "Learn to eliminate danger before it exists. Don't open your door to strangers. Keep your doors locked. Don't wear provocative clothing.

2. "Learn to recognize danger and avoid it. If someone comes toward you and you think you're in danger—run. And scream. I'm an advocate of screaming.

3. "Fight—but only when your life or health is in danger. If all an attacker wants is money, give it to him. But if you have to fight, fight all the way."

Miss Conroy demonstrated her technique. Every kick and blow was accompanied by a scream. She laughed and said: "I have to scream when I do it."

Policeman Publishes Adult Coloring Book

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — A new adult coloring book has been created by an enterprising former Sarnia policeman.

Clive Brooks, 36, author, illustrator and publisher of the book, said he thought of the idea from helping his children with their coloring. A few questions to friends and work associates showed that they helped their children as well and the book, Virgil and Homer, was born.

The book tells the story of a day in the life of two insects, Virgil and Homer, the friends they meet, and the adventures they encounter. Homer is a bee and Virgil is a butterfly.

Intended for use as an adult book, the subject material is somewhat more mature than the usual fare found in coloring books. Illustrations to be colored in range from sexual desires and homosexuality to drug use.

Mr. Brooks first made his mark in the city in 1959 with the formation of the Blue Echoes, the first rock 'n' roll band to perform in Sarnia. Later he formed the first folk band, the Ook-Piks.

Although he has had some experience in writing, having just completed a yet unpublished book, Mr. Brooks has never had any training in art. He said the coloring book is his first try at drawing.

New Quiet Revolution Hits Quebec Churches

Written for CP

By LESLIE K. TARR

The quiet revolution of the 1960s brought political and social upheaval to Quebec. A quieter revolution in the 1970s is changing the religious composition of the province once described by Pope Pius XII as his "most Catholic country".

The 1971 census revealed that 86 pr cent of Quebec's population of six million described itself as Roman Catholic. A casual observer probably assumes that all French-Canadians are in the Catholic column.

At present, however, 20 Protestant denominations, most numerically small, have established French - speaking churches. Since 1970, four of those groups have made remarkable headway and report unusual growth. Pentecostal churches, Christian Brethren assemblies, and two Baptist groups report a 60-per-cent membership growth during the past four years.

Their present membership figures, by themselves, are hardly impressive. The Pentecostal churches claim 1,200 members, the Christian assemblies 1,350, the Fellowship of Evangelical Baptist Churches 722, and the Union of French Baptist Churches 500. But the bare figures don't tell the full story.

All of those churches have rigid membership standards and count only baptized believers (teen-agers and adults who have requested immersion). The Fellowship of Evangelical Baptist Churches, for example, claims only 722 members, but in 1974 those churches averaged 1,402 in their Sunday morning services.

More significant are two other factors. The four churches are not newcomers to Quebec. Three of them have operated French-language churches for more than 50 years, but the explosive growth has come in the past four years.

Even more noteworthy is the fact that, since 1970, most of the ministerial force has come from French-Canadian members of the Quebec churches. Until 1970, most of the pastors of the Evangelical Baptist churches came from France, Switzerland, other Francophone lands, or from English - speaking Canada. Twenty-two of the 26 new full-time workers since 1970 are French-Canadians.

To those Baptists the present situation seems far removed from the late 1940s when their preachers were imprisoned in northwest Quebec. Two of those preacher brothers, Lorne and Murray Heron, minister in that Rouyn-Val d'Or-Noranda mining area where, more than 25 years ago, they were imprisoned while preaching in the open air. Today they have established French-speaking congregations, preach on radio and television, and conduct outdoor street meetings.

Spokesmen for the four groups claim that the Catholic hold on Quebec is slipping.

"Those who remain loyal to the Catholic Church are confused over the ferment and change in that church," said Rev. Maurice Boillat, general secretary of the Union of French Baptist Churches in Canada. "A great number of the uncommitted are looking in different directions for new answers."

A Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada spokesman agreed.

"Although they may still wish to be married and have their children baptized in the church, many live in a spiritual vacuum," he contended.

Just when the established institutional church is said to be losing its hold on French Canada, evangelicals are discovering an unprecedented interest in the Bible and spiritual questions.

"People may have lost confidence in the Roman Catholic Church, but they still believe in God," suggested Arthur C. Hill, a Sherbrooke medical doctor long active in Quebec's Christian Assemblies.

Mr. Boillat cautions, however, that there is "a marked trend towards materialism and nationalism".

Most of the additions to churches are young people, with a large proportion of high school graduates and university students.

More than 100 of those young people are enrolled in Sembec (Seminaire Baptiste Evangelique Canadien), an extension seminary operated by the Fellowship of Evangelical Baptist Churches in Canada. Students acquire biblical and theological training in the French language through programmed, self-teaching manuals and weekly seminars. They receive in-service guided training from experienced pastors.

A large number of those young people will become ministers and others will be effective lay preachers. By 1980, Evangelical Baptist churches anticipate an unprecedented number of Quebec French speaking pastors.

The other growing churches also provide for training of future workers. Bethel Bible Institute in Sherbrooke is an all-French training school operated by Christian Brethren, Mennonite Brethren and Evangelical Baptists. Its graduates are ministers or approved workers in Quebec congregations of those churches.

The Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada, the country's largest evangelical denomination, operates its own Berean Bible Institute in Montreal. More recently that denomination has instituted the FLITE program (French Language Intensive Training For Evangelism), which takes Bible school graduates to Laval University in Quebec City for intensive one-year training in French. Ten FLITE graduates are pastors of Pentecostal churches in Quebec.

Other evangelical agencies also report wide-open doors. Since 1967 a Sermons From Science pavilion has operated first at Expo 67 and then at Man and His World. Conducted by Christian Direction, an evangelical inter-faith agency, it has provided first-time contact with the evangelical message to tens of thousands of French-Canadians. Many are enrolled in Bible correspondence courses.

Even Rex Humbard, American TV preacher from Akron, Ohio, preaches in French on seven Quebec channels and 16 satellites. The French sound track with interpretation of Humbard's sermon creates the illusion that the Arkansas-born preacher of the Cathedral of Tomorrow speaks French. The choir and other singing parts of the service are in English.

The newer cults have also experienced growth in Quebec. The 1971 census reported 37,130 Jehovah's Witnesses in the province, some of whom would be French-speaking. The Worldwide Church of God, headed by Herbert W. Armstrong and son Garner Ted has more than a 10,000 circulation in Quebec for the French-language edition of its paper, Plain Truth. French radio and TV programs carry the Armstrong message daily. In 1972 the Pasadena, Calif. based church established a French church service in Montreal through its radio-TV contacts.

The mainline Protestant denominations are relatively inactive in French-language outreach in Quebec. Apparently ecumenical detente with the Roman Catholic Church has discouraged the growth of United and Anglican churches.

The decade of the 1970s is witnessing the emergence of a strong Quebec-based, French evangelical Protestant witness in the wake of the Quiet Revolution.

Bruce Marsh Found Death Was Not Difficult to Face

By Dr. Gordon C. Smyth.

CBC announcer Bruce Marsh came into Canadain homes on radio and television for 25 years. In 1973, doctors told him that he had only a year to live, unless he had a heart transplant.

He knew that a third of the patients accepted for transplants die before they get one. He also knew that half of those who have the operation die in the first two months.

While waiting for his operation, Bruce Marsh wrote an article for the United Church Observer. He had surgery and died before the article appeared. It was entitled Facing Death Can Be An Interesting Experience.

The article was as remarkable as the author in whose memory the public is abeing asked to contribute to The Bruce Marsh Memorial Fund, Toronto School of Theology. Fr death, it has been said, is the greatest undiscussed subject in Western society.

And yet we realize that, sooner or later, we must all come to grips with this subject. "I'd like people to know," wrote Bruce Marsh, "that it really isn't all that difficult to face the possibility that there may not be a tomorrow. Your faith in fact can make you strong. I'm not afraid of the operation and I'm not afraid of the next step.

"And that's how I see it," he continued. "That's the real personal test of your faith as a Christian, if you can call it the next step, instead of the end."

Of course, if a photograph had been taken on the Resurrection morning, some would have said that it was a fake. Were there sworn statements still available from the Apostles, some would deny their authenticity. However, the evidence is there in the New Testament. But I ask you to note that, as to details, we find silence as well as certainty.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick was one of the outstanding preachers and religious teachers of our century. He arrived late one day for a class at Union Theological Seminary, New York City. He explained that he had been delayed over at his Riverside Church by a woman who came to see him.

She had visited him, years before, when her baby died. "If anyone can tell me about the he eafter, you can," she said. "Will my baby grow to manhood there, or be my baby when I see him? Will he know I was his mother?"

Dr. Fosdick had replied that he did not know. The woman got up to leave in keen disappointment. Then he asked, "In what kind of God do you believe?" She replied "A God who is like Jesus." "Then," said Fosdick, "don't you think that a God like that will care for your baby?"

Now she had returned, years later, to thank him for that sort of answer, instead of speculation that she could have questioned again and again.

It is not for us to know the geography of heaven or the temperature of hell. Jesus taught, "In my Father's house are many rooms; if it were not so, would I have told you that I go to prepare a place for you" (John 14:2)?

If we believe in a God like Jesus, and in the integrity of Jesus, that is surely more than enough. We can rejoice with St. Paul, "What no eye has seen, no ear heard, nor the heart of man conceived, what God has prepared for those who love him" (1 or. C2:9)!

Cyclist Killed

CARRYING PLACE — A 16-year-old Carrying Place youth was killed Friday night when the motorcycle he was driving was in a head-on collision with a dune buggy along an Ameliasburg concession road, four miles south of here.

Driver of the dune buggy was David Wayne Carr, 16, also of RR 1 Carrying Place. He remains in Trenton Memorial Hospital with facial injuries. A hospital spokesman said he is in satisfactory condition.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincal Polce said the accident occurred at 9.50 p.m. Friday along the second concession of Ameliasburgh Township just east of Highway 33.

Police have no damage estimates to the vehicles and are continuing their investigation.

Booth Prompts Question

Most people approaching the family planning display booth at the Quinte Mall are not aware of the number of birth control methods available, says Gale DePauli, planning program co-ordinator.

The Family Planning Centre is located at 208 East Bridge St. in Belleville — in the administration building of the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit.

The centre has placed a display booth in the mall for the past three days (it concludes today) to publicize itself and dispense information on conception control.

Mrs. DePauli, a public health nurse, said Friday the booth has been overwhelmed with visitors. "I'm really pleased," she commented.

Mrs. DePauli said there has been an equal amount of interest in both birth control methods and sterilization. Parents have been particularly interested in puberty literature — how to talk to their offspring about sex education, she added.

A surprising result has been one of the answers to a questionnaire handed out at the booth. Mrs. DePauli noted most respondents think sex education in the school system should begin at the primary level.

"The men have been responding to the type of literature we have," she pointed out. Pamphlets on vasectomy and questions for boys are popular, she said.

Youth Held After Chase

A 16-year-old Belleville youth has been charged with dangerous driving in connection with a high speed chase on city steets late Friday.

Deputy-Chief Harold Reid of city police said today the youth is identified as Peter Jonathan McGillivary of 9 Elmer St.

He said Constables Paul Christie and Maurille Roy began pursuit of a vehicle at 11 p.m. at about 57 Catherine St. The chase continued on Cedar, Henry and Murney streets, back to Catherine St. and onto Yeoman St. where the vehicle was finally stopped near Benjamin St.

Deputy-Chief Reid said speeds reached as high as 65 m.p.h. during chase.

Variety of Methods

Lewis Regrets Leaving CFB Trenton for New Post

TRENTON — Maj.-Gen. K.E. Lewis said Friday he is pleased with his appointment as deputy-commander of the new armed forces Air Command, but he is sorry to leave Trenton after a stay of just over a year.

Maj.-Gen Lewis said he enjoyed living in Trenton more than anywhere else. He said he has made 19 major moves, including four tours of duty overseas, since he joined the armed forces.

He will be leaving CFB Trenton, where he is present commander of Air Transport Command (ATC) to assume his new post in Winnipeg Sept. 1.

ATC, said the general, is being "transformed" into an Air Transport Group, responsible for most airlift operations in the Canadian forces.

Maj.-Gen. Lewis will participate in a change of command ceremony at CFB Trenton Tuesday, August 12. The ceremony will mark his departure from the base.

It will also mark appointments to new posts for Brig.-Gen. L.V. Johnson and Brig.-Gen. R.G. Husch.

Gen. Johnson is being moved from training command headquarters in Winnipeg to his new post as commandant of the Canadian Forces Training System (CFTS) based at CFB Trenton. CFTS, a logger unit here, oversees training bases across Canada.

Previously, the general then a colonel, was base commander at CFB Edmonton, a post he assumed after serving as deputy chief of staff operations at ATC headquarters here three years ago.

Gen. Husch will take over as commander of Air Transport Group, moving from his post as chief of staff at ATC headquarters.

OTTAWA — A federal contract worth $15,000 has been awarded to DAC Furniture Refinishing of Belleville to provide the defence department with furniture repair service at CFB Trenton, the department of supply and services announced Tuesday.

It was one of 189 unclassified contracts worth $10,000 or more that were awarded by the department to Canadian companies during the week ended July 25. Total value of the contracts amounted to $8,562,950.

Crosbie to Toronto

City Police Chief Douglas Crosbie will attend a one-day conference in Toronto Aug. 20 held by the traffic section of the Canada Safety Council. Chief Crosbie is the chairman of a committee which will bring forth recommendations on bicycle safety, training and motor assisted bicycles (mopeds).

Cabinet Maker Believes Quality Still Important

By AL ZABAS

Staff Reporter

FRANKFORD — Planks of pine are stacked neatly on the floor of his Frankford workshop. Few wood shavings can be seen.

An unfinished rowboat sits on sawhorses. He's been too busy to complete it, business has been better than he expected when he moved into his Trenton St. shop in April.

"You just don't open the doors and people start to walk in ordering things," he says. "You have to build a reputation."

If the amount of work he now has is any indication, he has established a reputation. This month, he says, running his finger down an order list tacked to the wall, he has eight orders worth an estimated $4,500.

"I was surprised. I didn't expect to get too much local business," he said. "I thought we'd have to advertize in Toronto. It turned out the other way."

Except for a four-year period, Mr. Jackson has always been a cabinet maker. He learned the trade, having served a six-year apprenticeship under his father, in England.

In Canada in 1970, he began work, not as a cabinet maker, but as an assistant superintendent with a construction firm located in Toronto.

He stayed there a year, moved around to other contractors, but then "got sick of the quality of the houses."

"It makes me sick the quality of work," Mr. Jackson says. The problem, basically, is that "there aren't many apprentice trained trademen in the business.

It's a problem Mr. Jackson doesn't encounter. He begins and finishes each cabinet or custom piece of furniture he builds. He restarted his former trade in mid-1974 in a farm house he bought near Stockdale after he quit the construction business.

In a small room off the living room, he housed his equipment. It was so small that "you could stand in the middle and reach everything." Finished pieces went into the house proper, where he'd sentence continies.

"climb over them, through them, and round them.

He had no choice but to move to his present Highland House shop. He likes his shop. It's in a part of Ontario he says he feels will grow, a part that offers him the opportunity when its humid, to don a swim suit, step out the back door, and into the Trent River.

Home-owner Can Buy Land

A provincial announcement Friday will make it possible for 75 Belleville home owners to purchase the land their houses are sitting on.

Ontario housing minister Donald Irvine announced Friday that Home Ownership Made Easy (HOME) program participants who originally could only lease the land beneath their house can now take out a second mortgage with the province to buy the property.

"This puts the full ownership" concept back into housing," said Mr. Irvine in a news release.

In the HOME program, purchasers need only a five per cent down payment.

Bob Marcotte, president of the Quinte Home Builders Association, said in an interview Friday, there are 75 such homes in Belleville — constructed and purchased through the government's HOME program.

"This announcement opens another option for these 75 home owners," he said. "They are not required to purchase the land but may do so if they wish."

I think its a good thing," he said.

The program is ideally suited for people who cannot afford the major investment of a building lot and a home but desire not to live in conventional rental accommodation, said Mr. Marcotte.

With this new announcement, the home owner can move at his own speed, he said.

In Mr. Irvine's release it states, "Families who are presently leasing their lots (at a minimal fee) may continue to do so if they wish. However they will have the option of replacing the present leasing arrangements with a deed and mortgage in accordance with this new policy."

800 Acres 'Escape Valve' For City Says Mayor Jeffrey

By COLIN BRUCE

Staff Reporter

Negotiations are all but complete regarding a water-for-land swap between Belleville and Thurlow Township — a deal that has been two years in the making.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said during an interview with The Intelligencer Friday the final draft of the agreement will be considered by Belleville's public utilities commission this Wednesday. Once the agreement is found satistory by the PUC, it will be forwarded to council for final ratification, said the mayor.

The agreement solves major problems for both municipalities.

Belleville will receive 800 acres of land on the city's eastern limits. The parcel of property is situated between Highway 401 and 2.

The 400 acres acres north of Canadian National Railway lines will be used for industrial purposes and the remainder — to the south of the rail lines — will be used for residential development, said the mayor.

In return, Thurlow Township will receive city sewer and water services.

Only the more densely-populated Cannifton area, however, will receive the city services. Township consumers will pay 50 per cent more than city residents for use of the system.

"This agreement will aid in the continued development of both communities," said Mayor Jeffrey.

As far as Belleville is concerned, this 800 acres will serve "as an escape valve for the pressure that has building through the shortage of land," said the mayor.

Mayor Jeffrey said the utilities commission — of which she is an ex officio member — will deal with the matter Wednesday allowing council the opportuntiy to make a decision on the agreement "as quickly as possible."

She said she did not know if the lengthy document could be reproduced in time for distribution before the Aug. 18 council meeting.

Mishap Costly

Pedestrian Killed

MARMORA — A 22-year-old Springbrook woma n was struck by an autmoobile and killed Friday night as she attempted to cross Highway 7 just west of here.

Dead is Miss Hilda Taylor, 22, of RR 1 Springbrook, a community located a few miles south of Marmora on Highway 14.

She was pronounced dead at the scene by Marmora coroner Dr. H.G. Parkin. The accident occurred at 7:40 p.m.

A post mortem will be conducted on the body at Belleville General Hospital today.

Driver of the car was Edward Hefferenan, 21, of 255 Lake St., Peterborough. A spokesman for the Ontario Provincial Police said damage to his car is estimated at $200.

A Madoc OPP spokesman said no charges were laid in connection with the incident.

New Exec Set

The executive of the new Quinte Association for Riding for the Developmentally Handicapped is as follows — Eric Caulfied of RR 1, Carrying Place, president; Tina Osborne of RR 1, Consecon, vice-president; Doris Freeland, special education consultant, treasurer; Olivia Preston, special education teacher, secretary; Nancy Allin of RR 1, Corbyville, project operator; and Marion MacPartland, early childhood education course student at Loyalist College, volunteers and transportation. Mrs. Freeland and Mrs. Preston are both with the Hastings County Board of Education.

A Finishing Touch

Highland House cabinet maker Geoffrey Jackson sands a drawer of a kitchen cabinet it took him a week to complete in his Frankford workshop. Born in England, he came to Canada in 1970 as a full-fledged cabinet maker trained by his father, the owner of five lumber-yard-cum-woodworking shops.

Coffee Price Hike Hurts Say Residents

An imminent and unavoidable rise in the cost of coffee in stores and restaurants is both possible and probable.

Already the price of green coffee beans, before roasting and processing, has risen 60 per cent. The wholesale price of a pound of coffee went up 20 cents a pound late last week and instant coffee brands of a major producer, General Foods Ltd., were boosted by about three cents an ounce.

Industry spokesmen say further increases are expected.

The cause of it all was severe frost damage to the coffee crop in Brazil, the world's major coffee producer.

What will the average coffee drinker do about it? That was the question posed by The Intelligencer to six random shoppers at Quinte Mall Friday.

One interesting sidelight to the interviews was an indication that younger people are not the enthusiastic coffee drinkers their parents might be. One said, "I don't care if I never see another cup of coffee. I only drank it to be sociable anyway."

WANDA RATHWELL

Housewife and mother Wanda Rathwell, 59, Thorncliffe Dr. now drinks "a couple of cups of coffee a day. If the price shyrockets, I'll just quit," she said.

MARK ACQUAFREDDO

Mark Acquafreddo, 24, 6 Second St., is one of the younger people who won't have any trouble kicking the habit. "I don't drink coffee at all. I just don't like it."

JERRY DEHOOP

A printer, Jerry DeHoop, 14 Parkdale Dr., says he will definitely think twice before he orders or drinks a second cup of coffee. "A big price increase will definitely affect my habits."

ORICK LATCHFORD

Orick Latchford, a retired farmer and Turnbull St. resident, is convinced "it's all a big racket, anyway. You can't get good coffee unless you get it from the salesman so I quit drinking it."

SHERRY PORTEOUS

Nineteen-year-old secretarial student and job-seeker Sherry Porteous, 296 Bridge St., East, is another who won't be affected. "I rarely drink it, but my mother does."

Melberta Abernethy

A visitor from Kingston, Mrs. Melberta, Abernethy doesn't think coffee price increases will have much effect on her life. "I drink four or five cups a day, and I expect to keep on doing it."

The Four Seasons Motor Hotel here will be the pledge centre for the Quinte area during the Jerry Lewis Telethon Aug. 31 to Sept. 1. The telethon will raise funds for the Muscular Dystrophy Association. It will be shown on Channel 7 in Watertown. About 100 people have volunteered to handle phone pledges during the 24-hour period and telephone numbers will be announced later.

Loyalist Name Urged

PICTON — Residents of the area surrounding Collins Bay and the Glenora Ferry are being urged to press the provincial government to re-name Highway 33 between those two points as The Loyalist Parkway by J.S. Ellis, professor and head of the department of Civil Engineering at Royal Military College of Canada in Kingston. Mr. Ellis notes only the premier of Ontario can name and decide on the development of the parkway and says this will retain the natural heritage and conservation of the 25-mile strip.

Bucs Manager Unconcerned

Philadelphia Closes Gap To Just Three in NL's East

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Manager Danny Murtaugh isn't concerned with second-place Philadelphia Phillies.

DANNY MURTAUGH

He's got enough to worry about these days the way his Pittsburgh Pirates are playing.

"I'm not worried about Philadelphia; I only worry about my own club," he said Friday after the Pirates dropped a 5-3 decision to Houston Astros.

Coupled with Philadelphia's 5-4 win over San Francisco Giants, the loss sliced the Pirates' lead over the Phillies in baseballs National League's East Division to three games.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles Dodgers edged New York Mets 4-3, St. Louis Cardinals outlasted San Diego Padres 10-6, Montreal Expos nipped Cincinnati Reds 8-7 and Chicago Cubs downed Atlanta Braves 3-1 after dropping the doubleheader opener 1-0.

The Pirates' defeat was their third in a row and ninth in 13 games. In eight of those contests, the hard-hitting Pirates have been held to three runs or less.

Right-hander Dock Ellis, staked to a quick 3-0 lead on Dave Parker's homer, lasted only two-thirds of an inning and allowed four hits, including run-scoring singles by Cliff Johnson and Milt May. The Astros tied it in the second and won it with two runs off reliever Kent Tekulve in the third.

Meanwhile, Houston reliever Jim Crawford replaced Doug Konieczny with two out in the first inning and blanked the Pirates the rest of the way on four hits.

Dick Allen singled home the winning run for Philadelphia in the ninth inning after Garry Maddox beat out a one-out infield single, stole second and went to third on reliever Randy Moffitt's wild pickoff throw. Greg Luzinski walked before Allen's winning hit.

The Giants tied the game 4-4 on Willie Montanez' three-run homer in the eighth off Tom Underwood. Luzinski drove in two runs with his 28th homer and a sacrifice fly.

Ron Cey put Los Angeles ahead of New York with a two-run single off reliever Ken Sanders in the eighth inning. Jimmy Wynn and Steve Garvey, who got the Dodgers' first two runs with solo homers, singled and Willie Crawford sacrificed before Cey's hit.

St. Louis took a 4-0 lead against San Diego on six successive singles to start the first inning against Dan Spillner, and winning pitcher Bob Forsch hit his first major-league homer, a two-run shot in the third. He also singled and scored in the second.

The six first-inning hits were by Lou Brock, Willie Davis, Ron Fairly, Ted Simmons, Reggie Smith and Ted Sizemore.

John Summer' sacrifice fly and Gene Hiser's single were the tying and go-ahead runs in the seventh inning of the nightcap, giving Chicago a 2-1 lead over Atlanta. The Braves won the opener as Carl Morton fired a five-hitter for his 13th victory and Earl Williams drove in the only run with a first-inning grounder.

Five Under Puts Turner in Front

REGINA (CP) — A 51-year-old native of Arizona who has been a professional golfer for 26 years took the first round lead Friday in the Saskatchewan Open with a five under par, 66.

Dick Turner of Mesa, competing in his first pro tournament this year, stayed even par on the front nine, sank a 35-footer on the 10th green and missed only two greens in regulation shots.

One stroke behind after Friday's play were Jason Taukkunen of Vancouver and John Elliott of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Winds gusting up to 30 miles an hour across the 6,430-yard Murray Municipal Golf Course gave late finishers little chance to catch up with the trio, who all started and finished fairly early.

Turner, who has won 56 tournaments but no major ones, tied for 12th with 212 and won $190 in last year's Saskatchewan Open in Saskatoon.

The 105 competitors will be cut to 60 after today's round, with the leader after Sunday's final round taking $2,900 for first place.

Unlike most of the golfers, Elliott, 28, said he hoped the wind "blows the rest of the week." He said he was accustomed to windy Florida courses and finds the wind a challenge.

Oakland Gives Baltimore A Hand in Race with Boston

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Give Reggie Jackson an inch—and he'll hit the ball a mile.

So Reggie Cleveland, a native of Swift Current Sask., found out when Jackson homered with two out in the seventh inning Friday to break up a no-hitter and spark the A's to a 3-2 victory over Boston Red Sox.

"A pitcher with a no-hitter tends to keep in a pattern and do what he did the last time to get you out," said Jackson. "First he came in with a super fastball that just missed on the outside. Then he came in on me. I muscled it. I didn't crush it. I wasn't sure I'd hit enough of it."

After Jackson hit the line drive over the right-field fence, Billy Williams singled and then Gene Tenace hit a two-run homer to pull the A's through.

Until that rally, Cleveland had allowed [illegible] baserunners—a walk and a hit batter. It was the fourth time Jackson had broken up a no-hit bid in the late innings, the most dramatic when he singled off Boston's Marty Pattin in 1970 with one out left.

In other American League games, Baltimore Orioles beat Chicago White Sox 7-4; New York Yankees edged California Angels 4-3; Texas Rangers beat Milwaukee Brewers 6-4; Minnesota Twins beat Detroit Tigers 3-1 and Cleveland Indians edged Kansas City Royals 4-3.

Before the A's rallied, the Red Sox got a run off Ken Holtzman, 14-9, in the second inning on a double by Dwight Evans and a single by Rico Petrocelli and scored another in the fifth with the help of an error.

Dave Duncan clouted his eighth home run and Don Baylor lashed a single and double to lead Baltimore over Chicago. The triumph was the sixth in a row for the Orioles and moved them to within six games of Boston in the East Division.

Baylor's two hits gave him 17 hits in his last 23 times up and raised his batting average to .290.

Despite hitting into six double plays, it was the Yankees' ninth victory in 11 games and sixth in eight starts since Billy Martin replaced Bill Virdon as manager last weekend.

Toby Harrah's two-run homer and a three-run pinch homer by Roy Howell sparked a five-run sixth inning by Texas over Milwaukee.

Milwaukee's Bill Travers, 4-7, who lost his seventh consecutive decision, pitched out of several jams with the help of three double plays until Lenny Randle singled leading off the sixth and Harrah followed with his 15th homer, erasing a 1-0 deficit.

Jim Hughes scattered seven hits to pitch Minnesota past Detroit, saddling the Tigers with their 13th consecutive loss. The losing streak matched that set by the 1920 Tigers and tied in 1953.

Oscar Gamble greeted relief ace Doug Bird with a tie-breaking two-run homer in the eighth inning, powering Cleveland over Kansas City. The loss ended Kansas City's five-game winning streak.

Massey Putts Way to Top

OAKFIELD, N.S. (CP) — Debbie Massey of Bethlehem, Pa., finally put her putter to work Friday and emerged with a four-shot lead in the Canadian women's amateur golf championships.

Miss Massey, the 24-year-old defending champion, had a round of 75 Friday, including a three-under 35 on the back nine, but the four-shot lead is nice," even par for 54 holes.

But trouble on the greens befell Dale Shaw of Victoria, the leader after each of the first two days of play, and she struggled in with an 81.

She shared second spot at 228 with Louise Larochelle of Cap Rouge, Que., Susan Wickware of Toronto, and Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver, a two-time runner-up in the event.

Miss Larochelle had trouble on the front nine Friday, scoring 40 but scorched the back nine for four birdies to close with a 34, the best score on holes 10 through 18 for the tournament.

"I just hope my putter stays hot," the 21-year-old physiotherapist said later.

"I really got encouragement when I made par with a 15-footer on nine. The only problem before today was my putting and it was good today.

"I sure hope I can keep that up."

Miss Larochelle was on the green in required figures all but four times and went over par each time.

Miss Massey was elated over "my best back nine in many rounds" but was shaking her head over the front nine, "my worst for a long time."

She said she thought her putting game Friday "was like a bank."

"I had too many withdrawals on the front side and a few deposits on the back. I still ended up overdrawn one.

Miss Massey, a skiing enthusiast and instructor [illegible] winter months, had her troubles on the greens in two earlier rounds but still scored 74 Wednesday and 75 Thursday, three-putting seven times over the 36 holes.

"That doesn't make it easy but he four-shot lead is nice," she said.

The field was cut to the [illegible] and ties after Friday's round, eliminating from petition golfers whose three-round totals were 251 or more.

Among those starting today are Betty Cole of Edmonton, who had a 231 total after firing a 77 Friday.

Another three strokes off the pace at 231 were Elizabeth Hoffman of Toronto and Shelley Gates of San Rafael, Calif.

Woodie Fryman – Long Time

Long Time In the Making

"That's the first time I've won in this town," said the 35-year-old left hander. "It took me 10 years."

Fryman, who had a 1-10 lifetime record against Cincinnati when the season started, appeared as a reliever Friday night and pitched two innings of shutout ball, preserving an 8-7 Montreal victory over the Reds in a National League baseball game.

Fryman, now 8-8, needed a touch of youth to end the victory drought.

Larry Parrish, one of the Expos' two prize rookies, drilled a ninth inning single—his third hit of the night—to cap Montreal's three-run rally. Earlier he drove in two runs in a five-run outburst to tie the game 5-5.

It also was a night of firsts for Parrish, who started at third base and at one point played shortstop and second base on four successive plays.

"That's the first time I've played shortstop and second since I've been in the majors," said Parrish, whose .283 batting average has projected him into rookie of the year running along with team-mate Gary Carter.

Montreal manager Gene Mauch flip-flopped Parrish at the two positions in order that sure-fielding Tim Foli could better defend against the possibility of pull hitters.

The Expos, held scoreless for five innings by starter Tom Carroll, 4-2, rallied from deficits of 5-0 and 7-5 to snap the Reds' five-game winning streak.

Parrish went undetected by all 24 major league teams and signed as a free agent three years ago. His progress has come through the tutelage of ex-slugger and now batting instructor, Duke Snider.

"You take a youth movement like we've got and you don't have somebody around to lift you up and help you out," Parrish said. "It makes a difference. Over at Philadelphia, Greg Luzinski credits Richie Allen with helping him out. Duke has been the guy who helped me out most."

Cincinnati had taken a 7-5 lead in the eighth on run-scoring singles by Merv Rettenmund and George Foster. Rettenmund had a solo homer earlier to give the Reds a 1-0 lead.

The Expos tied it in the ninth on Mike Jorgensen's two-run single and scored the go-ahead run on Parrish's single.

Pedro Borbon, 7-4, took the loss after permitting four hits in two thirds of an inning.

Palmer Leads

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — Sandra Palmer of the United States, suffering a badly-blistered foot, took a two-stroke lead after the third round of the European Women's Open golf championship Friday with a 72—211.

Miss Palmer had shared the lead with Donna Caponi Young after 36 holes, but Mrs. Young slipped to a 74—213 to share second place with Susie McAllister, a Texan who fired a five-under-par 69, best round of the day, with the help of eight birdies.

Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., shot a 72 Friday for a three-round total of 222. Sandra Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont., and now living in Boynton Beach, Fla., had a 72 and has 223 after three rounds. Both made the three-round cut for today's final round.

Miss McAllister birdied the first three holes and went on to tame Sunningdale's 6,174-yard, par-74 layout although her game was threatened after she was stung by a wasp while she was on the eighth tee.

She canned a 15-foot putt for a birdie at the 10th hole, then got three more birdies after that, but just missed with a 10-footer at the 18th and finished with a bogey.

Two Favorites Eliminated

Underdogs the Hungriest In Industrial Quarter-finals

Though stat sheets can tell you which club should be the best they don't always give a true picture as to which is the best. Statistics don't take into consideration the breaks of the game, nor do they allow for a club's desire. At least two. ball teams will tell you today, desire is a key factor when it comes to playoffs.

In Industrial Softball League quarter-final action, Friday night, the Intelligencer put together an eight-run rally in the top of the fifth inning to eliminate UIC 3-2 in their best-of-five series. At Alemite Park, Constellation Carpets, after recording a near perfect season bowed out of playoff action 3-2 to Brooke Bond and in the third quarter-final match, the Post Office nipped Mead Johnson 3-2 to earn their best-of-five series by the same count. The fourth series, Black Diamond and the Independents was taken three straight by Black Diamond.

Larry Bilham, representative of Brooke Bond, summed playoff action up when he said, "it all comes down to who wants to win the most." While his club was taking an early 3-0 lead in the final game of their series, the Intell was staring at a 7-0 defecit after the first four innings.

The roof fell in at Sir MacKenzie Bowell in the top of the fifth though as the unemployment Insurance crew squandered their seven run margin and found themselves behind 10-7 after five-and-a-half frames.

"I still can't believe we came back," said Intell coach Dave Feeney, "our guys just wouldn't say die."

Friday's contest was actually the sixth of the series as the two clubs had racked up a pair of wins and a tie each.

Ron Culloden, who relieved Joey Edwards in the second inning and was in turn relieved by Jim McKay in the bottom of the fifth, earned the victory. The three hurlers only fanned two and gave up eight hits, including three singles to Ron Embury and two to Ron Jury, but they only walked one batter.

Free bases proved to be the difference in the contest as loser Rich Sullivan walked in the the tieing run. Three free passes, three singles, four ill-timed fielders choice and an error gave the Intelligencer its eight runs and the win.

Maurice Switzer and Kevin Jouda were tops at the plate as they singled twice each to account for four of the winners eight hits.

While UIC, first in the west division, were eliminated by a fourth place club, Constellation, second in the east (missing first by a single game) were knocked out by third place Brooke Bond.

Tom St. Jules went the distance for the winners and Ken Kerik toiled on the mound for the losers. Scoring results from the contest were not available.

Meanwhile Mead Johnson, third in the west came close to knocking off second place Post Office. The Posties had to come back from a 2-1 score to take the series. Sonny Holoway was the loser as he gave up nine hits. Norm Lockhart threw a three-hitter and fanned ten for winners.

Bob Wludyka singled three times and Soup Campbell and Bill Leitch added two each. Campbell's second safety drove in the winning run in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Despite Present Economic Situation

People Still Have Money To Spend on Leisure Time

By RON HIUSER
Staff Writer

Even with present economic conditions the popularity of recreational clubs does not seem to have been affected.

In the last five years the membership was declining says Mr. Henderson but this has changed. Henderson says the club now has about 500 members.

For a senior man to join the club it costs $200; and for a senior woman, $143. Each new member also has to buy a $100 share in the club.

The 18-hole golf course will have a new look later this month with the completion of a $200,000 club house.

Except for curling, where membership goes down during the summer, every other type of activity has increased, says Jim Bowman, country club manager.

About 450 people own social memberships and there is a waiting list for both the senior and junior tennis and golf.

The Bay of Quinte Yacht Club is also one with a growing membership.

"Most of the people joining are primarily interested in sailing," says Dick Bird, past clubcommadore.

Mr. Bird believes there will be a few openings in August, but July's membership is full.

There is an initiation fee of $75 with an annual dues of $55.

During the summer the club offers sailing programs for the general public. Adult sailing courses and a full junior program is part of the agenda.

Once a person becomes a member of the yacht club, there is a gentleman's rule allowing them use of facilities at all yacht clubs.

"Visitors are more than accepted. They are welcomed," he added.

At present the local club boasts about 300 senior members.

Recreational enthusiasts, whether their interests lie in golf, tennis, curling or sailing are filling up rosters of the facilities within the Quinte area.

Referees Abused?

Dear Sir:

Do soccer referees have to be experts in self defence before taking the field?

This is the question local referees are asking themselves this season because of an outburst of violence against match officials.

In several games this season, the referee has been attacked and the linesmen have been pushed around by fans.

In a recent tournament in Belleville, a first-year official was punched by a Toronto Ferma player and cut on the head. This type of conduct is certainly not going to encourage new people to take up refereeing and it is keeping good officials away.

During a Bay of Quinte league game, a Quinte Hellenic player was sent off, but before he went, he kicked the ball at the referee and threatened to punch him.

In Kingston, A Trenton referee sent a player off and was then chased halfway around the field, with a player throwing punches. The same team's fans started pushing a linesman around.

This prompted the Bay of Quinte Referees' Association to pass a rule which states that unless police protection is provided at matches, no referee will be supplied for Kingston Portuguese games, in Kingston.

One hopes that coaches will start to control their players on the field and that leagues will punish severely any player attacking an official because this type of thing can only hurt the game and keep people away.

One thing is certain, for $10. per game, people are not going to go out on the field to referee if they know that someone is going to punch them. If there are no referees, there is no soccer.

"Concerned."

Over 1100 Turn Out

Big Night at Quinte Raceway

More than 1100 racing fans were on hand Friday night at the Quinte Exhibition and Raceway as the card featured two divisions of an Ontarios Sires Stakes Races, as well as a regular preferred race.

Snegem Flight, a heavy favouite took the first division of the Stakes, for three year old pacing colts and geldings, in a time of 2:08:3. Under the rein of William Megens, the bay colt was the one to five choice of his backers, returning $2.20 to win, $2.40 to place, and $2.00 to show.

It was the fifth win of the year for Snegem Flight, bringing total earnings to over $55,000 for the season, on only ten starts.

Goldam Herbert, with Larry Walker the driver was second, paying $2.60 and $2.30 to show, while Ray McLean's Thamesview Herb was third, returning $2.40 to show.

The second division of the two saw Meadowview Tory take away the winners' share of the $4,695 purse with a win over fast closing Delvin Herbert.

Meadowview Tory was driven to the win by Nelson White, in a time of 2:08:1, for his fifth win of the year, in 11 starts. In all but one of the 11, he has been lower than third only once.

Jack Herbert was in the sulky guiding Delvin Herbert, while William Hicks with Arawana Duke, was third.

In the featured tenth race, Charity Chick withheld a late drive by Edgewood Duke to take the $500 Mel Barriage Pace. Charity Chick, with Pat Hunt in the sulky went the mile in 2:09:1, for the four year old's eighth win of the year.

The winner paid $8.00, $3.60, and $2.50 while Edgewood Duke, with David Johnston up, paid $3.50 to place and $2.90 to show.

Third place horse, Mr. Chick, with Jim Mayo, Jr., in the driver's seat, returned $3.00 to show.

The largest payoff of the ten race card came in the third, a $300 condition pace. Chatham Chip, driven by Guy LaRush, combined with Tontine Clara, in front of Walter Demille, for a $93.70 payoff in the quiuella.

Larush also guided Prima Valerie to a win in the fourth race and along with Derek Newman, was one of two drivers to record a pair of wins. LaRush's two wins give him 20 for the meet and a six win lead over second place Hunt, who had only one win Friday night.

The largest crowd of the season so far wagered $43,731.

More Good Luck Than Management

Just Stand Back And Pick a Number

By ALAN TEBWORTH
Staff Sportswriter

With more and more people attending the weekly harness racing at Quinte Exhibition and Raceway, there has naturally been an upswing in the pari-mutuel handle. Betting has been an important part of the horse racing business since the sport of kings was conceived.

The wagering is a game in itself, wide open with anyone eligible to play. The only requirement for entry is at least a $2 bill and a willingness to part with it.

The rules are simple. Give the person at the wicket the money, and recieve a piece of thick paper, about 2½" by 1" ingeniously made to represent a 1200 pound horse while it is running around a tack ranging from one half to three quarters of a mile long.

If the horse represented by your ticket does even as well as third place in some cases, in the race, then one can redeem the chunk of paper for at least 10 cents more than one paid for it.

Sounds like a good investment at first, but, for everyone who makes a dime, there are lots more that lose their $2 bills.

Never-the-less, this willingness to part with hard earned cash is a rapidly spreading habit. The only cure is being flat broke.

We asked a few of those with the bug how they were treating the symptons or, in looser terms, how they spend the money on their picks.

Dale Akey, 23, likes to be his own handicapper when it comes to picking them. "I like to look at the statistics and facts, and go from there." Mr. Akey has been coming to the track for only about three months now, first attending with a friend, who owned a horse that was running. "As far as winning the bucks I think I'm ahead in the game so far," he added.

Wendy Burkitt, a 23-year-old Belleville housewife, picks them by the name. "I go by what their called and if I like the name 'll bet on it. The only horse I bet on all the time is my father-in-laws," Harry Burkitt is Wendy's father-in-law, an area driver. "I guess I'd be about even," Mrs. Burkitt said, "after coming here off and on for two or three years."

Cliff Fox says he's been around horse tracks since he was born. Now 63, he picks the winners from random choice. "Sure, I just play hunches, but sometimes I take a horse with a particular driver."

After many years of watching the nags on many different tracks, including Buffalo's Batavia Downs (his favorite), he says" I don't really think, I'm out anything."

"About the only time I bet, is when our own horse, Terry Gene's Bird, is running says Delores Wiles, 40, of Belleville. "Other than that, I might bet sometimes on the driver." Delores, who has been coming to the races for two or three years, descibes her money making exploits in three words. "Down, down, down".

Mel Gariepy, a 56-year-old Belleville letter carrier, likes to bet the two numbers of his age, in some of the feature races. They're the only really regular ones I bet on. I like to do my own handicapping usually." His tip is to bet on horses that are just coming into their racing best. With his many years of race-going, which include trips to places such as the old Thorncliffe, Woodbine, and Long Branch, he figures it's too hard to gage his fortunes won or lost.

While many may study the program for hours on end, it seems the bettors who are up the most are those who slap down a deuce and coast their fates to the disposition of the drivers and so on. In other words, those contributing the least (in dollars and cents) to the racing game and getting the most (in dollars and cents) out of it are those who really don't know what's going on and don't seem to care if they ever find out.

Roughrider Defence Looks Rough All-round

REGINA (CP) — "I just can't believe what's happened to our defence," defensive coach Jim Eddy said of Saskatchewan Roughriders chances of extending their three-game winning streak Sunday when they meet British Columbia Lions.

"I was just looking at our defensive statistics from last year. Of the top five players, only one of them will be playing on Sunday."

Defensive halfback Ken McEachern is out for the season with a torn knee ligament suffered during Saskatchewan's wins last week against the Eastern Football Conference's Montreal Alouettes (24-20) and Toronto Argonauts (14-12). Also injured on the eastern trip was corner linebacker Bill Manchuk, with a neck injury.

The Western Football Conference team has Lee Benard to replace McEachern but there's no one around to back up Benard. Bob Clarke is listed as Manchuk's backup but McEachern—Ted that is—may get a chance against the Lions.

"From now on, it's going to be an endurance test," Eddy said. "We'll just have to dig in and make the adjustments."

Head coach John Payne has a tough decision in deciding what to do when Jim Hopson, a Canadian guard, and Bob Pearce, an import receiver, leave the injury list. Pearce has a hamstring problem and may not be ready to play but Hopson should be over a sprained ankle.

But the Lions, who have lost their first three games, aren't without problems either. Quarterback Don Moorhead has a muscle injury in his left shoulder, middle linebacker Ray Nettles has a bruised hip, defensive back Rocky Long has a bruised thigh, receivers Ross Clarkson and Slade Willis have shoulder injuries and defensive back Joe Fourqurean has a bruised knee.

Despite his wounded personnel, head coach Eagle Keys is looking for a more aggressive game from the Lions than the team showed in losing 28-13 Tuesday to Calgary Stampeders.

"They beat us physically. I didn't think they could do that, but they did."

Keys plans to avoid giving Saskatchewan an early lead. "Football's a game of momentum. When you get out in front like that you just seem to hit harder and do a lot more things right."

The game, which starts at 4 p.m. EDT, will not be televised.

We Look Bad Again

Just Another Swim Farce

CALGARY (CP) — An Australian hotshot Friday set a Canadian Open swimming record by swimming faster in a consolation race than national champion Stephen Pickell of Vancouver did in winning the main event.

Stephen Badger, an Australian national team member staying in Winnipeg to work with his former coach, was clocked in the 200-metre freestyle consolation in 1:56.41. Pickell overcame a poor position in an outside lane to finish in 1:56.66.

Badger's time was better than Pickell's Canadian native record of 1:56.48. The Australian has a prsonal best of 1:55.4.

About 30 athletes will be selected Monday for the Canadian team to compete in the Pan-American Games trials in Mexico City in October.

Pickell overcame the possibility of a rough passage in the outside lane by breaking quickly and winning as he pleased.

"I like to qualify out there. I know it's risky becuse I might go too slow, but when I'm out there, nobody can keep an eye on me. I can set my own pace."

He also set his own pace in the 100-metre backstroke which he won easily in 58.38 seconds, well ahead of Mike Scarth of Edmonton who finished second.

Impressive victories were turned in by Nancy Garapick of Halifax and Cheryl Gibson of Edmonton.

Garapick won her heat easily in the 100-metre backstroke, then improved her time to capture the final in 1:05.10. Lynn Chenard of Laval, Que., finished second in 1:06.19.

Gibson, a Grade 11 student who passed last year with honors despite time spent swimming, led all qualifiers in the women's 200-metre butterfly and defeated Wendy Quirk of Montreal, current national record holder, in the final. Her time of 2:17.58, within reach of the record 2:17.07, is the second best time by a Canadian woman for the event.

The second-place performances of Chenard and Scarth left them almost certain to qualify for the Pan-Am Games. Neither has swum in previous international competition.

Gail Amundrud of Vancouver won the women's 200-metre freestyle and Bruce Rogers of Toronto won the 200-metre butterfly. Both titles were won easily.

Amundrud defeated Ann Jardin of Montreal in 2:05.59 and Rogers cruised to a 2:06.78 clocking as he defeated promising George Nagy of Vancouver.

Pickell and Jim Adams led the Canadian Dolphins club of Vancouver to a record 1:36.63 in the men's 200-metre freestyle relay, lowering the club's former national standard of 1:38.37.

Sisters Wendy and Jill Quirk helped Jardin spark Montreal's Pointe Claire club to a 1:50.05 clocking in the women's 200-metre freestyle relay, erasing the Canadian record of 1:50.12 previously held by the Dolphins.

Crampton Sets New PGA Mark

AKRON, Ohio (Reuter) — Bruce Crampton has one of the most enviable records in golf, and finds himself close to accomplishing a goal he has never reached — winning a major championship.

The Australian took a three-stroke lead Friday after two days of play in the 57th Professional Golfers' Association national championship at th Firestone Country Club.

BRUCE CRAMPTON

He had a course record seven-under-par 63—the lowest round ever recorded in the PGA—and his 134 total equals the lowest 36-hole mark in the tournament's history. Jerry Barber also was at 134 in 1959.

In second place at 137 is Hale Irwin, winner of the 1974 United States Open, who has two wins this year on the U.S. tour—Atlant and the Western Open. Irwin used a hole-in-one as the springboard to a five-under-par 65.

Jack Nicklaus put himself in position for the final two days with a 68 Friday for a 139 total. He is tied for third place with Bob Wynn and Mark Hayes, capable players even though they have not won on the PGA tour. Nicklaus is after his fourth PGA crown.

Only two other players are under par: Ed Dougherty, who joined the tour last spring, and John Schlee, a veteran. Al Geiberger, winner of the 1966 PGA, J. C. Snead and club professional Maurice Ver Brugge are at even-par 140.

Gary Player of South Africa is at 142. The road will be difficult for Arnold Palmer, who never has won a PGA, and defending champion Lee Trevino, both at 145.

Johnny Miller's 152 missed the 36-hole cut. It took a score of 148 or less to make it, which 71 players did.

Crampton has won 15 times in the U.S. since he joined the tour in 1957—his latest last spring in the Houston Open—and is 11th on the money list with $99,812. He is fifth on the all-time list with more than $1 million.

"To be quite honest, I didn't know 63 was the course record or tournament record," he said. "I purely was trying to swing the club smoothly. I was not concerned about the numbers.

"It's an honor to be leading the PGA, but it would be even nicer if this was Sunday night."

Irwin aced the 180-yard 12th, using a five iron. The ball took one hop and jumped into the cup. As for his chances: "I think I've put in my apprenticeship. I know what I can do. I've always believed in myself."

Quebecois Four Points Out

MONTREAL (CP) — Ross Jones scored three goals to pace Montreal Quebecois to a 10-7 win over Maryland Arrows in the only National Lacrosse League game Friday night.

The win moved the Quebecois, with a 22-19 won-lost record, within four points of first-place Long Island Tomahawks.

The Quebecois outshot Maryland 56-35 and held a commanding 22-9 edge in the second period when they outscored the Arrows 3-1 to pull away from a 3-3 first-period deadlock.

Earlier Friday, league commissioner Gerry Patterson suspended Art Seekamp of Long Island for one game as a result of a shoving match with referee Noel Turner in a game last Tuesday night. Seekamp also was fined $100.

Play resumes Sunday night when the Tomahawks invade Montreal and Philadelphia Wings visit Landover, Md.

Lumsden Hits Lake

TORONTO (CP) — Kim Lumsden, 18, of Toronto entered Lake Ontario at Youngstown, N.Y., early today in an attempt to break the record for fastest lake swim set last year by Cindy Nicholas of Toronto.

Miss Lumsden has been in training for almost a year in an attempt to better the record of 15 hours, 18 minutes.

Boyce vs. Bardsley In Canadian Final

WINNIPEG (CP) — Jim Boyce of Toronto will have the odds against him when he faces third seed Tony Bardsley of Vancouver today in the finals of the men's singles at the Canadian national tennis championships.

Boyce, who advanced to the finals of the $12,000 tournament at the Winnipeg Canoe club after upsetting second seed Dale Power of Toronto Friday, has never defeated the 30-year-old Vancouver veteran.

"Tony's tough," the 24-year-old Boyce said after surprising the veteran Power, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4. "He's really playing well. If it's windy out, he's going to be trouble. I'm just going to try to run, that's all."

Bardsley, making his third appearance in the national finals, advanced to the final round of the championships by eliminating top seed Rejean Genois of Loretteville, Que., in another upset victory.

"I think it's going to be third time lucky," Bardsley said after the triumph against Genois.

Bardsley, winner of the 1975 Alberta Open, is confident heading in the finals, which features first prize money of $1,500 for the winner and $750 for the runner-up

"I've beaten him (Boyce) about six or seven times," the six - four, 190 - pound Bardsley said after the victory over Genois. "But he's a tough guy to play."

Boyce was asked what style of attack he will employ against his older and more experienced opponent.

"It will be a long game if I have anything to do with it," Boyce said, adding he will attempt to use high lobs to reduce the advantage of Bardsley's height and weight.

Bardsley used his physical attributes to great advantage in the match against Genois.

After falling behind in both sets, Bardsley rallied with hard serves and accurate backhands to defeat the 22-year-old Genois in two consecutive sets.

While admitting that the wind affected his concentration, Genois refused to blame the loss entirely on the elements.

"When it's windy, I don't have as much confidence as usual," said a disappointed Genois. "I just couldn't serve. I hate to talk about the wind because it's the same for him as for me. The wind should have been to my advantage, but I didn't use it."

Finals in the men's and women's doubles and women's singles are scheduled for Sunday. The final match in the men's singles is scheduled for today to take advantage of television exposure.

In women's semi-final matches today, top seed Jane O'Hara meets third seed Andre Martin of Montreal, while second seed Susan Stone of Vancouver faces fourth seed Vera Komar of Cambridge, Ont.

Winner in the women's singles competition will take home $800, and the runner-up will receive $400.

In Sunday's women's doubles final, Andree Martin of Montreal and Susan Stone of Vancouver will play Vera Komar of Cambridge, Ont. and Cris Corcoran of Vancouver.

Admiral's Cup

Canada Ready For Final Event

COWES, England (CP) — After a week of mutiny and maddening calms, the Canadian Admiral's Cup team sets sail today for one of ocean yachting's finest races, the 603-mile Fastnet.

"We are in good shape again," said team captain Gerhard Moog of Toronto on the eve of the final event in the Admiral's Cup competition—considered the world championship of ocean racing.

But it has not been a great week for the three Canadian boats, placed 16th in a fleet of 19 countries with the first three races completed.

Britain leads with 542 points followed by the United States with 495, West Germany with 491 and New Zealand with 444.

The Canadian team, first ever to enter the Cup competition, has 229 points, ahead of the Belgians, Brazilians and South Africans.

"We in effect had a mutiny on the Canadian boat Diva," Moog said Friday, after her Norwegian owner and a fellow Norwegian bitterly complained about the Canadian skipper's tactics.

Owner Johan Sommerschield, who had chartered his Finnish-built Canadian-designed Diva to Bruce Sully of Goderich, Ont., was finally kicked off the crew along with his countryman.

Canadian spirits were not improved when Moog's own Dynamo caused a collision during an inshore race Monday and was forced to withdraw.

"We had an over-eager helmsman," sighed Moog.

In that race, Diva and Vladimir Plavsic's Kanata, from Vancouver, placed in the bottom quarter of the 57-boat fleet.

Breezes have been light all week, but fell even more for Wednesday's inshore race, leaving much of the fleet in a dead calm. Some crossed the finish line after dusk only with the aid of an incoming tide.

In that race, however, Dynamo sailed home in the top quarter and Kanata, designed by Plavsic and favored in light airs, did almost as well. Diva, plagued with crew problems, was near the bottom again.

Dynamo placed in the top half in the competition's first event, a two-day race, last weekend. Diva was among the bottom half and Kanata came dead last.

NFL Jumps Into Action

By THE ASSOCIATED PReESS

Football makes its debut tonight in Louisiana's $163-million sports palace—some eight months late—but more than $1 million worth of work still must be done inside the 30-story structure.

Sunday, Detroit Lions are at Oakland Raiders and Cleveland Browns at San Francisco '49ers in day games with New York Giants at New England Patriots in the evening.

"It's good for a quarterback," said Archie Manning, the Saints' No. 1 signal caller. "You don't have to worry about the shoes you'll have to wear, the wet ball, or things like that."

The Saints expect about 76,000 for the Superdome's first football game. The building has a listed capacity of 81,000 for football.

Houston's Bum Phillips will be one of six coaches making their NFL debuts this weekend. The others are Green Bay's Bart Starr, Kansas City's Paul Wiggins, Chicago's Jack Pardee, Baltimore's Ted Marchibroda and Cleveland's Forrest Gregg.

Alberta Nips Defending Champs

Alberta pitcher Clint Marshall stymied the team from the territories, striking out 16 batters while allowing only two hits. Losing pitcher Merv Chuddy gave up nine Alberta hits but had both hits for the Territories.

The Albertans now have two victories in as many starts while Yellowknife is winless in two outings.

Alberta scored one run in the first inning, then exploded for three in the sixth on fourth hits, including a triple by Bruce Marshall.

In other games, Saskatchewan's Saskatoon Junior Jacks edged British Columbia Abbotsford Sport Shop 2-0, New Brunswick's Loggieville Condors thumped Quebec's Hull Volants 10-3 and Manitoba's Winnipeg Junior Colonels stopped Ontario's North York Nationals 4-1.

Perry Comeau paced the 10-hit New Brunswick attack with a home run, a triple, for four runs batted. He also crossed the plate three times himself. George Miles batted two singles for Quebec.

Manitoba scored all the runs they needed in the first inning when Ontario catcher Steve Finan threw the ball away on a wild pitch after a strikeout, allowing two runs to score.

The Winnipeg squad added to its total in the fifth when Howard Witty singled in one run and then scored a second on a wild pitch.

Connors, Laver Clash

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (AP) — Jimmy Connors survived a scare from 19-year-old Victor Pecci of Paraguay 7-6, 2-6, 6-4 and defending champion Rod Laver of Australia defeated Norman Holmes 6-0, 6-2 to advance to a showdown in the semi-finals of a $100,000 international tennis tournament.

This afternoon's Connors-Laver match will be a return bout of the challenge match in Las Vegas last February. The 22-year-old Connors, top-ranked player in the world, defeated Laver, the only man to win the Grand Slam of tennis twice, in four sets in their only career meeting.

In the other semi-final, second-seeded Ken Rosewall, 40, of Australia, will meet third-seeded Ilie Nastase of Romania, who defeated Ray Moore of South Africa 6-3, 6-4.

Rosewall beat John Alexander of Australia, the No. 5 seed, 6-0, 6-3.

Misty Grand Returns Investment

TORONTO (CP) — Misty Grand, three-year-old trotting filly bought for $800 as a yearling at a Toronto sale, won the Canadian Standardbred Horse Society's Futurity at Greenwood Raceway Friday to pick up $7,672.

Trained and driven by Jack Powell, Misty Grand finished two lengths ahead of My Girl to pay 3.30, $2.40 and $2.20.

Meanwhile, Chapel Lite won the first race paying $47.20, $15.00 and $6.50, and combined with second race winner O Happy Day for a daily double worth $137.50.

Sunday and Monday Horoscopes

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Sun Aug 10

ARIES (March 21 - April 19) Today will try your patience. You can cope. Don't say something you'll later regret.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could clutter your driveway with a lot of little projects you'll never finish. Concentrate on one. Complete it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're on the restless side today. You'll be anxious to reach your destination and you'll then be in a hurry to get someplace else.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Personally take charge of any of the fragile and precious possessions you use to entertain with today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Keep your seat belt buckled and your eyes on the speedometer. You could have a heavy foot today if you're not careful.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Money has a tendency to burn a hole in your pocket today. You could wreck next week's budget before you realize it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's not a good day to use high-pressure tactics to serve your self interests. It will have the reverse effect.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you're the victim of a frustrating incident today, let it pass. Harping could blow it out of all proportion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A friend may spy you taking it easy today and call on you to use your strong back to help him with chore.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't try to collar people you're with socially into doing something to further your ambitions. They'll resent it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your ideas are good today, but you won't have the patience to see them through. Shelve them temporarily or you may lose the urge.

For Mon Aug 11

ARIES (March 21-April 19) There's opportunity round you today through those you come in contact with, yet it's likely you won't see the forest for the trees.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Quantity means more to you today than quality. What could appear to be a big bargain may actually be a lot of little, worthless pieces.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're apt to place more emphasis on having a good time today than you should. Keep the aspirin handy and your diet in mind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your household budget can only be stretched so far. Wait till you can buy what you want without having to pay excessively.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A plan of importance to you is sound. It should work, but you're too easily influenced. You'll change it unwisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Continue to be careful again today in managing your resources. Though you may anticipate additional funds, deal only from what's in hand.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be wary of one today who may promise more than he can deliver. Bank too heavily on his words and your hopes could later be dashed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Watch your step talk too freely about a confidential matter to one who has a problem keeping secrets.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is not the time to try to modify arrangements you've made with another to better suit your ends. Honor your agreement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't press your luck today where your reputation is on the line. The line you're out on is a weak one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be extra attentive today to chores so routine you do them by rote. They're the ones that could give you a headache.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be careful in business situations today if you're offered something on the side for going along with the deal.

CALL BOXES TO GO

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — There will be no more fire-alarm call boxes in Lethbridge after Sept. 1. "It's an outdated system," said Deputy Fire Chief Jim McKenna. Less than one per cent of the calls the fire department received from the boxes were fire calls. Most were false alarms. The fire department will switch to a new communications system in September to which all city buildings, schools, hospitals and other major buildings will be connected.

Boy's Fat Breasts Disturb Mother

By G. . THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son, who is nine years old, is large around the waist and has slightly enlarged breasts. We thought it was just baby fat he would outgrow.

But I was told he has something called "Frolich's syndrome," and that he should get some injections to correct this.

Would my son outgrow this without injections? This is something we have never heard of.—Mrs. S. M.

I can understand your concern, but I suggest you move slowly. First of all, who told you he has "something called Frolich's syndrome"—a doctor, or a friend, who has "heard of it"?

This is a rather rare disorder. Pubertal fat is not, and this type of corpulence is most often found in young boys of pubertal age. In some, the problem is one of delayed or late puberty. Frolich's consists of a definite pattern that is rather easily detected. It includes small genials, diabetes insipidus, evidence of pituitary gland disorder—and obesity. If the suggestion about Frolich's has you concerned (and well it might), then you should have a physician conduct appropriate tests to either cofirm it or ease your mind about it.

If obesity runs in your family, this can also account for the fatness. It may only be chubbiness. Nevertheless, overweight in youngsters should not be accepted, because it can lead to obesity in later years. This is serious enough, but far less so than Frolich's syndrome would be.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I recently went to my doctor for a lump protruding from my vaigna. He told me I would need an operation to correct a dropped bladder. I also awaken during the night with a painful pressure on my rectum.

Could this bladder problem be the cause of this, or does another problem exist?

Seven years ago I was operated on for removal of my uterus and ovaries. Could this have caused my bladder problem? I am 57. Is this operation dangerous?—Mrs. L. D.

The "lump" you noticed was undoubtedly the wall of the your urinary bladder sagging. The discomfort in the rectum could be due to a similar condition at the rectal wall.

Both (the former is called a cystocele, the latter a rectocele) are the result of a weakening of supportive tissue of the pelvis. Both tend to occur together. This tissue-weakening process occurs often with age, and having had babies can add to the stretching and weakening. It is doubtful that the hysterecomy seven years ago was a factor in your present problem.

The operation ahead would be to tighten the weakened muscles and offer more support for the bladder and the rectum. If not treated, the sagging bladder could result in a puddling of urine and incomplete urination. The puddled urine can be a source of infection. The untreated rectocele can create difficulties in bowel movement and all that entails.

All things considered, it would be wise to take your doctor's advice and have this surgery, which is not considered to be terribly serious.

CONFIENTIAL TO MRS. D. B.—Inability to achieve orgasm is not at all unusual among young married couples during the first few months. It is too early to suspect some physiological reason. Time, persistence and a bit of imagination may work wonders. Relax and enjoy your new life together. The rest will take care of itself. It usually does.

HOPE TO SAVE ROADS

KITCHENER, Ont. Results of the study will be given to the region's engineering committee this fall.

Probably the most elegant of all squeezes is the criss-cross. It doesn't come up too often, but when it does it is a thing of beauty.

North may have overbid a trifled when he bid four and five notrump, or maybe South shouldn't have jumped to seven. In any event the average bridge player would be unable to work out the 13th trick, since East was sitting right in back of dummy with all the clubs and diamonds.

The late Charles Lochridge, who played this hand some 35 years ago, had no trouble with it.

He won the heart and promptly cashed four trumps. East discarded a club and a heart. Then Charley led the second high heart. He chucked a diamond from dummy and East chucked a diamond right in back.

By this time Charles was so sure that East was sitting with three diamonds and four clubs that he led a fifth trump, discarded dummy's last low diamond and showed his hand.

He explained that if East threw another diamond, he would cash dummy's ace-kings of both minor suits, criss-cross back to his hand by ruffing a club and make the last trick with his eight of diamonds.

Ask the Jacobys

A reader from Mississippi asks, "We play 16-18 point notrumps. What should I open with: ♠ J 5 3 ♥ A K Q 9 7 ♦ K 2 ♣ K 10 8?

The answer is one notrump. When your hand meets all notrump requirements you should bid notrump in preference to even a five-card major suit. If you open this hand one heart, you are likely to be lost at your next turn. When you open one notrump you will have eliminated almost all future problems.

Explosion Unlikely

PICKERING, Ont. (CP) — A person could probably smuggle explosives into the Pickering nuclear generating plant but not in suffiicent quantities to do any serious damage, plant manager Kevin Keane said Friday.

He disputed allegations by Dr. Morton Shulman, NDP member of the Ontario legislature for High Park, that six sticks of dynamite could explode the used-fuel supply and wipe out the population of Toronto.

OTTAWA (CP) — A formal request has been made to the United States government to accept former South Vietnamese general Dang Van Quang as a deportee, the immigration department said Friday.

French No Problem

QUEBEC (CP) — The use of French as well as English in five air traffic control towers in Quebec presents "no safety problem at all," Yves Dupre, chief controller at the Quebec City airport, said Friday.

He was reacting to a threat by the Canadian Airline Pilots Association that it will stage a strike Oct. 17 unless the federal transport department halts experiments in bilingualism at airports in Quebec City, Sept-Iles, Baie Comeau, St. Jean and St. Honore.

She won $10,000 and said she had never won anything before "'except at bingo." She plans to use the money to pay off the house mortgage.

Opposition Hits Gasoline Excise

OTTAWA (CP) — Following a second consecutive monthly jump in living costs, opposition parties renewed criticism Friday of what they claim are government measures that are contributing to inflation.

Statistics Canada reported the consumer price index rose 1.4 per cent in July. The June increase was 1.5 per cent.

Higher food prices accounted for about half the July rise in consumer prices, while the 10-cents-a-gallon excise tax on gasoline for private use, announced in the June 23 budget, contributed one-third.

Andy Hogan (NDP—Cape Breton-East Richmond) said the full effect of "this regressive and basically unfair" tax is only starting to be felt.

Similar views were echoed in a statement by James McGrath, consumer affairs critic for the Progressive Conservatives.

Still to be reflected in the index are a $1.50-a-barrel rise in domestic crude oil prices that will add another five cents a gallon to prices for gasoline and other fuels later this month.

Mr. McGrath also criticized Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan for increases in the July costs for eggs, dairy products and milk, saying that Mr. Whelan likes to boast about federal policies in these areas.

"It must be clear to all by now that those policies are, in fact, a complete failure . . . ," Mr. McGrath said.

Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the Food Prices Review Board, said the July increase is about what the board had anticipated and that something must be done to halt the spiral in wages and the decline in producitvity in a sectors of the food industry. She offered no suggestions.

On a year-over-year basis, the food component of the index stood 14.8-per-cent higher last month than in July, 1974. The over-all index rise was 11 per cent.

Food prices were up 2.3 per cent last month and 3.3 per cent in June. Only clothing showed a fractional decline during July.

The index measures a mix of items a typical consumer is anticipated to require and is based upon a 1967 survey. It stood at 186.5 in July. This means a basket of consumer items that cost $100 in 1961 had risen to $186.50 last month.

Inflation Still Here

OTTAWA (CP) — When Prime Minister Trudeau pledged anew this week to defeat inflation, his words had a familiar ring.

"It's something we absolutely must solve," he told reporters before starting his summer holiday.

The prime minister has made similar statements since he took office in 1968, but gave no indication this week that any changes are planned in the current anti-inflationary program.

"I'm . . . not announcing anything today," he said at a news conference a day before Statistics Canada announced that consumer prices rose 1.4 per cent in July—11 per cent from July, 1974.

U.S. Plans Challenge Of Canadian Egg Quota

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States will challenge the legality of Canadian controls on imports of U.S. eggs before an international body and will open an immediate investigation of its own into the recently-imposed restrictions.

High-level U.S. sources told The Canadian Press on Friday that Canada has been asked to join in an action planned before the council of the General Agreement on Tariff and Trade (GATT) in Geneva, but that they have not received a response.

The sources said the U.S. will ask GATT next week to investigate the Canadian quotas and rule on their legality.

A government spokesman in Ottawa said Canada is not worried by the U.S. action and that "as far as our people are concerned, there's no problem."

Meanwhile, the office of the White House special trade representative is initiating a formal investigation of the Canadian action at the request of two U.S. agricultural groups—the United Egg Producers and the American Farm Bureau Federation.

The trade office has a virtually unlimited mandate under the 1974 U.S. Trade Act to recommend a vast range of retaliatory measures if it believes quotas to be unfair or illegal. A formal announcement of the investigation will be published Monday, the sources said.

The Americans decided to take action under GATT regulations a week ago and discussed this with Canadian negotiators who flew to Washington for a meeting last Wednesday, the sources said. However, they added that there had been little progress in the talks.

The U.S. action came as something of a surprise since it followed a major agreement, announced Wednesday, on easing import controls on cattle and some meat products between the countries, a serious source of dispute in the past.

The quotas which took effect July 5 will permit foreign exporters to supply only .36 per cent of the Canadian domestic market in 1976 to protect the prices—and profits—going to producers in Canada.

The only foreign supplier of any size to the Canadian market is the U.S. and the quota figure is arrived at by determining the five-year average of U.S. imports between 1969 and 1973 and applying that average to Canadian egg production for the same period.

The Americans contend this base period is unrealistic since it represents times when U.S. exports were extremely low. As a form of compromise, U.S. sources said, the Canadians proposed to raise the quota to .52 per cent of domestic production. The sources said Canadian officials also offered to limit voluntarily their exports to the U.S. using exactly the same formula.

One source said "there are two concerns involved here, one is practical and the other is a matter of principle."

On the practical side, even the enlarged Canadian quota would permit in only 54,000 cases of 30-dozen eggs a year and "we could have sold at least 200,000 cases up there this year if there were no controls," the source said.

The principle, which the U.S. government wants to establish firmly, is that there must be free trade across the border in the interests of consumers and producers in both countries.

Dog Helps

TORONTO (CP) — With aid from a helicopter and tracking dog, provincial police Friday recaptured three Ontario men who escaped Thursday from Camp Hendry, a minimum-security prison 20 miles west of Orillia.

The dog, brought in from Burlington, flushed the men out of a culvert near Highway 27 about five miles north of Metropolitan Toronto.

Lennox Station Will Sit

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro's new, $500-million Lennox generating station has been programmed to stand idle most of the time after it goes into service later this year, the Ontario Energy Board was told Friday.

Figures presented to the board by Hydro at an inquiry into proposed rate increases show the new station near Kingston has been assigned a "load factor" of 20 per cent for 1976 and 1977 in the expectation its annual output will be only 1-5 of that hypothetically possible.

He said the current plan is to use Lennox only when the Pickering and Bruce nuclear stations, the coal-fired Nanticoke, Lakeview and Lambton stations and the gas-fired Toronto Hearn station are working at capacity and more power is needed.

Catholics Fight United-Way Member

TORONTO (CP) — The Council of Catholic Charities said Friday it "was not prepared to comment" on why it opposes the membership of Planned Parenthood of Toronto in the United Way campaign.

But, said Rev. Paul Lennon, the council's assistant director, "we may be dealing with some of those things when everything has cooled down."

In June, the council told the United Way that members of the Catholic Women's League would not canvass if Planned Parenthood remained in the campaign.

The volunteer agency, which provides birth-control information and pregnancy counselling, including abortion referrals, was accepted for membership in the United Way last December.

However, a few days later, United Way officials said further meetings were needed because the full range of the agency's activities were not understood."

Three Die in Ulster

IRA May Terminate 6-month Ceasefire

BELFAST (AP) — Irish Republican Army (IRA) militants warned that they would "reconsider" their six-month ceasefire after three persons died in a weekend of violence marking the fourth anniversary of internment.

Angry mobs backed by sniper fire stoned British troops in a three-hour battle that erupted Sunday night in the Falls Road after the peaceful conclusion of the largest march in the North against the British policy of jailing suspected IRA guerrillas without trial.

At least 64 persons were injured and 60 arrested. Authorities said there were 28 shooting incidents.

Protestant and Roman Catholic gangs clashed as the demonstrators headed home. Snipers then backed up youths who threw stones, bottles and tin cans at the troops. Vehicles were set on fire to block troop movements and shops were looted and burned.

The army rushed in reinforcements in trucks and armored cars from barracks outside the city. Several hundred rounds were fired but no soldiers were hit. The army reported wounding five persons.

The dead included a four-year-old girl identified by local residents as Siobhan McCabe. She was caught in the cross-fire when she tried to run across the road to her grandmother's house in the Catholic Falls Road district.

Police identified the other two victims as Patrick Crawford, 15, a Catholic who died Sunday night after being shot in a separate incident on the grounds of the Royal Victoria Hospital near the Falls Road, and Martin McMenamy, a 17-year-old Catholic whose bullet-ridden body was found in Belfast early Saturday.

The weekend deaths brought the total of lives lost in Northern Ireland's six years of sectarian violence to at least 1,267.

The IRA's Provisional wing claimed army "harassment" and warned that unless it stopped the IRA would "reconsider the position regarding the cease-fire" which has been in effect since Feb. 10. The IRA wants to unite the North with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

Seamus Loughran, northern organizer of Sinn Fein, the Provisionals' political arm, told the demonstrators it would take more than the release of internees to satisfy the IRA. He said violence would not stop without a total army withdrawal from the North.

Interment was introduced after British security forces said they were finding it difficult to get witnesses to testify in court against suspects for fear of reprisals.

Under the ceasefire truce, 346 internees have been released. Last month the minister for Northern Ireland, Merlyn Rees, said he hopes to release the remaining 230 by Christmas if Northern Ireland is peaceful enough.

Authorities said violence also spilled over to the Irish Republic. Police, troops and 1,000 demonstrators battled outside Portlaoise Prison near Dublin where some IRA leaders are jailed.

200-mile Sea Limit Opposed By Kissinger

MONTREAL (CP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger today supported Canada's reluctance to declare unilaterally a 200-mile off-shore economic zone and said the U.S. was ready to take new steps to make future law of the sea negotiations successful.

Mr. Kissinger told delegates to the American Bar Association convention that the U.S., like Canada, supports the idea of a 200-mile economic zone for maritime states but only on the basis of broad international agreement.

He called for new efforts to reach a consensus on the development of offshore fisheries and mineral resources and said he "warmly welcomes" Prime Minister Trudeau's statement last week that unilateral action would lead to serious problems.

No Word Yet On Ontario Vote

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis stoked the fires of speculation that he will call a provincial election today as he interrupted a scheduled six-day tour of Northern Ontario to return here Sunday.

The Canadian Press learned Friday that Mr. Davis was poised to call Ontario's 30th general election for Thursday, Sept. 18.

If the premier does set that as the election date today, he will be giving the minimum 37 days campaign period allowed by law.

Sources close to Mr. Davis had said Friday he would interrupt his northern tour and announce the election at Queen's Park today—one week after the 32nd anniversary of unbroken Progressive Conservative government in Ontario.

Typhoid Outbreak Alarming

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The provincial ministry of health has confirmed that fourteen persons who attended the Light and Life Free Methodist camp in July have typhoid.

The ministry described the outbreak as "one of the most serious in North America in at least two decades."

Provincial health laboratory technicians are taking samples of potentially-fatal bacteria from the camp's water and septic tank. Health officials have extended investigation to include food and milk suppliers to the camp, north of here, during the three weeks it was open in July.

Dr. Vera Soudek, acting medical officer of health for Kingston, has been in touch with more than 200 persons in the area whose names appeared on camp lists. She said health officials are looking for persons who did not sign the list.

A total of 30 persons are confined in hospital isolation, with 10 persons confirmed as being contaminated with typhoid. The other confirmed cases are in Chatham, Ont., Collingwood, Ont., Belleville, Ont. and Michigan.

Consider Law First

Supreme Court Refuses To Hear Gandhi Appeal

NEW DELHI (AP) — The Supreme Court dealt Prime Minister Indira Gandhi a setback today, refusing to hear her appeal of an election law conviction until it determines the validity of a one-day-old constitutional amendment which would acquit the Indian leader.

Mrs. Gandhi's lawyers asked the court to overturn her June 12 conviction immediately, arguing that the constitutional amendment had erased the guilty verdict.

But the five-man bench headed by Chief Justice A. N. Ray rejected the request. The court set Aug. 25 for the start of the hearings on the amendment, further delaying resolution of the case which has touched off India's worst constitutional and political crisis since independence in 1947.

Lawyers from both sides estimated the court would require at least two weeks just to consider the constitutionality of the amendment which was signed into law by President Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed on Sunday.

Shanti Bhushan, chief lawyer for Mrs. Gandhi's opponents, told reporters after the brief hearing that if the amendment is upheld by the court "the case against the prime minister would automatically lapse."

The amendment being challenged by Bhushan states that courts no longer have jurisdiction to hear election cases involving the prime minister, the president, the vice-president and the speaker of Parliament.

It also declares that any court judgments involving the prime minister "shall be deemed always to have been void and of no effect"—thus setting aside the June 12 conviction of Mrs. Gandhi.

Bhushan said the Supreme Court's decision to consider the constitutional amendment "further demonstrates the continuing independence of the Indian judiciary."

He said he would argue that the amendment is illegal since it alters the basic structure of the constitution by limiting the powers of the Supreme Court.

Bhushan said he would use as a precedent a 1973 Supreme Court ruling that a constitutional amendment cannot change the basic tenets of the constitution, in this case by altering the powers of the Supreme Court—an institution enshrined in the constitution.

Mrs. Gandhi was found guilty of two charges that she illegally used government officials to aid her campaign.

Cypriot Refugees Exchange Homes

PAPHOS, Cyprus (AP) — The main square of Paphos resounded Sunday with the sobbing and wailing of elderly women abandoning their homes after a lifetime.

They were among 505 Turkish-Cypriots heading from the Greek-Cypriot-controlled south to the Turkish-occupied north of this war-divided island under a new agreement.

As soon as the Turkish-Cypriots left their homes, they were taken over by Greek-Cypriot refugee families who have been kept from their homes in the north since the Turkish invasion a year ago.

Many of the departing Turkish-Cypriots handed over the keys of their homes to the Greek-Cypriot refugees with pleasure, "to look after them well," as one said.

"We shall take care of your homes in the north also," said another of the Turkish-Cypriots who will be resettled in the north on the property abandoned by the 200,000 Greek-Cypriot refugees.

The Turkish-Cypriots were allowed to take everything except their furniture.

They were transferred under an agreement reached in Vienna last week during the Cyprus peace talks. Implementation of the agreement started Saturday and is expected to end early in September.

When the transfer is completed, all 140,000 Turkish-Cypriots will live in the northern 40 per cent of Cyprus under Turkish occupation, and the bulk of the 500,000 Greek-Cypriots will be in the less-productive south.

Blood in Car Is from Fish, Hunt for Hoffa Continues

Bloodstains on the upholstery of a seized auto proved to be fish gore, a source close to the investigation said Sunday. The FBI would not comment on the results of its chemical analysis.

The 62-year-old Hoffa vanished 12 days ago after telling his family he was going to a luncheon engagement with reputed Mafia figure Anthony Giacalone and two other men. Hoffa's car was found the next morning in the parking lot of the restaurant. No solid clue to his fate has yet surfaced publicly.

In predawn hours Saturday, FBI agents seized a car belonging to Giacalone's son Joey. Hoffa's foster son Charles (Chuckie) O'Brien had told the FBI he borrowed the car and was driving it near the time and place where Hoffa dropped from sight. O'Brien said the car seat was stained with dripping blood from a thawing 40-pound salmon he delivered that day to Teamsters vice-president Robert Holmes.

Agents confiscated the car to determine whether it was involved in Hoffa's disappearance.

Catholics Set Fire to Reds' Quarters

BRAGA, Portugal (AP) — Hundreds of demonstrators set fire today to a party headquarters sheltering 20 Communists, destroying most of the building, officials said. Three of the demonstrators were wounded in a clash with police, but the condition of the Communists was not immediately known.

The crowd, including many militant Roman Catholics, regrouped after a night of violence that left 30 wounded, then pushed past troops guarding the building and set it ablaze. When firemen tried to put out the fire, the demonstrators at first prevented them from working, but the firemen finally were able to keep the flames from spreading to adjoining buildings.

Police said the Communists still inside the building had sought protection at its rear and refused to come out. It was not known what injuries they may have suffered in avoiding the blaze.

Earlier, several hundred Portuguese marines with automatic weapons, clubs and tear gas battled until dawn to protect the Communists inside their headquarters from a mob attacking it in this northern city.

It was the strongest show of force yet by the armed forces in the conservative north where four persons have died in violent protests against the leftward trend of the military-dominated government.

Police said injuries in the Braga clash were caused by stones and paving bricks thrown by the crowd and by shotgun fire from the besieged Communists. Some of the injured were in serious condition.

The attack followed a march through Braga by an estimated 50,000 Roman Catholics protesting against the regime's leftist policies and the military takeover of the Catholic radio station.

About 500 demonstrators tried repeatedly to storm the Communist headquarters, but were held at bay by bursts of gunfire into the crowd from the besieged Communists.

However, other mobs wrecked a Communist party library, the office of a pro-Communist lawyer and the headquarters of the NDP, a Communist satellite party.

Commandos and marines were called in to protect the Communist party headquarters, but for nearly three hours the crowd hurled rocks and paving stones over the heads of the troops at the building, smashing windows and injuring at least one soldier.

The troops eventually forced the mob back with tear gas. Firing their weapons into the air, they chased the demonstrators up side streets and called in trucks and armored troop carriers to seal off the approaches to the building.

Liberal Candidate Choice Awaits Election Call

Quinte riding Liberals were waiting today for Ontario Premier Bill Davis to announce an election date before they announced a riding nominating convention date.

Rising association president Lyn Harrington said Sunday, "when the premier announces the election, we will have something to say immediately afterwards."

In a Canadian Press story Saturday, it was stated the premier is poised to call his election today.

Tonight Quinte riding Progressive Conservatives will choose a successor to retiring MPP and minister of correctional services Dr. R. T. Potter.

"If we are ever going to have a chance at winning this riding, it will be during this election," said Mr. Harrington. He would not comment who would likely be running for the Liberals in the election and said only that the candidate will be a local member of the party.

"I expect there'll be a contest for the Quinte riding nomination . . . at least two candidates," he said.

Mr. Harrington said "while it may not look it on the surface, area Liberals are well-prepared for the election."

He said the party has already made arrangements to hold the nominating convention in Centennial Secondary School in Belleville but that the date will not be announced until after the election has been called.

He said campaign headquarters in both Trenton and Belleville have been lined up but that final location choices will be made by the candidate.

Questioned whether the Tory nomination meeting Monday is affecting the Liberal nomination, he said only that "it has a bearing."

A Sept. 18 election, the date most experts are predicting for the vote, will give local Liberals more than enough campaigning time, said Mr. Harrington.

"Five weeks is a long campaign . . . one in which we plan to work very hard," he said.

Rochester Drum Corps Takes Cavalcade Title

The Grenadier — Yardmen Drum Corps of Belleville and Kingston placed second overall and also won the award for the Best Color Guard in the third annual Cavalcade of Corps held Saturday night, at the exhibition grounds.

Four other bands — from Rochester and Troy, N.Y., Sudbury and Emmaus, P.A. were also in the competition.

It was color and pageantry as over 2,000 people attended to see the band Phoenix from Rochester win not only the Best Drum Corps, and the Best Horn section, but also the first place trophy over-all.

Third place was awarded to the Imperial Knights from Sudbury.

The other two bands in the competition were the Sentinels from Emmaus, P.A., placing fourth and the Interstatesmen from Troy, N.Y., fifth.

The official scores were Phoenix with 78.18 per cent; the Grenadier—Yardmen with 66.15 percent, the Imperial Knights having 63.08 percent, the Sentinels, 61.45 percent and The Interstatesmen with 55.96 per cent.

The bands were judged by 12 officials who came from Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey for the competiton.

The head official, Jim Prine said the corps were evaluated "upon their marching; execution of play; and how they entertain, they (the corps) show us".

Formed in 1974, Phoenix has captured many awards including the 1975 Veterans of Foreign Wars championship, and placed second in the New York American Legion title.

Earlier this year, the combination of the corps from Belleville and Kingston formed the Grenadier — Yardmen Drum Corps to produce an impressive group for competition.

A spokesman for the Grenadier — Yardmen Corps said he was pleased with the outcome since there were about 30 people of the 95 members in the corps who had no previous experience in competitions.

The trophys were donated by the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 99.

McTaggart Clan Re-unites To Mark Quinte Arrival

The McTaggart clan gathered in Belleville Sunday morning — the second home coming the family has held here in two years to celebrate the arrival in Quinte Country of the ancestors.

The family bible shows that 201 years ago, Cpl. James McTaggart fled from oppression in the United States. Along with other United Empire Loyalist families, he brought his wife and children to the Belleville area.

Highlight of the weekend homecoming celebration was a trip to the corporal's grave — a site still marked in Foster cemetery in Sophiasburg, Prince Edward County.

After the visit to the cemetery family members returned to Belleville's Ben Bleecker auditorim for a talent show and sing-song.

While most of the McTaggart family is concentrated in the Quinte area, others have found homes across Canada and much of the United States.

Last year, when the first reunion was staged, more than 400 family members arrived for the celebration.

Mildred Wannamaker, a key figure in the local organizing committee, speculated the reunion might have to be spaced every five years or so to ensure a large turnout.

Two Trucks Collide

PLAINFIELD — A 21-year-old Plainfield man has been charged with failing to yield in connection with a two-car collision on Highway 37 at the north junction here Sunday.

Police said a 1963 Plymouth driven by Bruce Casey, 33, of RR 2, Stirling was southbound on Highway 37 following a transport.

They related that a 1972 Chevrolet pickup truck was stopped at the stop sign of Concession 7 and crossed to the west side of the highway after the transport, failing to see the Casey vehicle and colliding with its left side.

Windows Smashed

Vandals broke four windows at Quinte Secondary School Sunday causing a total damage of $40.

Police chief Douglas Crosbie said the broken windows were observed on a routine check. To date no one has been apprehended.

McTaggarts Meet

Driver Sought

PLAINFIELD — Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville are investigating a hit-and-run accident which occurred late Sunday on Highway 37, just south of O'Brien's Bridge and south of the government-run hospital for the mentally retarded near this hamlet.

A police spokesman said today Donald Pelletier, 27 of Willowdale was southbound on the highway in a 1975 Plymouth when he encountered a northbound vehicle in his lane.

The spokesman said Pelletier steered his car onto the shoulder but it was sideswiped by the unknown car. A description of the hit-and-run vehicle was unavailable by press time.

Shaft Snaps, Bridge Closed for 12 Hours

TRENTON — Operation of the Dundas St. swing bridge returned to normal today after a drive shaft snapped shortly after noon Sunday and forced traffic to detour to the D.J. MacDonald bridge for 12 hours.

Trenton works commissioner Arie Horrnweg said today the shaft was replaced by 12:30 a.m. today and operation was returned to normal.

It was the second time in less than two months the bridge was kept open for boat traffic and closed to vehicular traffic. In early July a shaft broke and the bridge remained open for about 24 hours.

Mr. Hoornweg said a sister shaft broke Sunday. However, this time, the town had a spare shaft to install, unlike on the first occassion and repairs were made with less disruption.

"It paid off to make the spare after the first time," he said.

Replacement of the broken shaft Sunday was done by six works department men and was estimated to cost $1,000.

Recycling Studied

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (CP) — A trial project in citizen waste recycling is under way in Birkerod, a town of 22,00 people 13 miles from here. While participation in the experiment is voluntary, almost every house is displaying a sticker in the window indicating the inhabitants are co-operating. Figures for the first month of the one year experiment show that 127 tons of recyclable waste were collected — 82 tons of paper, 45 tons of glass and metal.

Alarm Box

Belleville firemen responded to the following calls in the last 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. today:

— firemen were called to 48 Dundas St. E. at 1.43 p.m. Sunday when a fire broke out in garbage cans. There was no damage.

— firemen were called to a grass fire at 40 Tice Cres. at 1.56 p.m. Sunday, there was no damage.

Hockey Yardstick as Inflation Climbs, People Demand More, and Ottawa Drifts

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Would it be too late to have 1975 redesignated as International Inflation Year?

A young man named Bobby Orr believes his talent as a hockey player is worth $10-million, although he'd be generous enough to accept $250,000 a year (that's nearly $700 per day, year-round) guaranteed for life.

At the supermarket, coffee prices have already taken a big jump because much of Brazil's coffee crop—which wouldn't have come to market for weeks—has been destroyed by frost.

At the gasoline pump, the price went up 10 cents a gallon (excise tax) in late June and is due to take another jump soon because of the higher price of crude oil, domestic and imported.

Then there are the intangibles. An increase in Unemployment Insurance premiums has cut everyone's take-home pay. The interest cost on borrowed money keeps going up. Airport taxes have risen 67 or 100 per cent, depending upon your destination. Health-insurance premiums are sure to cost more.

Even the price of newsprint is rising—which is a good reason to cut short the list of examples.

Conventional wisdom, confirmed by experience, used to be that prices don't rise—or at least not excessively—during recessions.

That's no longer the case. In the recession that started last year, Canada's annual rate of inflation has never been less than seven per cent in any month, and has been more than 10 per cent most of the time; in June, the rate was 10.4 per cent.

As if in defiance of the law of supply and demand, and in spite of the highest unemployment rate since at least 1961, the cost of labor—as measured by contract settlements reached in the April-June quarter—is rising by 18.8 per cent a year. (The comparable U.S. rate of wage inflation is 8.3 per cent).

"Wage and salary increases are running well above the increase in the cost of living," Finance Minister John Turner said in his June 23 budget speech.

But economic reality doesn't seem to mean much, either, to a federal government whose leader gives no economic leadership at home, preferring to concentrate on the largely symbolic international conference held recently in Helsinki.

It would be pleasant to share the government's apparent belief that inflation will somehow go away, or—if it doesn't—it's not such a bad thing anyway.

Inflation, after all, doesn't have much effect on politicians and the work of people in the public service. Their jobs are safe, and the flow of tax revenues grows ever larger with inflation.

Such equanimity doesn't come so easily to others—people on fixed incomes, for example, or the men and women who have lost their jobs because our products are becoming too expensive to sell in competition with foreign goods.

There is sure to be more social upheaval as people in essential services—such as hospital workers—relate their worth to that of hockey players or grain handlers.

Already it's apparent that working people are devoting more effort than ever before to the strategy necessary to protect their purchasing power, and correspondingly less effort to the job itself.

But at some stage the government will surely have to abandon its policy of drift, and accept its responsibility to lead the way back to price stability.

Drinking Driver Menace

In the latest journal of the Ontario Traffic Conference, of which Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie is secretary, there are some grave reminders of the high risks involved in driving a car these days.

Of all the people now living in Ontario, 12.5 per cent, or no fewer than 962,886 persons, will be killed or injured in a motor vehicle accident within the next decade.

Over the next 40 years, 32 per cent of the current population will be killed or injured. That means more than 2,500,000 people, or something like the same number of people living in Toronto.

Over a lifetime, it is pointed out, a person has more than a 50-50 chance of injury in a car accident, a situation aggravated by the fact that even good drivers can be victims, through the carelessness or irresponsibility of others.

Some chilling facts too about the impaired driver as revealed by a federal survey: The chances of meeting a driver who has been drinking are twice as great between 1a.m. and 3 a.m. as between 10 p.m. and midnight. The percentage of drinking drivers and impaired motorists appears to be equal in all regions of the country. Drinking drivers are more likely to be found on medium high-speed roads, and there is little difference in drinking habits between urban and rural drivers. Male drivers are twice as likely to have been drinking than women, and divorced or separated motorists are more likely to have been drinking than single or married motorists.

There is the promise in Ontario of stricter enforcement, with breathalyser tests, for instance, of persons leaving bars. The need is there, and we hope such measures have effect. It is significant that in Maryland, a massive police crackdown on speeding drivers is yielding results. The same kind of zeal is needed here to curb both speeders and/or the drinking driver.

Easy for Wrongdoers

A convicted murderer described by authorities as "unpredictable" failed to return to Joyceville last week.

A familiar story, except that this one was of unusual concern locally. The man was on his way to Loyalist College to register for a course. It was said also that he had been given leave to visit in the Brighton area.

Whether or not this man is apprehended again is one thing, but what must be worrying a lot of people here is why an individual who has been convicted of murder and is described as "unpredictable" is permitted to go free in the first place.

Given the outcry of recent times about the prevalence of crime and the ease with which weapons fall into the wrong hands, and the assurances from Government spokesmen that something will be done, it might be supposed things would be getting better.

The evidence suggests otherwise. It suggests also that prison authorities continue to take risks that jeopardize public safety. Another case in point is the report of a rape in Kingston, the victim a nun and the suspect a man out of prison on a pass.

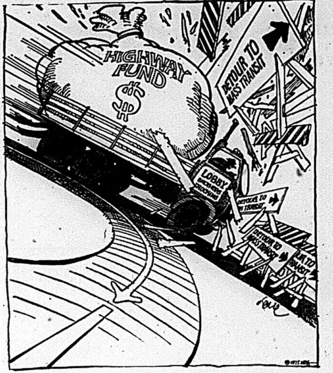
So long as the Government and prison authorities pay only lip service to measures necessary to public safety, so long can we expect this kind of hazard to continue.

City Plant Resumes Production

International Hardware is back in action again. The strike of several weeks is over and that is good news for all concerned.

The pickets had become a depressingly familiar sight while the stoppage continued, and when they appeared even on Sundays it seemed that things had gone too far.

Now, instead of pickets, the scene from early morning is the familiar one with cars packing the parking lot — and inside business as usual. Let's hope it will continue.



King of the Road

Noise Is a Problem of Our Day

Brantford Expositor

In this ever noisier world, the dollar cost of din is climbing and the fight against dinflation has barely begun.

It is not just a matter of hushing the general blare called noise pollution. It goes beyond the rising racket in our streets as fuel-wasting vroom-vroom pests ape jack-rabbits and bombard every eardrum within reach.

The damage noise does to human beings has become one of industry's major problems, the compensation bill for impairment of hearing on the job is soaring. Unlike some other industrial diseases, damage to the inner ear caused by loud noises over long periods cannot be reversed.

Noise-induced hearing loss became recognized as an industrial disease in Ontario in 1947, and the first compensation claim was made in 1950. Since then, the rapid advance of industrial technology has made excessive noise a possibility in most plants.

One hearing loss claim can cost a firm from $5,000 to $10,000. In Ontario in 1964 industrial hearing loss incidents totalled 14. Last year there were 983, an increase of over 6,900 per cent. In the five years 1956-60, Ontario claims cost $80,600, an average of $16,000 a year. In the four years 1971-74, the total cost of claims shot up to $2,748,000 or an average $687,000 a year, a 171-fold increase.

On the factory front the Industrial Accident Prevention Association of Toronto is doing battle by inviting firms to ask it for a noise level survey of their plants and by holding two-day seminars for plant personnel on noise control. The trifling cost, about $30 would seem a sound investment in efficiency and lowering compensation costs.

Black Africa in Ferment

Yorkshire Post

Much of Black Africa is beginning to get alarmed at the prospect of becoming an ideological battleground in the Sino-Soviet quarrel and the centre of a new East-West Cold War Such fears have led some African leaders to seek a better understanding with South Africa and to hope for a peaceful and realistic settlement of the Rhodesia problem.

Their emotional commitment against apartheid and white colonialism might still be total. But they see the stability and independence of their own countries threatened by sinister developments which have nothing directly to do with the existence of a white-ruled South Africa and a white-ruled Rhodesia. It is this climate of fear which might, in fact, pave the way for a realistic negotiated settlement in Rhodesia. For it is inconceivable that black Rhodesians are any less worried by the continent's power struggle than are their independent neighbors to the north and the west.

The race, one of five to be run here for four days, is officially dubbed a long distance predicted log race open to the Lake Yacht Racing Association and Canadian Entrants and U.S. power squadrons. Entrants are acquainted with the course by charts but must predict the time of their arrival at various check points along the route. The trophy goes to the entrant whose times of arrival at these locations coincide most closely with his predictions.

Anti-Dief Convention Chief Rooting for Flora Mac D. One of Party's 'Red Tories'

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — How to run for the Conservative leadership without really running?

Do it like Flora MacDonald, old party pro, darling of the Toronto Tory establishment and for three years, through two elections, the Conservative MP for the Eastern Ontario constituency of Kingston and the Islands.

Miss Flora Isabel MacDonald, a 49-year-old redhead and one of the party's small — but enormously vocal — "Red Tories," as they call themselves, made a great fuss recently when it was reported she had declared her leadership candidacy.

No such thing as a direct declaration has been made.

No need for it when one of the party's powerful Toronto insiders, Mr. Edwin "Fast Eddie" Goodman, has made it for her.

"Fast Eddie" long ago staked out his claim to Conservative clout as it is laid on from Toronto, and was chairman of the convention that repudiated former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker and took Nova Scotia Premier Robert Stanfield as leader.

Mr. Goodman, like Miss MacDonald, is a friend and associate of Conservative Dief-destroyer and king-maker Dalton Camp.

Mr. Camp and Miss MacDonald worked together, Flora has related, in doing in Dief.

Dalton played his part as party president, and Flora, to have heard her tell it, worked out of a Kingston motel on the long distance lines, contacting and activating anti-Diefenbaker forces in the party.

Now, front and centre, and in writing, is Mr. Goodman, with his Toronto "Five to Fifty for Flora" organization.

It is operating out of suite 1500, at 101 Richmond street west, and on its formal letterhead, and over his signature, "Fast Eddie" Goodman writes:

"There are many people both with in and without the Progressive Conservative Party who feel it would be in the best interests of the country for Flora MacDonald to become leader of that party.

"Certainly, it is important that her views be heard."

(In the House of Commons they have been heard frequently and at length, Miss Flora being a prominent member of the party's small left wing in Parliament.

"At the present time," continues Mr. Goodman, "Flora is travelling across Canada to ascertain whether there is sufficient support for her candidacy.

"This will cost a considerable amount of money and I have agreed to assist in raising money to enable Flora to continue to discuss her candidacy with leading members of the party and public in all parts of the country.

"Flora has told me that you are either a personal friend of hers or have indicated an interest in having her seek the leadership.

"I am therefore asking if you would make a contribution of a sum not to exceed $50 to assist Flora — if there is anything else that you would like to do to assist Flora, please let me know.

"Yours sincerely, Edwin A. Goodman."

There are at least 12 others in the Conservative caucus in the House of Commons who have leadership aspirations.

Almost certain to make the bid are Ontario Conservative MPs Allan Lawrence and Sinclair Stevens, Quebec MPs Heward Grafftey and Claude Wagner, Alberta MP Jack Horner, and B.C. MP John Fraser.

The story some of them are telling is that the Toronto Establishment was running Flora to round up the women's vote and then throw it to John Fraser.

But when the Toronto party bosses made a quiet survey of the convention scene, the forecast showed Flora running well ahead of Fraser.

So there she is now: the choice and apparent favorite of Tory nabob and moneyman "Fast Eddie" Goodman.

UK Cuts Museum Funds

The Irish Times

Mr. Douglas Cooper, who for man years has been a controversialist in Britain's art world, has written to The Times applauding a recent decision by the British Government to cut down the amount of money given to museums for the next three years.

The staff of the museums involved have complained that this cuts by half what they need for new acquisitions, and Mr. Cooper says it is healthy to prevent them from becoming "inflationary speculators." He favors a policy of infrequent acquisition, larger displays of works now in cellars and more money for museum staff.

Until George Bernard Shaw left a third of his estate to our National Gallery, it had in modern terms insufficient funds to buy even third-rate pictures. The modern gallery in Charlemont House had no money at all for acquisitions. Clearly Mr. Cooper's message is not meant for us.

The day will come when the Shaw writings go out of copyright, and when that happen, there is going to be a problem if art prices remain at even half what they were before the recession. It is, therefore, very important that a policy should be decided upon by the Director and Trustees of the gallery. Are there conspicuous gaps in the national collection? Should they be filled? If so, can this be best achieved by saving and accumulation: If prices fall there may be new opportunities, but will there have been a corresponding fall in the value of the Shaw bequest? How much the nation is indebted to this one, great man.

Whitlam's Troubles

Daily Express (U.K.)

The Australians, at long last, are calling their Labor government to account.

Mr. Whitlam has been the most accident-prone of Prime Ministers in Australia's history — to the point of being regarded patronizingly as the leader of a newly independent colony instead of a continent rich in talent and natural wealth. But now he is fighting for his political life. The sheer incompetence and mal-administration of his government are by-words around the world.

The parliamentary debate with its allusions to corruption and attractive secretaries and much else, could be the start of another political scandal in the same league as Watergate. Mr. Whitlam believes he has the answers. But he hasn't heard all the questions yet.

This is where the Senate, Australia's Upper House, has a duty to ensure that what is suspected in Australian political life is thoroughly investigated — for the sake of the country's international integrity and democratic government.

Nixon Wants to Help North but Some Ideas Unrealistic

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — If Northern Ontario happens to want its streets paved with gold it should ask

It probably would get at least one favorable nod of agreement.

Liberal Leader Bob Nixon has been making forays into that vast land lying north of the French River.

During them he has been unveiling his program for Northern Ontario.

And from some of his points one suspects he is so hungry he would promise anything.

Among the points he has come out for so far are:

Location of the head office of the ministry of natural resources in the north.

A five cent reduction in the tax on gasoline to equalize prices with the south.

Expansion of the Northern Development Corporation to include on its board of directors all elected northern MPPs.

A special income tax credit to equalize the cost of living with southern Ontario.

Some of these and other proposals make good sense—such as the plan for the development corporation.

But others are quite unrealistic.

Nixon says that Liberals believe that every Ontarian, no matter where he lives, should have the same opportunities and the same standard of living.

Culture, for example, is a component of the standard of living.

Then is the person in Gogama going to have the same opportunities for cultural enrichment as the person in Toronto?

Of course he isn't. Any more than the resident of Toronto is going to have the same opportunities as the residents of Gogama.

Particularly frustrating is that old shibboleth about moving natural resources to the north. Nixon doesn't say whether he would shift the minister there also, but others have in the past.

If he did, or the government did, there would be a great turnover of ministers of natural resources. They would have to do so much flying back and forth to Toronto that break downs would be as frequent as the common cold.

What a good many people don't realize is that a good share of the business of natural resources ministry is done in southern Ontario.

Northern Ontario has its big timber limits, but nevertheless a good share of our wood supply (I think it is one-third) comes from the south.

The second largest pulp and paper centre in the province is Thorold (next to Thunder Bay).

For these and other reasons, no matter how much sympathy one has for the north, Toronto, a central lcation, is the best spot for natural resources.

Rollins Gets List of Homeowner Complaints

TRENTON — Burttdale Heights residents now are waiting for builder Maurice H. Rollins to study a list of their complaints over deficiencies in the construction of subdivision homes.

John Rittwage, chairman of an ad hoc householder committee, says the list, compiled since a meeting with the builder July 30, was submitted to Mr. Rollins last week.

A meeting with the builder had been scheduled for today but it was cancelled suddenly Friday.

The meeting was agreed to July 30 to negotiate areas in which the builder was responsible for repair of faults householders claim exist in their homes.

Mr. Rittwage said the 19-page list contains complaints from 50 householders in the 74-home subdivision in north-east Trenton. Built under the Home Ownership Made Easy (HOME) plan, house prices range up to $18,000.

Individual homeowners list faults from 33 in one house to four in another.

The committee chairman said homeowner lists were not culled for "deficiencies" for which the Belleville builder is not responsible.

But Mr. Rittwage said "We want it made quite clear that we want what we're entitled to and not what we're not entitled to." Nail pops he said are not the builder's responsibility, but were included in the master list to serve as a bargaining point.

Mr. Rollins of Maurice H. Rollins Construction Ltd., says his company will study the complaint list for the three weeks agreed to with residents. He expected a meeting with the ad hoc committee will take place in the last week of August.

In July, Mr. Rollins emphasized he was extending the one-year warranty period on subdivision homes "until the house is finished to your (owner's) satisfaction or an inspector's satisfaction."

He denied householder claims structural faults existed in homes and said his company had been waiting to correct all warranty items at one time in all homes about a year after the last subdivision home was sold in November, 1974.

Involvement by Mr. Rollins began after a 43-name petition was made public amid complaints by Burttdale home owners that the builder was promising, but not acting, to correct faults.

Mr. Rittwage said the success of the petition and reaction by Mr. Rollins prompted other subdivision homeowners — originally afraid to sign the petition — to submit complaint lists.

He predicted the eventual builder-committee meeting will be a "heated evening" because "we're not going to let him (Mr. Rollins) get away with much."

Park Becomes Classroom

BLOOMFIELD — James Ives, assistant park superintendent for Outlet — Sandbanks Provincial Parks will be kicking off the fall schedule of The County As A Classroom program with a presentation on Sandbanks Park at the Park office Sept. 16.

Co-ordinator for the Community Education program, Susan Greetham of the Prince Edward Board of Education, says the program is being presented this fall as part of continuing education in the county, and, hopefully, from the topics suggested in a community survey distributed in the spring, many interests will be developed and explored.

Mrs. Greetham says a list of program topics will appear periodically in the newspapers under coming events and that no registration or fee is required for attendance to any of the programs presented for the 1975-76 season.

Cemetery Meeting Quiet

PICTON — President of the Glenwood Cemetery Company, Louise Cook of Picton, said this weekend that no complaints were registered Saturday at this year's annual meeting, held at the Cemetery Chapel.

"We are always ready to listen, but no-one came to complain; in fact we received a vote of thanks for our work," reported Miss Cook.

The Cemetery Company president reported that a committee was formed at the meeting to discuss the possibility of a Glenwood Cemetery Auxiliary, composed of people willing to donate funds or their time in helping to maintain the cemetery.

Limited finances in the past has resulted in problems in the regular upkeep and maintenance of Glenwood Cemetery. Town Council recently authorized a grant to the Cemetery board to assist them, and said Miss Cook, an application has been made to the Local Initiatives Program (LIP).

Tents Slashed

OUTLET — Picton OPP say that a rash of tent slashings during the past week in Prince Edward County, halted after the apprehension of the vandals responsible, has started again. Two tents were slashed Friday night at a camping area, owned by Frank Waite, west of here. The tents were unoccupied at the time and nothing was taken.

Annual Society Service Honors Marine Dead

By TERRY SPRAGUE
Staff Correspondent

SOUTH BAY — "The largest crowd ever" attended this year's Mariners' Memorial Service here Sunday at South Bay Church, adjacent to the Mariner's Memorial Park and Museum say organizers.

Chairman of the Prince Edward Marine Society Phil Dodds, estimated the attendance at 500. "We sold 50 memberships, collected over $200 in the service offering and went through 500 cups of hot and cold drinks and 35 pounds of cookies."

Among those attending the service were the officers and crews of the training brigantines, the Playfair and the Pathfinder of Waupoos and the cutter Trident, and the brigantine St. Lawrence from Kingston. Also in attendence were Prince Edward-Lennox MPP, James Taylor, historian Willis Metcalf, and Clifford Walker, reeve of South Marysburgh Township and Warden of Prince Edward County.

In his opening address Warden Clifford Walker noted the Mariners' Museum at South Bay is one of few such museums in Ontario. He gave special recognition to Willis Metcalf, "without whose efforts this would never have have been started."

Guest speaker for the service was Rev. Edward Schamerhorn of Bowmanville. In his sermon he made reference to Gene Hackman, who in The Poseidon Adventure, led a small party of survivors to their eventual rescue.

"They could only do their best by human standards", commented Rev. Schamerhorn, "the rest was up to God. All things rest in the hands of God. The mariners whom we are honoring today must have known this."

Six deceased mariners and fishermen were given tribute by the society.

Honored Sunday were the memories of Arthur MacDermaid, a ferry operator; Frank Lancaster of East Lake, a lakes sailor for many years; Nelson Moore of Pointe Petre, Ben Cole of Milford, Fred Thurston of Picton and Roy Clark of Picton, all of whom were fisherman at various times.

Winner Weighs In

Radio Association of Trenton member Elmore Baitley measures a 3½-pound pickerel caught by John Zoppi, 12, of Cory Cres. during the club's first annual fish derby in the Trent River Saturday. The nearly 22-inch fish gave John the best fish award in the intermediate class (ages 12-17). Over 60 people entered the day-long derby.

Youth Charged In Fatal Crash

CARRYING PLACE — Picton OPP said this weekend that a RR1, Carrying Place youth, 16-year-old David Wayne Carr, has been charged with careless driving as a result of a two-vehicle collision, four miles south of here Friday night. In that accident, involving a dune buggy and a motorcycle, John Chase, also of RR1, Carrying Place, was killed.

Cyclist Injured

CONSECON — A 20-year-old Scarborough youth was taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital with undetermined injuries Saturday night when the motorcycle he was driving went out of control on Country Road 29, west of Consecon. Injured was Fred W.J. Holmes. Picton OPP estimated the damage to the vehicle at $100.

4-H Members Tour Stockyards

PICTON — 4-H Agricultural members and their leaders from Prince Edward County participated in a bus trip to the Toronto area Wednesday. Sponsored by the Picton Ministry of Agriculture and Food, the 43 members toured the Ontario Stockyards at Toronto and the Shur Gain Research Farm, Maple.

Garbage is coming up roses.

Twenty years from now, crops growing on recycled garbage will be an everyday sight.

That's pretty hard to imagine right now because most of us think of garbage as just that—garbage. But in fact, it's a potential resource.

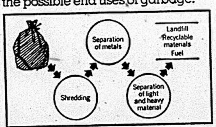
And the Ontario Ministry of the Environment is harnessing it.

How does it happen?

By recycling. Garbage will be taken to recycling centres where it will be shredded, separated, and some of it, turned into fertile soil to revitalize barren areas of the province.

The same basic shredding and separating process will also produce fuel, paper, cardboard, metals.

And we've just begun to explore the possible end uses of garbage.



The system: step by step.

A centre for advanced research will come up with many more.

Where is it happening?

Our Ministry has already inaugurated Ontario's first recycling centre in North York. In the next two years, similar centres will be built to serve London, Sudbury, Peel, Halton, Metro Toronto and south eastern Ontario.

In 15 years there will be recycling centres all across the province to handle 90 per cent of Ontario's garbage—everything from abandoned cars to organic waste.

Why recycle?

Because the people of Ontario—all of us—pile up garbage at three times the rate that the population increases.

The Ministry is working on ways to reduce that amount, but we'll always have garbage. And we're having trouble finding places to put it and the landfill to cover it.

Once garbage is being recycled, those problems will be over. But more important than the dumping problems, we're literally throwing away valuable resources with every ton of garbage we discard.

In a community of 100,000, garbage recycling will conserve the equivalent of up to 3,500,000 gallons of fuel oil a year, 3,600 tons of reclaimed steel, 4,500 tons of glass.

Our recycling program is considered one of the most advanced in the world. It's a commitment to a different way of living.

And the whole world will be watching Ontario's garbage come up roses.

Quinte Cuisine

"This no-baking recipe is great for women who work," says Margaret McQueen, nursing supervisor at Sir James Whitney School. But friends of Mrs. McQueen who have tasted these pecan-caramel cream square says that this delicious dessert would be worth making even if it weren't easy, and asked that the recipe be published here.

Pecan-Caramel Cream Squares

16 vanilla caramels (¾ cup)
24 large marshmallows (4 cups)
½ cup milk
1 cup chopped toasted pecans
1 cup whipped topping
1 cup graham crackers crumbs
4 tablespoons melted butter or margarine

Put caramels, marshmallows, and milk in top of double boiler. Place over, but not touching, boiling water. Cook, stirring occasionally, till mixture is melted and smooth, about 25 minutes.

Combine cracker crumbs and butter or margarine. Reserve ¼ cup crumb mixture; press remaining crumbs mixture into bottom of 10 by 6 by 2 inch pan. Turn caramel mixture into pan; sprinkle with reserved crumbs.

Chill several hours or overnight. Cut into squares.

Bev and Sandra Bush, 4-H Homemaking Club members, pick a zucchini from their summer project garden patch, but don't relish the idea of eating it for supper. They chose zucchini as the one vegetable they'd never grown before (a requisite of the project); and have discovered they don't have a taste for it at all. Naturally, the zucchini vines are flourishing better than any of their favorite vegetables.!

Hot Weather Hasn't Helped Homemaking Club Gardeners

Out hoeing in their gardens this summer, 130 young people in Hastings County are battling dry weather conditions as they work toward completion of their 4-H Club credit.

Under the supervision of county home economist Kate Follwell, members of 4-H Homemaking Clubs are tending the six types of flowers and 10 kinds of vegetables they planted as a summer project. Their goal is to have top-grade produce to show at the 4-H Achievement Day at the Quinte Exhibition grounds, Saturday, August 16.

Two sisters who have worked expecially hard at their gardening are Beverly and Sandra Bush, of Bushaven Farm outside Stirling. Bev., 17, has been a 4-H member for five years, and Sandra, 13, is a two-year member, but both have been well-acquainted with garden chores "for years." they say.

"We've always helped in the garden," says Bev. "But this is the first year that the Homemaking Club has had a garden project, it's always been under the Agricultural Club before. We're members of both River Valley clubs. For the summer, through, we belong to the Stirling Green Thumbs Club, a union of four local clubs just for this project.

"Besides keeping up our gardens, we're responsible for putting together a record book of our club meetings, information about vegetable diseases and insect pests, and our own gardening progress.

"Of course, the real reward of having a garden is the fresh produce you get. But we've had trouble with several vegetables because of the lack of rain."

The Bush family's cattle get first crack at what water there is, and the garden has to take second place, as it does on most farms. As a result, Bev and Sandra are disappointed with their tomato crop so far, say that their onions are smaller than they've ever seen them before.

However, the girls think their peanut crop might do well, and expect their strawflowers will be a success. Optimistically, they are thankful that the dry spell has kept the weeds down too, so their hoeing has been kept to a minimum. It really hasn't been too much work, they say, keeping their fingers crossed for rain before they must pick the best of their crop for their club's display.

The public is invited to attend the Achievement Day program during the afternoon, when skits and displays will take place in Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Jones

Jones — McMechan

Melrose United Church was the setting for the July wedding of Gail Lois McMechan and Gregory Thomas Jones, in a service conducted by Rev. Tom Page assisted by Robert Thompson.

The bride is the daughter of Ken and Lois McMechan of RR 1, Shannonville, and the groom is the son of Thomas and Isabel Jones of Lindsay.

Given in marriage by her father and mother, the bride wore a gown of white dotted swiss organza with an empire and A-line flounced skirt, trimmed with green lace daisies. Her shoulder-length veil of illusion tulle was held by a headpiece of organza rosettes. The bridal bouquet was of white daisies and yellow roses.

Lorraine McMechan, sister of the bride, was maid of honor in a mint green dotted swiss gown with puffed sleeves and a flounced skirt trimmed with white daisies. She wore a white pictures hat with a cluster of daisies on the brim, and carried a nosegay of these flowers as well.

Bridesmaids were Susan Spencer and Patricia Coffey, and junior bridesmaid was Lisa-Elizabeth McMechan, the bride's sister. The attendants were dressed identically to the maid of honor, although the junior bridesmaid wore ribbons in her hair instead of a picture hat.

Gary Jones of Young's Point, the groom's cousin, was best man. Ushers were Rick Harding and Sandy Kilgour, both of Toronto.

A dinner in the church hall followed the ceremony, and a dance in Gilead Community Hall took place later in the evening.

Cookbook Is Coming!

Pouring over recipes for the past week, three judges are coming closer to choosing winners in The Intelligencer's Cookbook contest.

Kate Ann Follwell, Hastings county home economist, Elsie Whitmore, active Women's Institute member and Stan Leversedge, head of food services at Belleville General Hospital, are in the midst of the difficult selection process, but expect to have decisions made by the end of this week.

There will be four winners chosen, one in each of the following categories: main course dishes, vegetable and salads, desserts, and miscellaneous recipes. The winners will be treated to a dinner for two at area restaurants, and also receive $25 each.

All participants in the cookbook contest are eligible for the draw prize of merchandise and gift certificates from local merchants.

The Cookbook, including more than 300 recipes submitted to The Intelligencer contest, will be published August 28.

Hot Bath Prevents Jam Mold

If you are having a problem keeping mold from growing on the surface of your jam — even with a paraffin wax coating, you might try "processing" your next batch. Food specialists at the Ontario Food Council, Ministry of Agriculture and Food say that some jams can be processed in a hot water bath processor to ensure a well sealed and sterilized batch.

Jams made without added pectin can be put into regular mason jars on special jam jars with lids that will pull a seal. Apply the lid thighly and process for 5 to 10 minutes in enough hot water to cover the jars completely. Count processing time after water begins to boil rapidly.

Do not use wax when processing jam in this way. The hot water bath processing gives a better seal, removes air from the jar and destroys any mold that may be present on the top surface of the product.

Remember, do not heat-process any product made with added pectin. The additional heating will destroy the gel-forming ability of the pectin and result in a thin product.

Ann Landers

Can He and She Roomies

Dear Ann Landers: We'd like to know what you think of the latest wrinkle in housing arrangements. It's career women sharing apartments with single men. No sex, they say—word of honor, just a nice, wholesome platonic relationship that works out well, especially for the female. Why? Because, she says, a male room-mate is less nosy, more responsible, neater and better organized than the single, working woman.

I asked a certain gal who is involved in such a living arrangement, "What about your reputation?" She replied, "You must be kidding. The new morality has changed all that nonsense. No one pays any attention anymore. Only the squares and dried-up Puritans frown on this great setup. And who cares what THEY think?"

Your opinion is wanted.—Undy-sided

Dear Undy: A couple of swinging singles, just living together for convenience sake—no sex. Oh yeah? 'Feed it to Sweeney,' as they used to say back in the '40s.

Assuming they start out as "buddies," that number would play for three weeks. I say nix to the whole setup—but then I'm one of those square, dried-up Puritans, so who cares what I think?

Dear Ann Landers: This is a eply to "Miss Know-It-All" who couldn't resist correcting grammatical mistakes, no matter who made them.

Better cool it, honey, before you wind up with no friends. I learned the hard way.

I was always a whiz at English and spelling and I, too, had a compulsion to correct everybody. It nearly cost me my relationship with my daughter.

Sally was a smart gal but a lousy speller. When she landed a secretarial job in another city I used to correct the spelling errors in her letters and return them to her thinking I was being helpful. I didn't realize she resented it bitterly.

Finally Sally returned one of her "corrected" letters and told me if I didn't cut it out she wouldn't write to me any more.

That taught me to keep my hands off her letters and to bite my tongue when people made grammatical errors. What a pain in the neck I must have been!

If "Miss Know-It-All" can't learn to control herself she should seek counseling and conquer her compulsion.—Ex-Authority

Dear Ex: It's hard to imagine a smart lady like you being so insensitive as to "correct" a grown daughter's letters, as if they were English exams, and return them to her.

I'm glad she had the courage to set you straight instead of seething in silence—or cutting you off altogether. Consider yourself lucky.

Dear Ann Landers: A while back you printed a letter from a bitter, heartbroken woman who doubted the existence of God. She asked, "If there is a God, where was He when our only son was killed in Vietnam?"

Her pastor, trying to console her, replied, "The same place He was when His only son was killed."

Perhaps this response will give consolation to others. It helped me get through a recent tragedy.—I See It Now

Dear Friend: Thanks for your letter. I hope others see it, too.

University Students Fail Reading Tests

HALIFAX (CP) — It's a fact, says Louise Young, that many students at Dalhousie University have problems with basic skills of reading and writing and should be attending classes to improve their abilities.

Some, like Prof. H. G. Swartz of the university's department of German, complain that these skills should have been mastered in elementary and secondary schools and that the public school system's standards are slipping.

Others, like Arthur Condad, director of education for Halifax schools, say "it's a university problem." The public schools do all they can to ensure that students read and write well—most do attain these skills, he said.

Said Mr. Conrad, the university selection system is at fault.

Mrs. Young, who handles Dalhousie's writing workshop, said that regardless of who is at fault, it is a growing problem which is not confined to Nova Scotia, but is spread throughout Canada and the United States.

A former English and journalism teacher, Mrs. Young said she tries to avoid the dispute over who is to blame and concentrates on how students can improve thrir skills.

She began the writing workshop for students with "literacy deficiencies" 18 months ago and the program operates for students seeking voluntary assistance.

The programs have been designed to help under-graduate students although graduates have occasionally attended to get tips on improvement.

About 200 students are taking various phases of the workshop this year. Some attend on their own; others are following the advice of their professors.

Still, Mrs. Young estimated that the programs have so far helped only about five per cent of those students who could have benefited from them.

The problem students have in achieving basic reading and writing skills is perplexing at the university level, Mrs. Young said. Many students are advanced and sophisticated in their thinking patterns; many "have fantastic ideas but have trouble leaping the gap" betweed thought and expression.

The results of the workshop have been evident, she said. Assignments once deemed not passable now are accepted by professors; essays below the aptitude of other students have risen in quality, and students have reported back on the favorable impressions of their renewed abilities.

Indian Princess Discovers Prejudice

WILLIAMS LAKE, B.C. (CP) — Clara Anderson, a small-town girl, says she had to go to the big city of Toronto as Canadian Indian Princess to experience prejudice for the first time.

Born and raised on a ranch near this British Columbia interior community about 200 miles northeast of Vancouver, Miss Anderson, 22, said local residents have always treated her and her family with respect.

"I'd hear about prejudice but had never experienced it and when I did, it really stung," she said in an interview.

"Then I thought to myself, there are people who've lived with this all their lives."

Her first experience with racism occurred as she was introduced as the Canadian Indian Princess to a Toronto night club audience in October, 1973, during the Miss Canada Pageant.

"We were all introduced individually and, as I walked up to be introduced, someone from the crowd said: "What's she doing here?'

"I couldn't wait to get out of there," said Miss Anderson, who has assumed the role of acting princess because this year's princess, Janet Jonathon of Toronto, was unable to travel west because of her studies.

Miss Anderson said she is asked some strange questions when she travels to rodeos, Indian war dance championships and other events—"Are you really a wild Indian?" or "How do you talk to an Indian?" or "Do you really shoot arrows and scalp people?"

She said she believes she is an ambassador of Indian people and always tries to show people that Indians are a loving people who live in harmony with nature.

"Kids watch too many cowboy and Indian shows on television and a lot of them are amazed when they see and talk to me to find I am different from what they see on TV."

uring her feign as princess, Miss Anderson was told not to involve herself in politics. A problem she constantly faced was answering questions about Indian land claims.

"That was hard because people would ask me these questions and they wondered whether I had no opinion when I would not answer," Miss Anderson said.

But now that she has passed on her crown, Miss Anderson does not refrain from answering that question: "The Indians are only asking for what is theirs."

She said Indians have a communal philosophy of sharing their possessions, but white men are more individualistic and find sharing a difficult proposition.

She said she has met many Indians during her travels who were working hard to help themselves get ahead.

"Because you see a fesw Indian people that get drunk that doesn't mean we're all like that," said Miss Anderson.

When she was on tour, Miss Anderson had three outfits.

The most popular outfit was a midi-length, beaded and fringed buckskin dress which she and her mother made, taking more than 100 hours to complete, starting from the skinned hide.

Black Diamond's Jack Francis grabs third on a wide slide in the championship game of the Stirling and District Softball Tournament Sunday night. Local Peewees Second Best BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Dav Benson doubled home the winning run in the first extra inning to give Burlington a 7-6 victory over Belleville and the A championship of the sixth annual Brampton Minor Baseball Association peewee tournament Saturday.

The tournament featured 24 teams from across Ontario.

Burlington held a 5-0 lead but Belleville fought back to take a 6-5 lead in the top of the sixth inning. Benson smashed a solo homer in the bottom of the sixth to force the extra inning.

Good Showing For Local Minors

Home field advantage made no difference in Ontario Amateur Softball Association Minor Play Saturday, as three Belleville teams travelled to Ottawa and won, while a single Ottawa team made the trek to Belleville, and came away with the win, at the Alemite.

The Belleville [illegible] Peewees, and Bantams all won their [illegible] Capital City crew, but the Yardmen Midgets were not as fortunate, losing their third and deciding game of the series, 4-2.

Danny Vance was on the mound to take the loss for the Yardmen, allowing 12 hits in the nine inning affair, walking none, and striking out eight.

Steve Plathy threw an eight-hitter on the Ottawa rubber, whiffing seven and walking none.

Kelvin Pope slammed a home run and single for the Yardmen, but with six other singles, it wasn't enough to take Ottawa. Pat Walsh ripped a home run over the fence for the winners, with Gary McMillan and Brian Mullally each contributing three safeties.

In first game action, the Kinsmen Squirts pummelled Ottawa by a 26-0 score, in a contest that was halted after five innings due to a time limit.

Peter Wood had two doubles to lead the 18-hit Belleville attack, with Dave Phillips adding a double and three singles. Greg McMillan had the only hit for Ottawa, a single.

Allan Thompson and Bobby Turner combined for the win, tossing the one-hitter between them. The pair fanned 12 and walked seven.

The SACO Peewees took their first game with Ottawa by a convincing 17-1 score, picking up at least two runs in each of the seven innings except the second, when they were shut out.

John Munkittrick gave up only six hits on the Belleville rubber, striking out four and giving up only one free pass. Mike Carr and Tim Middleton shared the loss for Ottawa, hampered by nine walks, and seven errors by their mates.

Terry Millar had a home run and two singles to pace the winners, with Munkittrick producing three runs batted in with a double and two singles. Jim Baigre had three of the losers' hits.

The Downtown Merchants Bantams lowered the boom on Ottawa by a 15-4 score, to win their best-of-three opening round series, in two games straight. Ron Begley slammed a triple and two singles to pace the winners, with Paul Marineau connecting for a home run and single. Paul MacMillan had a home run and triple for the Ottawa team, with three runs batted in. Rick Tripp pitched eight innings, needing last inning help from Tim Soule. Tripp gave up seven hits and one walk, fanning four, while Soule had one strikeout.

Winless Weekend

Pitchers Do Fine Job, But Mac Bats Silent

By TOM GAVEY
Sports Staff

"We couldn't have asked for more from our pitching, but our hitting was lacking in every game" said Belleville McDonald manager Harold Reid on Sunday night after dropping four more Ontario Fastball League games.

"The team had 12 hits in four games, that's an average of three a game, and that's definitely not enough" added Reid.

Ho wright he was. The Macs had just one run in the four contests, and came close to being kept completely off the scoreboard on Saturday night, when Bill Drennan tossed a one hitter their way for Burlington.

As usual the team kept things respectable, and close to the end, losing 3-0 and 4-0 in Burlington on Saturday, and then 1-0 and 3-1 to Kitchener the next night.

Both games in Kitchener should have gone to the Belleville pitchers.

In the second match of the twin bill Belleville held a 1-0 lead through most of the game. Many times they had a chance to increase the lead, but couldn't advance the runners.

Finally, in the bottom of the sixth the home team broke out with three runs on a double from Barry Musselman, their all-star second baseman, and a triple from the bat of John Hagey, the team's cleanup man.

Ted Waite absorbed another loss, giving up four hits and walking two batters. He struck out seven Kitchener batters.

The winner was Terry Gallamore, who gave up six Belleville hits and walked four Macs. He had seven strikeouts also.

Ironically the Belleville run wasn't knocked in, but was walked in, the first inning when Gallamore had control problems.

Leading the Macs at bat plate was Gary Goyer with two singles. Peter Harrison also had two one baggers. Other singles came from Paul Goodfellow and Ted Waite.

In the first game of the twin bill Scott Reid was the victim of Belleville's sixteenth loss by one run.

Even then, the one run was unearned with Reid throwing a four hitter with one walk and no strikeouts.

Keith Wagler was the winner. He was touched for four hits and walked no one. He set down three batters on third strikes.

Goyer doubled and singled for Belleville, Steve Ling had a one bagger, as did Doug "Daisy" Dafoe.

In Burlington nothing went right, as the Macs lost 3-0 in the first game when Drennan threw the one hit game.

Ted Waite was the loser. He hurled a three hitter walking no batters and sending five Burlington batters to the bench on third strikes.

Drennan was almost untouchable where base hits were concerned. The big righty had five strikeouts and no walks.

The only Belleville hit came from Goodfellow in the top of the seventh, spoiling Drennan's bid for a no hitter.

In the nightcap it took Burlington until the seventh to break out for four runs in a game which was rescheduled from a rain out. The game was technically Belleville's home game, but was played in Burlington as a part of the doubleheader.

Jim Chase allowed five hits and four walks while gaining six strikeouts.

The winner was Hal Kemp, he let just two Macs batters on bases on hits. He walked three batters and struck out eight.

The two Belleville safeties were from the bats of Steve Ling and Chase.

As Expected In SHBL Playoffs

The South Hastings Baseball League opened their playoffs on the weekend with things staying about the same as they had been during the regular season. Latta, the pennant winners, trounced Read 16-1 in the first game of the best-of-five quarter finals.

Plane's Concrete tied Melrose 1-1 in the other game played.

Bob Reid fired a two hitter on the Latta mound, striking out seven and issuing three free passes.

Garney Adams threw for Plane's, allowing four hits while fanning nine. John Pepper gave up seven hits for Melrose, whiffing five.

Ralph Plane had a double and two singles to pace Cannifton with Rick Meagher responding with three base hits for Melrose.

Shirley Gulliver and Sandra Claus just couldn't get things going on the mound as they lost 10-5. The series ended 2-1 in favor of Oshawa.

Winner was Ellen Coe. She gave up just eight hits and walked three, fanning three batters.

Coe helped herself offensively in the win with a single and a double. Cathy Fertile had three singles.

For Belleville Nancy Birch, Shirley Gulliver and Sue Morton singled twice.

L.A.'s Don Sutton And Bucs Are Pushing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Don Sutton of Los Angeles Dodgers is pushing to become a 20-game winner for the first time in his career.

Pittsburgh Pirates aren't pushing anything at the moment, but the panic button might not be too far off.

Sutton, 19-9 in 1972 and again last year, became the first 16-game winner in the National League this year with a three-hitter Sunday that gave the Dodgers a 2-1 win over New York Mets.

The Pirates, meanwhile, got pushed around by lowly Houston for the fourth successive time and dropped their fifth baseball game in a row, losing 5-3 to the Astros.

In Sunday's other National League games, Cincinnati Reds blitzed Montreal Expos 11-3, San Francisco Giants walloped Philadelphia Phillies 8-1, Chicago Cubs beat Atlanta Braves 9-1 and St. Louis Cardinals defeated San Diego Padres 3-2 in 10 innings.

In Saturday's games, Los Angeles blanked New York 2-0, Houston shut out Pittsburgh 5-0, Cincinnati whipped Montreal 9-1, Philadelphia pounded San Francisco 11-4, Atlanta defeated Chicago 6-2 in the completion of a suspended game from June 12 but the Cubs won the regular game 8-2 and St. Louis tripped San Diego 6-1.

While the Mets managed only three hits off Sutton, 16-9, in nine innings, the Dodgers got three in the fourth inning alone—all they needed to secure the victory.

John Hale's sixth home run of the season started the rally against Hank Webb, then Steve Garvey walked and Ron Cey and Steve Yeager singled for a 2-0 lead.

Skip Jutze and Tommy Helms drove in two runs each in the victory over Pittsburgh. The Astros put the Pirates away early, punching in four runs in the first inning off Jim Rooker. In the fifth, Cedeno doubled and Helms singled for an insurance run.

DON SUTTON

"I expect at any moment for the club to break out of the hitting slump," Manager Danny Murtaugh said. "We haven't pushed the panic button.

"We're still in first place. We're just having a bad streak now.

The Reds raked Montreal for 16 hits—three apiece by Tony Perez and Johnny Bench—and put the Expos away with four-run rallies in the fifth and eighth innings.

Gary Matthews drove in four runs with a pair of homers to lead San Francisco past Philadelphia and keep the Phillies from cutting into the Pirates' two-game lead in the East.

Bill Bonham's five-hitter and Rick Monday's three-run double moved helped Chicago rout the Braves.

San Diego took a 2-1 lead in the top of the 10th on a homer by Tito Fuentes, but Ken Reitz homered in the bottom of the inning to tie it.

Mike Tyson then singled, took second on Bake McBride's pinch single and scored on Lou Brock's single that gave the Cards' ace reliever, Al Hrabosky, his 10th victory.

Evert Wins

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Chris Evert won her fourth consecutive title while Manuel Orantes and Arthur Ashe scored semi-final victories Sunday in the U.S. clay court tennis championships.

Orantes, the No. 3 seed in men's singles, upset top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, 6-4, 6-2, while Ashe had a difficult time beating New Zealand's Onny Parun 6-4, 7-6.

Orantes, beating Vilas for the third time this year, spotted him a 1-0 lead in both sets but broke his serve four times en route to victory.

Orantes will meet Ashe in the men's finals tonight.

Vilas' loss was his first in his last 21 matches. The 23-year-old Argentinian had won the Dutch Open, Washington International and Louisville, Ky., pro events. He is the leader on the tennis Grand Prix circuit with 520 points, followed by Orantes with 529.

The Ashe-Parun match was close almost all the way until midway into the second set when Parun briefly took control and a 5-2 lead. Ashe battled back and forced a tie-breaker which the New Zealander lost in the ninth game on a double fault.

Miss Evert beat Dianne Fromholtz of Australia 6-3, 6-4 to take the title and a $10,000 chunk of the $150,000 in prize money. Miss Fromholtz, who turned 19 on Sunday, received $5,000 as runner-up.

Raiders Do Their Thing

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coach John Madden seemed intent on reminding his Oakland Raiders that exhibition game scores don't prove much. But Detroit coach Rick Forzano, after seeing his team beaten 34-0 by the Raiders Sunday, refused to go along with that logic.

The Raiders outgained the Lions 311-115 in total offence and had a 20-6 advantage in first downs in the game which opened pre-season play for both National Football League teams.

"Every one seemed to play well, but we'll find some things wrong when we look at the films," Madden said confidently. "You try not to get pleased this early in the season."

Detroit never got close enough to Oakland's goal line to attempt a field goal, with the best offensive effort going to the Raiders' 32.

Forzano, asked if the Raiders had a weakness, said, "If they did, I didn't see it. But that's no excuse for the way we played."

In other NFL action Sunday, San Francisco 49ers beat Cleveland Browns 17-13 and New York Giants whipped New England Patriots 28-14.

On Saturday, Miami Dolphins edged Cincinnati Bengals 7-3, Philadelphia Eagles stopped Pittsburgh Steelers 17-14, St. Louis Cardinals beat Kansas City Cheifs 10-3 and Green Bay Packers smashed Buffalo Bills 23-6. Also, Houston Oilers defeated New Orleans Saints 13-7, Los Angeles Rams clobbered Dallas Cowboys 35-7, Baltimore Colts edged Denver Broncos 23-20, Chicago Bears blanked San Diego Chargers 22-0 and New York Jets nipped Minnesota Vikings 20-15.

Fans Get Into Act

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Terry Lloyd of Philadelphia Wings set a league scoring record in one of two National Lacrosse League games Sunday night, but fans at both seemed intent on grabbing most of the attention.

Lloyd's eight goals sparked the Wings to a 22-16 win over Maryland Arrows at Landover, Md., where some of 3,601 fans got involved when a brawl broke out between the clubs.

At Montreal, where Long Island Tomahawks scored six unanswered third-period goals for a 14-11 win over the Quebecois, nine spectators—seven boys and two girls—were arrested after lightbulbs were tossed onto the playing floor.

Six players produced two goals each for the Tomahawks, who pulled six points ahead of the second-place Quebecois, while Dale MacKenzie led the losers with three.

Montreal held a 57-30 edge in shots on goal before a crowd of 4,706.

Jim Grady backed Lloyd's performance with four goals and John Grant scored two and set up five for the winning Wings, who climbed within two points of Montreal and left the Arrows tied for last place with Quebec Caribous.

Tigers Closing In On All-time Loss Mark

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"If you were 12 years old, you could cry," said manager Ralph Houk of Detroit Tigers.

The Tigers continued their tailspin Sunday, dropping a 4-0 decision to Bert Blyleven and Minnesota Twins in an American League baseball game.

It was their 15th successive defeat, extending the club record, and left them within five games of the league's all-time record of 20 consecutive losses set by Boston Red Sox in 1902 and tied by Philadelphia Athletics in 1916 and 1943.

Despite extra batting practice, the Tiger bats managed just 16 base hits and one run in dropping three successive games to the Twins.

"We haven't had a day off since the all-star break, maybe that's the trouble," said Houk. "The bats may be heavy.

In Sunday's other American League games, Kansas City Royals beat Cleveland Indians 5-1, Boston dumped Oakland A's 5-3, Chicago White Sox edged Baltimore Orioles 3-2, California Angels blanked New York Yankees 1-0, and Milwaukee Brewers downed Texas Rangers 7-4.

On Saturday, the Twins blanked Detroit 1-0, the Royals stopped Cleveland 6-4, the Red Sox whipped Oakland 7-2, the Orioles outslugged Chicago 12-6, the Angels hammered New York 8-1 and the Rangers defeated Milwaukee 4-2.

RALPH HOUK

Blyleven, 11-6, limited the Tigers to four singles en route to his second shutout of the season.

Jerry Terrell broke a scoreless deadlock with a double off Ray Bare, 6-7, in the seventh and Rod Carew followed with a sacrifice fly. Phil Roof added a two-run homer for Minnesota in the ninth.

The Tiger Stadium crowd of 11,851 was not amused. The fans booed heartily as the last Detroit hope went down the drain when Gary Sutherland hit into a double play to end the game.

John Mayberry's three run homer helped Kansas City win for the 14th time in 18 outings under manager Whitey Herzog and close to within 5½ games of first-place Oakland in the American League East. It was Mayberry's 26th homer of the season, only two behind league-leading Reggie Jackson.

Two-run homers by Cecil Cooper and Jim Rice helped Boston increase its lead in the American League East to seven games. Luis Tiant, 14-11, broke a three-game losing streak.

The White Sox rallied for three runs in the ninth to snap ning streak. Mike Torrez carried a four-hit shutout into the ninth but left after a leadoff walk.

Reliever Grant Jackson then surrendered a two-run homer to Brian Downing and the White Sox scored their decisive run on a walk and Jorge Orta's double.

Lee Stanton broke up a scoreless game with a run-scoring double in the ninth inning for California. Bill Singer checked the Yanks on four hits before giving way to Mickey Scott, 3-1, in the ninth.

George Scott collected four hits, including his 24th home run, and drove in three runs as Milwaukee snapped a six-game losing streak.

Connors Back on Track

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (AP) — Jimmy Connors defeated Australian Ken Rosewall 6-2, 6-2 Sunday to win a $100,000 international tennis tournament.

Connors, 22, playing in his first tournament since his Wimbledon defeat last month, was too powerful and quick for the 40-year-old Rosewall.

Sunday's 9,300 fans, who increased attendance at the week-long tournament to more than 40,000, was partisan for Rosewall, but he gave them little to cheer. He was able to win only one point on Connors' serve in the second set, that coming at triple-match-point against him.

Gov. Meldrim Thomson, who presented Connors with a cheque for $20,000, received a few jeers from the audience at the outdoor red clay court stadium as he was introduced.

Roughriders Nipped 28-27

REGINA (CP) — A moment's hesitation by two Saskatchewan Roughrider punt returners helped British Columbia Lions break a long-standing Western Football Conference jinx at Taylor Field Sunday.

The Lions recorded their first victory in 10 years on Regina's home field as Eric Guthrie booted a 50-yard single at 12:48 of the final quarter to give the Lions a 28-27 win.

B.C.'s winning margin in its first victory in four outings came when Saskatchewan punt returners Jim Elder and Tom Campana hesitated on Guthrie's punt.

Elder fumbled the ball in the end zone and although Saskatchewan recovered, the Roughriders couldn't move the ball out of the end zone and the Lions had the winning single.

Saskatchewan, still leading the WFC with a 3-1 mark, never led in the game, played before 21,804 fans. Jack Abendschan's second field goal of the day with less than five minutes to play moved the Roughriders into a 27-27 tie but time ran out on them after Guthrie's single.

Rugged running back Wayne Moseley was the offensive standout for the pinners, turning in a 267-yard performance. He rushed for 135 yards, including a four-yard touchdown, added 93 yards on pass receptions and returned punts and kickoffs for another 39 yards.

The rest of the B.C. scoring was handled by Lu. Harris, on a two-yard scamper, Jim Young, who caught a 60-yard pass from Peter Liske, and John Wintermeyer, with three converts and field goals from the 19 and 42.

Veteran Regina quarterback Ron Lancaster threw scoring passes of 10 yards to Rhett Dawson and 29 yards to Campana. Campana ran for an 18-yard score and Abendschan added all the converts and field goals from the 31 and 29.

The Lions, who benefited from Liske's 13 pass completions in 15 attempts for 215 yards, were in command for most of the first half. The Harris and Young touchdowns and Wintermeyer field goals carried them to a 20-3 advantage with three minutes left in the half.

But Lancaster, famous for his last-minute fireworks, went to work and unloaded two touchdown passes to bring the heavily-favored Roughriders to within three points at the end of the first half.

The Lions dominated the third quarter, going ahead 27-17 on Moseley's major, before Campana's second touchdown and Abendschan's second field goal brought Saskatchewan back into the picture.

Two crucial interceptions chances in the second half. Barry Ardern snared a Lancaster pass in the third quarter to blunt a drive at the B.C. 10 and Gary Robinson stole another Lancaster toss late in the final quarter to stop a potential comeback.

Lancaster, who completed 18 of 34 passes for 273 yards, said one of the key turning points was Saskatchewan's inability to keep up its late first-half momentum when the second half started. After two incomplete Saskatchewan passes and a punt opened the half, B.C. got the ball and scored.

Saskatchewan had 394 yards in net offence, including 121 rushing. B.C.'s net offensive display of 381 yards was aided by 211 yards rushing.

Bomber Place Kicker Retires

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference announced Saturday the retirement of placekicker Bob Macoritti, who is returning to Hamilton to complete the second year of his teachers' certification requirement.

Macoritti kicked four field goals, five converts and three singles for the Bombers in the first three games of the season. He is tied with Dave Cutler of Edmonton Eskimos for second place in the Western Football Conference individual scoring race with 20 points, two back of Saskatchewan Roughrider placekicker Brian Berg.

The Bomber office said Bernie Ruoff from Syracuse University will replace Macoritti as the team's kicker. Ruoff, the Bombers' first round draft choice, had signed with New England Patriots of the American Football Conference and has just been released.

The Bombers also have added import defensive half Al Brenner and Canadian defensive back Merv Walker to their roster, and have dropped import defensive back Ray Odums, Canadian wide receiver and defensive back Alex Morris, and Canadian placekicker Walt McKee.

Players on the injury list include running back Jim Washington, offensive lineman Buddy Brown and linebacker Perry Arnold.

Jack Nicklaus – Fourth PGA

Smith, Kerr Come Through

CALGARY (CP) — Impressive victories by two hard-pressed national champions were almost overshadowed in the Canadian swimming championships Sunday night by a new development in a landed immigrant's struggle to swim internationally for his new country.

Michael Kerr of Vancouver and Becky Smith of Edmonton, unimpressive in several previous performanes here in the national championships and Pan-American games trials, were as outstanding as Jim Adams of Vancouver was disappointed on the third day of the championships.

Kerr rallied on the last lap to edge past Daryl Skilling of Thunder Bay, Ont., in the 400-metre freestyle and Smith, youngest of five members of a family dynasty which has swum for Canada around the world since the 1960s, fought off two strong challengers to win the women's 200-metre individual medley.

Kerr finished in 4:03.86 and Smith in 2:24.30, far below their existing records. Kerr has hit 4:05.02 and Smith's listed best is 2:22.07.

Becky, 16, gave away height and reach to Cheryl Gibson, also of Edmonton, and Joann Baker of Thunder Bay won in the tightest finish of the four-day event.

All three—team-mates in the recent world championships and destined to compete in Mexico at the Pan-American games in about six weeks—finished less than a second apart.

Adams was downcast because he learned again he still cannot represent Canada in an international meet although he has qualified under all international athletic agreements governing his case.

The problem is that Brazil, where he was born 23 years ago to an Australian father and a British mother, will not grant him a release.

"The sports federation down there wants me to swim for Brazil," said Adams, who has never represented his former homeland in international competition and who began swimming seriously after he came to Canada six years ago.

Adams qualified for the Canadian national team at the Calis, Colombia world championships but was dropped because of Brazil's position.

When the 1975 national finals began Friday, Adams believed his case was being reviewed again.

He received further encouragement when he was allowed to swim in the finals Friday and Saturday but learned of his new rejection Sunday when dropped into the consolation bracket for the 200-metre individual medley.

Because the national championships this year are tied in with trials for the Pan-Am Games, swimmers who do not qualify for the team cannot enter championship finals.

"I guess that means they've given up on me for Mexico," said Adams.

He vented his frustration by covering the distance in 2:10.65 compared with the Canadian native record of 2:11.21 held by Stephen Pickell of Vancouver. Adams' performance also stands as a South American record.

Losing Keeps Nicklaus in Game

"If I had won the Grand Slam, I probably would have got out of the game," said Nicklaus after winning his fourth PGA and 16th major title Sunday. "Now I am more determined to continue playing."

"This is my fourth PGA. Walter Hagen won five. I would like to match that. Nobody ever has won more than four U.S. Opens. I would like to get five. The fact I came close this year only Nicklaus held off the challenge of Australian Bruce Crampton over the long Firestone course Sunday and won the 57th PGA by two strokes, shooting a final-round 71 for 276. He collected $45,000.

Crampton, trailing three and four strokes most of the day, failed to sink crucial putts on the incoming nine and finished second with a 69 for 278.

Nicklaus, with the tournament in the bag, took a double bogey six on the final hole.

"I had no way of knowing," said Crampton, who played ahead. "But if I had made those putts, I don't think Jack would have taken that six."

Only Crampton threatened—and not very seriously—in the muggy, rain-interrupted showdown over the 7,180-yard, par-70 Firestone layout.

Tom Weiskopf, who beat Nicklaus in a recent playoff for the Canadian Open, had to sink a 20-foot putt on the final hole to finish third with a 68 for 279. A 25-year-old tour sophomore, Andy North of Gainesville, Fla., slipped past a handful of challengers with a 65 to grab fourth at 281.

Former U.S. Open Champion Hale Irwin and veteran Bill Casper tied for fifth with 283. British Open champion Tom Watson had 285, Gary Player and Arnold Palmer tied at 291. U.S. Open king Lou Graham shot 296 and Lee Trevino trailed with 297.

After winning the Masters, Nicklaus blew the U.S. Open at Medinah by bogeying the last three holes, finishing two shots back. He missed the British Open at Carnoustie by a single shot.

Thus Nicklaus came within three shots of the professional goal of winning the four top pro events—the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and PGA—in a single year. Ben Hogan won the first three in 1953 and didn't play in the PGA.

However, Nicklaus, in adding his 16th major title, increased his year's prize money to $248,599—No. 1 in the standings—and pushed his lifetime earnings to $2,492,222.

In his 14 years as a pro, he has won 14 of the Big Four titles, placed second 12 times and third seven times.

He has won twice as many major crowns as his nearest challengers—Arnold Palmer and Gary Player, with eight each.

"I am still a young man," said the 35-year-old Nicklaus. "I don't beat myself. My nerves are always good. I am enjoying myself more every year.

"I can't reach back and get that extra 20 yards as I used to," he said. "Maybe it's because I have lost 30 pounds.

"But I am a better putter and a better all-around player than I ever was. I think I will continue to improve."

There were 14 entries in each tower event.

In springboard competition Saturday, Skip Phoenix was first among 21 divers in the mens' one-metre event with a score of 437.15.

Veterans Take National Titles

WINNIPEG (CP) — A pair of Vancouver veterans relied on experience and composure to win the men's and women's singles finals at the $12,000 Canadian National Tennis Championships during the weekend.

Second seed Susan Stone used accurate net play and strong serves to defeat top seed Jane O'Hara of Toronto in consecutive sets of 6-4 Sunday.

Third seed Tony Bardsley trounced fourth seed Jim Boyce of Toronto 6-2, 6-2 Saturday.

Both singles champions also shared top honors in doubles play Sunday.

Bardsley teamed with David Brown of Toronto in the men's doubles final to defeat [illegible] Legendre of Quebec City and Dejean Genois of Loretteville, Que., 6-4, 6-4.

In the women's doubles final, Mrs. Stone and Andree Martin of Montreal defeated Vera Komar of Cambridge, Ont., and Cris Corcoran of Vancouver 6-7, 6-1, 6-2.

Mrs. Stone, defending champion, jumped into an early 4-1 lead, but Miss O'Hara rallied to reduce the margin to 5-4. With the score tied at duece in the 10th game, Miss O'Hara missed a routine shot at the net to give Mrs. Stone the advantage.

Bardsley, Alberta Open champion and a finalist in the nationals last year and in 1968, overpowered his younger and smaller opponent in the finals of the men's singles, played Saturday to take advantage of television coverage.

The 6-foot-four, 190-pound Bardsley set the tone in the first game of the first set when he smashed three aces by the 24-year-old Boyce, who managed to return only one serve in the game.

"I was surpriced he gave away some points," Bardsley said after the match. "But I was pleasantly surprised with my serve."

"I just didn't get it together. Tony played well, and I played [illegible]," said Boyce, runner up in 1971. [redacted]

In other final events Sunday, Glen Booth of Winnipeg used aggresive backcourt play to defeat Mike McLaughlin of Toronto in consecutive sets of 6-2 in the under 21 finals. In the women's under 21 finals, Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa coasted to an easy win over Lise Senn of Toronto, 6-2, 6-3.

IN MEMORIAM

WILSON — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Becky M. Wilson who passed away August 12, 1965.

The joys we shared together,
The memories we hold dear,
The love and happiness you gave,
Will always keep you near,
It broke our hearts to lose you,
But you did not go alone,
For part of us went with you,
The day God called you home.
—Husband Leslie, sons Terry and Laurie.

KITCHEN — In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Katherine, who left us August 12, 1974.

One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away,
God took her home, it was His will,
Within our hearts she's with us still.
—Dearly remembered by Mum, Dad, Larry and Don.

MURRAY — In loving memory of a good friend Gordon Murray, who passed away one year ago today, August 11, 1974.

The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought his death so near,
Only those that have lost can tell,
The sorrow of parting without farewell.
—Remembered by his good friend Charlie Keegan, Nancy and children.

NOYES — In loving memory of my dear son Ken who passed away August 11, 1974.
—Sadly missed by mother Frances Noyes, Belleville and sister Bonnie Burshaw and family, Calgary.

IN MEMORIAM

NOYES — In loving memory of a dear friend, Kenny.

A year has gone since you passed on,
I think of you so often,
A perfect friend in many ways,
Who'll never be forgotten.

Entertainment Briefs

NEW YORK (AP) — The widows of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy won the right to exclusive exploitation of the names and faces of the late comedy team, a court victory that may be worth $1 million a year.

Federal Judge Charles Stewart held in an opinion made public Friday that the Hal Roach Studios contract for exclusive exploitation of the comedians had expired and that its copyrights of Laurel and Hardy movies was no substitute.

Instead, the court found in an injunction against Hal Roach Studios that the actors' right of publicity was a property rightfully descendable to their heirs. Hardy died in 1957 and Laurel in 1965.

Judge Stewart also ruled that the widows, Lucille Hardy Price, and Ida Laurel, were entitled to damages against Hal Roach Studios for unauthorized use of the names and likenesses in such novelty items as sweatshirts and statues and in a projected television series. He said these are to be determined later.

GARY, Ind. (AP) — Julian (Cannonball) Adderley, 46, a high-school music teacher who became a leading jazz saxophonist, died Friday, four weeks after suffering a stroke.

Adderley had been in critical condition in a coma since July 13 when he collapsed while visiting friends in this northwest Indiana city.

The son of a jazz cornetist, Adderley's first big break came in New York when he appeared with Oscar Pettiford in 1955.

He signed his first recording contract the next year with EmArcy records, later recording for Capitol and others, turning out such albums as Black Messiah, Country Preacher, Fiddler on the Roof, Walk Tall and Quiet Nights. His last album was Phenix on the Fantasy label.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For TUES Aug 12

You'll do your best thinking today if you're under pressure or put on the spot, especially in relation to your work.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20) Some interesting information will be passed on to you today through a chance social encounter. It will cause you to revise a decision.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20) It's a good day to work on something you consider more of a hobby than a chore. The results will please you, and others, too.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll pe very vibrant today and others will find you pleasant company. Get out and spread some sunshine.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're a prudent shopper for household and family needs today. Those pennies will have a surprising way of adding up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can find a buyer today for a possession you no longer need. Offer fair price. The sale will be wrapped up quickly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You'll discover a small hidden profit in something you thought had nothing of value, provided you take the time to look.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22) You tend to do things on impulse today, but they'll somehow work out. Stay loose. Keep an optimistic attitude.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A small but thoughtful act you'll perform for one less fortunate will not go unobserved. It will make you look big in their eyes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone who lives a considerable distance from you will be getting in touch unexpectedly to tell of some unusual news.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) By using your read today in business ventures you can easily outdistance competitors. Think carefully before acting.

You have the ability to grasp facts quickly that others may overlook. In partnership matters, take a hand in decision-making.

Protruding Ears Easily Remedied

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you be able to tell me if there is a new method for correcting protruding ears?

My daughter has ears that protrude to the point where she is very self-conscious She refuses to have plastic surgery, and we were wondering if there was any other way to correct this condition.—Mrs. M. M

The standard surgical procedure is a relatively simple operation, involving the snipping of a section of skin and cartilage from the angle of the ear between the ear and the skull It can be done with local anesthetic.

It is usually best to wait until the ear is fully grown to do this, but often, for psychological reasons, it is done earlier to children to eliminate unnecessary embarrassment.

An abnormal angle of the human ear is considered one greater than 25 degrees between ear and skull. If your daughter's problem is harmful psychologically, she should be encouraged to have it done. A plastic surgeon could advise you, and perhaps convince her.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please discuss rosacea. I have had it for nearly a year and I'm a bit discouraged. I am on an antibiotic, plus an ointment. I have avoided face creams in the affected area.

What causes this condition? I am more concerned about the broken blood vessels than the redness. Can anything be done about these vessels? Would allergy be involved.—J. J

This is a chronic disease that affects the skin on the nose, the forehead and the face in general The outward symptoms include the unsightly red coloration that is a result of capillary dilatation. It can be accompanied by red pimples (acne rosacea).

One cause (among many) is excessive alcohol consumption. For this reason such unflattering names as "rum nose" and "brandy face" have been coined to describe it. However, coffee, tea, chocolate, nuts and other foods have been implicated. Drug reaction has also been suspected, and in some cases the cause has been traced to extreme changes in temperature, even to nervous reactions in stress situations.

It is of little more than cosmetic concern to most, although complications such as keratitis (inflammation of the cornea of the eye) can occur.

It is more important in the long run to treat the causes than to alleviate the cosmetic symptoms This will involve a search for the particular food or physical situation that prompts attacks. In advanced cases, treatment by a specialist is advisable.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A friend told me that a while back you had a discussion of the reason for one hip and shoulder being higher than the other. This is the case with my daughter. Please send the name of this so we can consult someone about it.—C. H.

It was a discussion of scoliosis (scoh-lee-OH-sis), curvature of the spine If you suspect this, the proper specialist would be an orthopedist. It can be helped.

Treatment would consist of posture correction, exercises and possibly the use of a back brace.

Oswald: "Test Your Bridge by Victor Mollo is a paperback concerned with fairly simple problems in play. He doesn't tell you how to bid the hands, which is just as well, because his British-type bidding is not easy to understand in this country. Thus, we will try to bid Victor's contracts in an American way."

Jim: "Victor has two questions on the play of the hand. He says, 'You go after trumps. How do you play them?' The answer is that you play the ace of trumps first to guard against the chance that all three trumps are held by West."

Oswald: "He then asks if you can be sure of your contract once you find there is no trump loser."

Jim: "The answer to that one is an unqualified affirmative. You simply drop the enemy's last trump, cash the high hearts and lead a diamond. The opponents take two diamonds and then must either lead a spade or give you a ruff and discard. If they lead a spade they finesse themselves."

Ask the Jacobys

This question is from Oregon. "I held six trumps to the ace-queen and dummy four to the jack 10. I led low from dummy. Should I have finessed after second hand played low?

The answer is a decided, "Yes." Without going into all the complicated mathematics involved we can assure you that the finesse will succeed about three times for every time you drop the singleton king.

British Newspapers Turn to Computers

LONDON (Reuter) — British national newspapers are turning to advanced computer technology to trim payrolls and overcome the economic crisis that is threatening the industry's very survival.

Two of the country's leading newspapers, The Financial Times and the mass-circulation Daily Mirror, have announced plans for revolutionizing production by using computers.

Other national publications are carefully scrutinizing the systems most suitable for their needs—And most management executives appear to be convinced that radical technological changes in production methods cannot be long delayed.

Computerized photo composition to make up pages for printing needs a fraction of the manpower at present employed—and chronic overmanning has long been blamed by management for much of the industry's plight.

But no Fleet Street management could simply dismiss hundreds of employees.

There will have to be delicate negotiations with the printing and journalists' unions on redundancies, compensation, early retirements, and retraining. Much will depend on the success of these consultations.

In recent months, Britain's economic recession and galloping inflation have squeezed lending urgency to the search for novel ways of keeping the press financially viable.

Despite big price increases, most newspapers have been losing money. Wages have been rising steeply, and so have overheads such as transport and communications.

The pressures have already forced one leading Sunday newspaper, The Observer, to announce plans to cut staff by one-third.

Even though The Observer's straitened circumstances came as no surprise few expected the Financial Times' admission some weeks later that its problems were "no less severe and in some ways more critical than those of other newspapers.

The Financial Times explained on its front page why it intends to use computers to enable the newspaper to operate with fewer than two-thirds of its current staff of 1,400.

Chief executive Alan Hare said the plan combined introduction of the most radical and imaginative change so far produced for the British newspaper industry, with cost savings absolutely necessary for the Financial Times' survival.

Hare told union officials the earlier the paper's problems were tackled, the less painful their solution would be, and the more resources would be available to deal with them.

SOPE WIDER C

The newspaper claims that its scheme has wider scope than others because it provides for computers to handle not only type-setting but also commercial operations — for example, credit checking, invoicing, subscription lists, and information needed for accountancy.

At the editorial end of the operation, reporters would even be able to type stories into print from outside the office by using an acoustic coupler—a portable keyboard device fixed to telephone handsets.

The Mirror group of newspapers are planning to install a photo-typesetting system, called Computographics. Entire pages, including pictures will be made up by computer. The completed pages will be conventionally printed.

The group's chief executive, Percy Roberts, said: "If we are to stay in business in the 1980s, the answer is not to go on increasing cover prices and advertising rates, but to use the technology of the 1980s."

Ontario Will Vote Thursday, Sept. 18

TORONTO (CP) — Candidates set out today to woo about 5.2 million Ontario residents who are eligible to vote in the Sept. 18 provincial election called Monday by Premier William Davis.

In annoucing the dissolution of the 29th legislature at 1:45 p.m. EDT, Mr. Davis set into motion a 37-day campaign which will either re-affirm his Progressive Conservative government or end 32 years of continuous Tory rule in Ontario.

Speculation about the call for an election Sept. 18 had heightened during the weekend and the leaders of the two other major parties immediately welcomed the call.

Stephen Lewis, NDP leader, said his party sees the primary issues as energy, housing, land and people, adding that the Conservatives' recent legislation and programs cannot compensate for a long period of mismanagement, neglect, bureacracy and indifference.

For other stories on election see Page 8.

Opposition leader Robert Nixon said the Liberal party wants to return greater decision-making power to muncipalities and ensure accessibility and integrity of government.

In making the announcement, Mr. Davis said that "it is urgently important that the new legislature be convened as soon as possible in the fall," adding the September date "is one of lesser inconvenience to the electorate.

"Certainly no one, least of all myself, wanted to continue on into the late fall without a renewed mandate."

He said the campaign will be unique.

"It will be the first election held under the new reform legislation, which imposes new restraints on fund raising, spending and campign practice and to which my party will scrupulously adhere, both to the letter of the act and the spirit of it."

The premier said he fully expected the record of his first full term in office to be an issue in the election.

He said he looked forward to discussing that record but "I will not do so on the grounds that we have been flawless, faultless and failure free."

Mr. Nixon said in a statement that "we think that the taxpayer is simply tired of paying for the mistakes of this goverment."

He said the time is ripe for the Liberals to end Conservative rule and his party enters the campaign with much optimism, although "we would be less than realistic if we did not consider ourselves the underdog."

While conceding that the Tories have rebounded from poor showings in popularity polls conducted last winter, Mr. Nixon said:

"We're in this to win and we have not had a better chance in 32 years—probably longer than that."

Mr. Lewis said the NDP is aiming to win as many seats as it can but without the extravagant policy statements and socialist dogma used in the 1971 campaign.

"There will be nothing complicated about our approach. There will be no last-minute unveilings of policy purely for election use, no empty promises, no personal attacks.

"We will set out the issues and deal with them, one by one, time and again thoughtfully, insistently, persuasively. We will try to establish a range of solutions and alternatives which are clear and desirable."

Party standings at dissolution were Progressive Conservatives 74, Liberals 23 and New Democrats 20.

The new legislature will have 125 seats, eight more than the last house. Three new seats were added in Metropolitan Toronto, one in Halton, two in Peel, one in Kitchener-Waterloo and one in the Niagara area.

At least 15 Conservative MPPs—including five cabinet ministers, have said they will not seek re-election. Three New Democrats and two Liberals may also said they will not seek re-election.

Irate U.S. Uses Veto

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States has vetoed UN membership applications by North and South Vietnam in retaliation for the exclusion of South Korea.

U.S. Ambassador Daniel Moynihan cast separate vetoes in rapid-fire succession Monday as the 15-country Security Council voted 13 to 1 favoring admission of the Hanoi and Saigon governments. Costa Rica abstained.

Moynihan recalled that 26 years ago the United States foreswore use of the veto on membership questions, but said it had changed its position because of the council's refusal last Wednesday even to take up South Korea's membership application.

The U.S. action brought charges from Communist and non-aligned countries that the U.S. was reviving Cold War practices and exercising a "tyranny of the minority."

Several council members charged that the U.S., frustrated by defeat of its allies in Indochina, was using the Korean question as a pretext to keep Hanoi and the new Saigon regime out of the UN.

This accusation was also made in a joint news statement by the UN observers of the two Vietnamese regimes. They arrived in New York last month and watched Monday's session.

Moynihan said the United States is prepared to agree with membership for the two Vietnams if South Korea is also admitted.

He said that the U.S. has always favored universal UN membership, but "will have nothing to do with selective universality, a principle which in practice admits only new members acceptable to the totalitarian states."

Monday's vetoes were the eighth and ninth cast by the U.S. The Soviet Union has used the veto 110 times, many of them to block the admission of new members, including four times against South Korea's application.

Liberals Nominate Next Week

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Quinte riding Liberals will pick a provincial election candidate next Tuesday, a spokesman for the party announced today.

Lyn Harrrington, president of the riding association, said the nominating convention will be held in Centennial Secondary School here.

Trenton realtor Hugh O'Neil, a long standing member of the local Liberal organization, called a press conference for 1 p.m. today when it is expected he will announce his intention of running for the Liberal nomination.

No Liberals yet have announced they will seek the nomination though several have been the subject of recent speculation. These include Belleville lawyer and former city alderman Doug Boyle, Trenton businessman and former town councillor Gerald Weaver and Belleville lawyer Robert Temple, former federal MP.

Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey acknowledges cheers of delegates to the Quinte riding P.C. nominating convention in Trenton Monday, after a single-ballot victory. One objective of her candidacy was achieved even before she was nominated. Dr. R. T. Potter Says Bridge To Be at Old Site

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Replacement of the dilapidated swing linking Belleville and Prince Edward County is one election plank Mayor Robin Jeffrey won't have to worry about.

The mayor on Monday won her Progressive Conservative candidacy bid by defeating Trenton businessman Doug Whitley but defeated any mention of the bridge issue from her nomination speech after a surprise announcement by retiring Quinte MPP and minister of correctional services Dr. R.T. Potter.

Dr. Potter told Quinte riding Conservative nomination convention delegates Monday the Bay of Quinte bridge will be built on its present site "as soon as funds are available."

Dr. Potter said he was authorized today to make the announcement by Transportation and Communications Minister John Rhodes.

"As soon as possible, a new bridge will be built on the present site," he said. "The Bay bridge as it is now is a vital link between Ameliasburgh township and the city of Belleville."

It will be built when money is available "but it won't be tomorrow," Dr. Potter said.

Authorization was given by Mr. Rhodes, as a result of surveys of area traffic which have been underway for the past several weeks.

The new bridge would be built so boats with masts between 30 and 35 feet, the vast majority, could pass underneath easily.

"It would only be opened for boats of masts higher than that limit," he told delegates.

Location of the bridge has been a source of debate among area municipalities this year.

"It is the last of the projects I wanted to see started," he said.

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Medical officials said today that four more cases of typhoid have been confirmed among persons who attended a summer camp near here in July, bringing the total number of confirmed cases to 21.

The outbreak has been described by Ontario health ministry officials as North America's worst in two decades.

One ministry official said 300 persons who registered at the Light and Life Free Methodist Camp have been tested but added that several hundred campers may have visited but not registered at the camp.

Kingston Man Gets Cash Back From Police

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial court judge Monday ordered $4,112 returned to a Kingston, Ont., man who said he was harassed by police officers who searched him and his automobile almost every day.

Robert David Bruce, 26, said Metropolitan Toronto police arrested him and his wife Colleen, in February on a charge of having in his possession property obtained by crime.

An officer took $4,112 in cash, Mr. Bruce said, and when he asked for it back, he was told police would hold the cash for use as an exhibit at his trial. When he appeared in provincial court in May, the charge was withdrawn by the Crown.

Mr. Justice Alexander Stark ordered the money to be returned to Mr. Bruce.

Number Of Jobless Unchanged

OTTAWA (CP) — The national unemployment rate remained virtually unchanged in July, although there was a slight increase in the jobless rate for women and workers in Newfoundland and Alberta.

Statistics Canada reported today the July rate was 7.2 per cent, a level that has remained constant for five months except for May, when it dropped to 7.1 per cent.

The rate continued to be the highest since 1961, when the July 7.2 per cent represented the beginning of a decline after 11 months of higher levels.

Although there were slightly fewer jobs available in July of this year, the number of persons seeking work declined at a marginally greater rate. The statistics are adjusted for seasonal variations. Economists regard adjusted figures as a more accurate measure of unemployment.

On an actual basis, 653,000 were officially unemployed in July.

Student unemployment dropped to 8.1 per cent from 14.4 per cent in June—consistent with the annual pattern—although the rate remained high in comparison with the two previous years. Student unemployment was 6.1 per cent in July, 1974 and 5.8 per cent in July, 1973.

Hoffa's Son Claims He Has Found Witness to Father's Abduction

LAKE ORION, Mich. (AP) — James Hoffa's son says a new witness claims he saw the former Teamsters president kidnapped, but the FBI today rejected the man's account as "a complete fabrication."

The Hoffa family said the witness underwent an "intensive interview" by the FBI and offered "substantial leads."

But Jay Bailey, FBI agent in charge of the Hoffa investigation, said: "We went into this one in depth and it has absolutely no basis in fact."

Hoffa disappeared 13 days ago.

The mystery intensified late Monday when Hoffa's son, Detroit lawyer James P. Hoffa, said a man who says he witnessed the abduction of Hoffa on July 30 gave "very substantial leads which are being followed up very, very carefully."

His words conflicted with statements by FBI investigators. They say hundreds of tips and leads are pouring in and being checked out, but that they have nothing promising to go on.

Speaking to reporters at his father's lakeside home 41 miles north of Detroit, the younger Hoffa said: "One lead we thought was very interesting and which is being checked out has to do with an individual who claims he was an eyewitness to the abduction at the Machus Red Fox (a fashionable restaurant where Hoffa was last seen)."

The FBI said it did not know to whom Hoffa referred.

Hydro May Have to Close Generating Station as Economy Move

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro—in the midst of an expansion program—may have to close one of its existing power stations as an austerity measure, a Hydro spokesman said Monday.

Lorne McConnell, general manager of operations, told an Ontario Energy Board hearing that any closing of the J. Clark Keith generating station in Windsor would last "for a few years at most."

He said Hydro still considers the station to be useful in the long term, but said he had ordered a report from his senior advisors on the consequences of "putting it in mothballs."

He was replying to Andrew Kerekes, counsel for the Consumers Association of Canada, who had asked whether Hydro might not save money by closing its least efficient coal-fired generating station.

In evidence already presented, Hydro has predicted a current 38-per-cent margin of surplus generating capacity, above expected peak demands, will be short-lived. The Crown agency plans to spend $14 billion to increase its capacity by 50 per cent during the next five years.

Testimony by Hydro witnesses has indicated that because of surplus generating capacity and the greater efficiency of newer stations, the Keith installation is rarely used.

Completed in 1953 at a cost of $47 million, the station was the second largest steam generating plant in Canada. It employs a staff of 200 and has an over-all operating budget of about $5 million for 1975.

The hearings into a Hydro proposal for a general rate increase of 25 per cent in 1976 are to continue to the end of next week when they will be adjourned to permit the board to write an interim report to the government.

The hearings will resume in September.

Car Rolls, Woman Hurt

TRENTON — A 21-year-old Cobourg woman, Lene Hansen of 43 King St. East was treated for minor injuries and released from hospital here following a single-car collision on the Wooler Rd. Monday.

Brighton police say the Hansen vehicle went out of control after hitting the gravel shoulder.

Police said the vehicle rolled onto its roof causing an estimated $500 damage.

Graduate Quality Debated

BLOOMFIELD — A Canadian Chamber of Commerce study which showed today's high school graduates lack basic language and math skills received mixed reaction Monday night from the Prince Edward County Board of Education.

The survey taken last year and released several months ago criticized the educational system in Ontario for the quality of graduate it is producing. The study was done on first year preformance at Canadian universities and Colleges.

Hillier trustee Clare McFaul suggested that the Canadian Chamber of Commerce should send the results to the ministry of education where it could do some good. He was implying that control of curriculum is out of the hands of local boards of education.

Director of education John McNeil said he felt the report had merit and that the board should take a look at the results and give its views to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Murray Residents Fear Tax Hike with Annexation

TRENTON — Fred Hilling, project co-ordinator with the commission studying government restructuring in Northumberland County, said today Murray Township residents expressed concern Monday over higher taxation they would face if they joined Trenton under annexation.

Mr. Hilling said they worried over "what it's going to cost and who was going to pay for it."

Reaction set in after study commissioner Donald King read renton's brief to 20 people at a public meeting. The brief called for expansion of the town's western boundary west to the Wooler Rd. north and south to Highway 401 and the Bay of Quinte.

The co-ordinator said the attitude was "historical" and based on a feeling on the part of township residents that they've been "ripped off" when they became part of Trenton.

Taxes normally increased for such services as policing, said Mr. Hilling. Town taxpayers pay more for policing than township residents who pay indirectly through taxes to the province.

Those at the public meeting, one of a current set of seven throughout the county, recognized Trenton had a decision to make, said Mr. Hilling. They recognized the town has some "head scratching" to do over its relationship to Northumberland.

Trenton has been considering the benefits of aligning itself with the county.

Woman Injured

MADOC — A car driven by Susan Armstrong, 25, of Marmora St. Madoc travelling westbound on St. Lawrence Street, struck an unattended van causing $1,200 damage early today.

The van, owned by Joseph Rooney was estimated as having $500 damage and the car $700.

The driver of the vehicle was taken to Belleville General Hospital and is in fair condition with multiple contusions.

REAL ESTATE:
BIG INCOME OR GOOD LOCATION?

Ed. McKinney
Realty Ltd.
J. E. McKinney

Which is a better long-term investment — a high-income property in a deteriorating neighborhood or a low income property in a superior location?

Based only on these facts, the lower income property in the good neighborhood is the better investment. Why? Because the most important factors to be considered in any real estate investment is location. Nothing else comes close in importance. It is extremely rare when property, in a prime location, turns out to be a bad investment in the long run. This is true even if too high a price is paid. As time goes on, the superior location will command higher rents which will outrun the market. The income base will rise as will the resale value of the property.

On the other hand, the high income property in the deteriorating neighborhood will decrease in value, maintenance expense will increase and resale will be a problem, if possible at all.

Many Trenton Residents Favor Hastings County Tie

TRENTON — Trenton, a separated town but with some services provided by Hastings County, now is caught in the middle of a quandary. Where should it look to expand — east or west?

Trenton officials had expressed fears the town will soon run out of land for industry and housing, which they say now is in limited supply. Some see Murray Township in Northumberland County as the logical direction to look for that land.

Towards the east, little land is available for development and the feeling seems prevalent that Trenton would rather stay clear of Belleville, a city more than twice the town's size.

People in downtown Trenton were asked where they thought Trenton should go — east or west. Their replies were:

EARL STEINBERG

Earl Steinberg, co-owner of the Quinte Hotel and a resident of Trenton for eight years, says Trenton should tie itself with Hastings.

"Something has got to give them (Trenton) a boom," he said. "Nothing has been happening to Trenton."

He suggested the town tie its fortunes with Belleville and then potentially ride a boom the city has had over the past five years.

ALBERT STEINBERG

Albert Steinberg, also part owner of the Quinte Hotel, concurred with his brother Earl, favoring Hastings over Northumberland County.

He likened Belleville-Trenton to joint cities such as Kitchener-Waterloo in western Ontario.

Mr. Steinberg said "Somehow, there hasn't been any growth (in Trenton) in the last 10 years. No prosperity. In building, there has been a little bit recently; but not enough to maintain requirements necessary to make growth."

RICHARD GOODFELLOW

A Middleton Park resident for the past five years, Richard Goodfellow said Trenton should align itself with Northumberland County.

CFB Trenton is a "natural barrier" to Trenton. Arguing against Hastings, Mr. Goodfellow said, "If Trenton went in with Belleville it would be a junior partner. If it went in with Northumberland, it would be a more equal partner."

There is "nowhere to expand in the east," he said, "it has to go west. It's a more logical move."

HEATHER FITZGERALD

Student of laboratory science technology at St. Lawrence College in Kingston, Heather Fitzgerald says, "Trenton would benefit more from Hastings rather than going with a small county like Northumberland."

Hastings, says the nine-year resident of Trenton, is bigger, and a lot richer in resources.

"As far as providing for more land," she said, didn't see why Trenton couldn't make "an arrangement" with Murray Township.

ALBERT CUNNELL

Life-long Trenton resident Albert Cunnell, 52, says the town can't go east because the air station is in the way. "So I feel we have to go west."

However, Mr. Cunnell acknowledged some problems of jurisdiction, specifically as far as veterans pensions are concerned. A veteran himself, he now deals with Kingston. He says if he lived in Brighton for example, he would have to deal with Toronto.

BURTON WALLACE

Burton Wallace, a Glen Miller resident for 13 years and a one-time businessman in Trenton, says Trenton should stay in Hastings County. "It's always been known to be in Hastings County."

Now an employee of Canadian Tire here, Mr. Wallace says "It's built pretty near solid from here to Belleville anyway."

"It will in time become solid whether they join or don't join," he says.

Officials Say Typhoid Unlikely to Reach County

By RON HIUSER

PICTON — There is no alarm in Prince Edward County over the recent outbreak of typhoid fever in the Kingston area.

Dr. Lenk of the Hastings and Prince Edward Health Unit said in a telephone interview he feels it was just an isolated case, restricted to one camp north of Kingston.

The people who were contaminated probably had a common source such as milk, food, or through the water, said Dr. Lenk.

Dr. Lenk said there has been one case of typhoid reported in Prince Edward County who was at the camp. The girl, Dr. Lenk stated, was taken to Prince Edward Memorial Hospital and immediately transferred to a hospital in Kingston.

"In my opinion, the typhoid is contained by now. It should be over," said Dr. Lenk.

There will be no warning given by the health unit Dr. Lenk said.

The superintendent of the Outlet Provincial Park, Bob Davison said there is no reason to give a warning to swimmers at the park since the water is clean.

"We test the water every week, and there has not been an alarming test all summer," said Mr. Davison.

He also reported the same procedure is done at the Sandbanks and at North Bay Beach, giving no traces of contamination.

Attendance at the beaches has been reported as being the same and there has not been a reluctance for people to go into the water.

In Picton proper, Leslie Talley, supervisor of the water purification plant, said, "There is no chance of typhoid in town through the water."

"The bacterial count is practically nil," said Mr. Talley. All samples are sent to Toronto, and "we have had no problem with the water in 12 years," said Mr. Talley.

Mr. William Cooke, administrator of the Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital said there has been "no evidence for typhoid cases here from what I know."

At a number of resorts in the area concern has not made itself evident.

"We have had no one reported sick as yet," said Peter [illegible] of [illegible] Quinte Resort.

Education Board Adds $2,500 for New Courts

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — Students at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute (PECI) were served an additional $2,500 Monday night from the Prince Edward Board of Education for the construction of tennis courts at the school.

Threatening to take out a bank loan, president of the Student Council Valarie Ostrander went before the board here seeking additional funds to construct the new tennis courts this September. "It's a last plea for help," said the 18-year-old Grade 13 student.

The projected cost for the two tennis courts is about $14,500 including the fencing which according to Miss Ostrander was the critical issue Monday night. The Student Council raised $5,000 for the courts last year through dances and candy sales.

The board had previously committed $4,000 to the project of this year's budget but were reluctant to give more because of fiscal restraints. The students require an additional $5,600 to complete the tennis courts.

Dipping into next year's budget, the board approved $2,500 with a charge to the students to raise the remaining funds. Impressed with the students' enthusiasm to see the project under way this fall, Athol trustee Hutton Martin made the recommendation.

Miss Ostrander assured the board members that the students would raise the remaining funds through dances.

Burttdale Residents Say Builder Not Keeping Word

TRENTON — Larry DesRochers, Maurice H. Rollins Construction Ltd., customer service manager, denied Monday claims by a Burttdale Heights spokesman that the builder is intimidating subdivision homeowners.

John Rittwage, chairman of an ad hoc committee drawn from the 74-home subdivision, said Monday the Belleville builder has "broken his word to us" in not notifying the committee when builder representatives enter he subdivision to look at homes.

Mr. Rittwage said a verbal agreement was given by Mr. DesRochers that "he would agree to have committee members with him when he went through homes."

The agreement was elicited for fear householders would be intimidated, he said.

Mr. DesRochers denied the charge of intimidation.

The charges and countercharges were sparked early Monday by two Rollins' carpenters who entered the subdivision.

Mr. Rittwage said they were "snooping". Mr. DesRochers said they were checking homes against a master list of home defects claimed by subdivision householders.

The men, he said, were checking what materials they would need to do repairs to homes covered by the builder's warranty.

Monday's flurry of charges follows a 43-name petition filed with Rollins in which residents of the Home Ownership Made Easy (HOME) plan subdivision claimed faults in their homes were met with promises but no repairs.

Prompted by the petition, a builder-residents meeting in late July forced a plan in which a master list of householder complaints will serve as the focus of negotiations to assess builder responsibility for repairs. A residents' committee was formed to conduct talks.

At that meeting Mr. Rollins, promised to correct all faults, judged to be his responsibility, under an extension of the usual one-year warranty period.

Mr. DesRochers said he had men available to work on warranty items Monday and therefore began that work: "We're not there to intimidate customers."

He claimed his words were "twisted".

"Our only promise was to sit down with the committee and talk over items we're responsible for," he said. "There will be some items that will have to be under negotiation to see if they're valid."

Assault Charge Laid

PICTON — A 20-year-old Picton youth was charged with assault Monday after investigations by town police into an incident Sunday, July 27, on Bowery St., here.

John Marvin Chapman has been charged in the incident.

PERCA Gets Grant

PICTON — A $3,000 grant has been awarded to the Prince Edward Regional Conservational Authority, under the provincial Conservations Authority Act.

Joe Perry, assistant to Jim Taylor MPP for the riding, said the grant will go for the construction of benches and other park equipment in the headquarter workshop at the McCauley Mountain Conservation Area, in Picton.

Old Age Pensioners' Federation a Probability According to Walter Turnbull

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — There may be light at the end of the long federal bureaucratic tunnel for old age pensioners.

Walter Turnbull, former senior secretary to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, says he is becoming increasingly optomistic about getting a truly national federation of old page pensioners into reasonably well organized and financed operation.

Financed either by a $3 annual "checkoff" made by the National Health and Welfare Department from pensions.

Or, preferably, funded instead, by the department itself, on the same annual $3 per pensioner basis.

The proposition which Mr. Turnbull has taken up personally already with both Finance Minister John Turner and Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde will be debated at the annual convention here in mid-month of the National Pensioners and Senior Citizens Federation of Canada.

This organization, based in Toronto, comes as close as any to being representative of pensioners all across the country.

But like the Senior Citizens Council of the National Capital and Eastern Ontario, of which Walter Turnbull is president, it doesn't speak for every member or organization of the nationwide community of pensioners.

However, first things first — so back to the beginning.

Walter Turnbull was Mackenzie King's right hand man back in the days when Canadian Prime Ministers still believed that one good, capable man could handle the job now shared by a small army of special assistants, executive assistants, senior secretaries, executive advisers, and assorted on-staff academics and bureaucratic eggheads.

That made the one secretary a power second only to the Prime Minister himself.

King rewarded the good and faithful Turnbull with appointment as Deputy Postmaster General after years of fiercely devoted service.

And long after Mackenzie King has gone, Walter Turnbull is still hyper-active at 80.

Hyper, because he is not only running Canada's Capital Visitors and Convention Bureau, but busy organizing pensioners all over Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec into an increasingly powerful Senior Citizens Council.

Powerful not only in numbers, but in influence, because Walter Turnbull, with his old "Mackenzie King Connection," has the ear of the Liberal Establishment including, significantly, John Turner and Marc Lalonde.

It has been Turnbull's determination for a long time that a national organization of pensioners — and there really isn't one now — can't operate on a voluntary basis.

"It must be funded," he insists.

So it was his idea the $3 annually be deducted by Health and Welfare from pension cheques.

"Unions do it," he says, "even the federal government's own civil service unions."

But while he hasn't found Marc Lalonde or John Turner actually "hostile" to the idea, he suspects they might be a little concerned that if they approved such a pension checkoff, they might be setting up a national organization that could become, well, "troublesome."

Meanwhile, New Democratic House Leader Stanley Knowles, himself and old age pensioner and veteran of the Commons whose prime concern from the outset of his long parliamentary years has been the welfare of the elderly, is into the act.

"I know all about Walter Turnbull's idea," he says, "and it's good.

"But better still would be to have the feds themselves pay that $3 per year per head checkoff.

"The pensioners get little enough, and although perhaps $3 per year wouldn't hurt, how must better to have Health and Welfare pay it.

"The government funds enough other national organizations, goodness knows — and it makes infinite grants including money for pensioners' New Horizons projects.

"With federal funding there could be a real national organization — there isn't really one now — pensioners groups are too fragmented yet."

Yes, Stanley Knowles will be working — and talking it up — at the National Federation's mid-month convention here, so something tangible could result.

Blight on Landscape

Conservation . . . War on Waste . . . Husbanding of Resources . . . Recycling. These are all terms that are sinking into the public consciousness, and with growing practical application.

In the same vein, this heading over a recent Ministry of the Environment advertisement: The Abandoned Car is on The Road to Recovery."

The provincial department ad, complete with a graphic picture of an abandoned car from the late thirties or early forties, paints a scene that is repeated throughout the province and across the continent.

It tells of the Ministry's plan to get abandoned cars out of the fields and into recycling plants where valuable materials will be recovered and used. A pilot project is under way in Temiskaming and the Ministry is negotiating with 16 other municipalities for similar ventures.

Recycling of garbage is also being stepped up, to come back into use as fuel, landfill, paper, cardboard, and metals. The first recycling plant is underway in North York and others will be established over the next 15 years.

To look at the abandoned car situation again: the Ministry says there are half-a-million dotted across the provincial scene. If we are truly to live up to the maxim of keeping Ontario beautiful, proclaimed on car plates, then this surely is a task to be pursued vigorously.

In the United States it's a similar story. The problem there is multiplied many times over (at last count the number of abandoned vehicles was put at 20 million) yet the landscape is being cleaned up considerably in states such as California and Pennsylvania.

In an article in The Christian Science Monitor, David Winder says that in those states a phone call can bring out tow trucks or even helicopters for vehicles pushed over seacliffs or down steep ravines (some of the vehicles were used in the slapstick comedy days).

California removed 54,000 vehicles in the past two years and hopes to wipe out a backlog of 240,000 within five years. But 80,000 are added every year, so the task will be an ongoing one.

Here in Ontario it is good to see action toward cleaning up the abandoned car situation. Over a wide area of this continent, people are becoming more conscious of all the ramifications of waste and conservation. It has been a hard lesson but people are learning it. And to the benefit of all.

Burial Ground Clean-up

One of the really fine things issuing from the government make-work programs is that necessary work gets done in situations that might otherwise experience continuing abandonment.

An example is the LIP grant of $16,577 that has seen clean-up work carried out over a period of months on seven abandoned burial grounds in Sophiasburg township. The interest in the past of a historic nature that prevails these days might not extend to such initiatives in the ordinary way. The township cemetery board is to be commended therefore in having taken steps to gt this work done.

Together with local histories, such as those compiled in the Madoc area — this too through the aid of government grants — there is a wealth of what might be termed "unfinished business" awaiting similar ventures. It all makes for useful productive work which future generations will live to appreciate.

Brockville Recorder and Times

The coup that overthrew General Yakabu Gowon as Nigeria's head of state, with one military regime replacing another, emphasizes the fact that in black Africa, power comes not from parliamentary rule but from the barrel of a gun. The Nigerian coup (the third in the 15 years since it became independent of Britain), is yet another illustration that the only way to change leaders is through a coup or revolution. Not one of black Africa's past leaders has been removed through an election; all have been toppled in coups.

Lobbying Becoming Respectable?

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Lobbying has long been a dirty word in politics.

Since the days of the Tea Pot Dome scandal in the United States in the early '20s we have associated it with bribery, corruption and venality in public officials, elected and non-elected.

Our repugnance to the word and practice has been mainly inherited from the U.S.

It has never been a major factor with us, particularly at the provincial level.

But still it is something to be sneered at.

It therefore may come as a shock, let alone a surprise, to know that the government is encouraging lobbying.

So much so that in the past little while ministers have publicly encouraged groups to start lobbying.

Provincial Secretary for Natural Resources Alan Grossman speaking to the Ontario Chamber of Commerce advised it to put a man into Queen's Park.

And Environment Minister William Newman told the Chemical Association that it should "toot its horn."

Their formal excuse for saying these things was that they should know more about what was going on and let the public know what they were doing.

But actually what they were doing was extending an invitation to start lobbying.

Behind this was the fact that governments today are finding that hobbies can be useful.

Firstly, they can provide information that is useful in bringing down balanced legislation, thus avoiding future embarrassing changes and withdrawals.

Then they can find them useful allies.

On the other side, for the parties concerned they can be both effective and valuable.

A current prime example of this is AMPCO (The Association of Major Power Users in Ontario).

AMPCO, which represents most of the big industrial users of electricity in Ontario was strongly opposed to the big capital spending program of Ontario Hydro and to its projected rate increases.

It protested vigorously and intelligently and it won.

The government ordered Hydro to cut back. And subsequently the corporation anounced that it was cutting back substantially on its proposed rate increases.

But most significantly the government was happy to see AMPCO in the picture.

For it has trouble with Hydro and the association of industrial users represented a valuable ally.

Big-time Aussie Bureaucrat Views Us Through the Past And Empire-colored Specs

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

GENEVA PARK — What's an international bureaucrat? Don't know? What's a bureaucrat, the kind you meet at a local government office or who anonymously reminds you when not enough taxes have been paid or sends you a form reply when you write the government in righteous rage?

The international brand works in the most exotic levels of paperwork, decision-making and international jet travel.

He is either in charge of, or works for an international agency with a quasi-familiar acronym like FAO (Food and Agricultural Organization) or ECLA (Economic Commission for Latin America) or in the good, old UN, repository of the same empire-building, you find these days in any government department, global or local.

Such an international bureaucrat, though I suspect no wheelspinner, is Sir Robert Jackson, an Australian, who was spinning nevertheless a few stories and theories of his own at this year's 44th Couchiching Conference.

Sir Robert who began life with government as an officer in the Royal Australian Navy has done it all, one of the heads of UNRRA (United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Agency), adviser to a dozen emerging countries in Africa and Asia, in charge of the recent UN Bangladesh famine relief program.

Sir Robert sees Canada in the light of a less-complicated time when "Mike," that's the late prime minister Lester B. Pearson, was preparing his famous report on the Third World for the World Bank in the mid-60s (and when Canada's mediating role was strong and went unchallenged.

Some of us tried to unburden him of his views that what his old pals and young comers in Ottawa say and do about foreign aid and assistance relates very little to current public opinion which is blase if not downright opposed to outside assistance.

A Canadian government which didn't have the fortitude to say yes or no to the UN for this country as the venue for the controversial UN criminology conference but asked for a postponement, is hardly functioning in the role of Sir Robert's old friend "Mike."

One wonders, therefore, if he views national societies in the other developed countries in such old-fashioned terms as he does our own?

About his homeland he had nice things to say about Prime Minister Gaugh Whitlam's hard-hit government in general, even though admitting to his personal problems of leadership.

Sir Robert told the conference he doesn't care any more about the olds hands in the international agencies only for the younger ones coming along who will have to cope with a world of goodness knows what style in the year 2000.

And yet as a very senior international bureaucrat, under secretary general of the United Nations no less, his pontifications reminded me more of something from the British Raj, (remember the imperial throne of the British kings in India), than a man wrestling with the likes of the new international economic order.

Such bon mots as "I know the mind of Waldheim (Secretary-General of the UN) as well as I know my own," suggests he gives much precedence to what comes from it.

He should linger longer in Canada and replace some of those quaint asides with assessments of the real world outside.

Ottawa's 'Piebald Policies'

Editor
The Intelligencer:

Some people are red. Others are green. Some are plain yellow. Colour me browned off! I'm browned off with political lemons who talk a blue steak on the election trail, then hoist a black out on constituents once they get their feet up on a mahogany government desk.

I'm browned off with politicians who turn green at the gills over the death penalty while promoting parole at the expense of the law abiding citizen with a Green Paper on Immigration that makes it impossible to deport an undesirable alien: with piebald policies that refuse to "bite the bullet" even as the rapist roams the street.

I'm browned off with being led up the primrose path of socialism that costs me an arm and a leg; by bureaucrats who spend taxpayers greenstuff as if it grew on trees; by pink professors and liberators who roll out the red carpet for every last revolutionary while trying to black out any opposition.

I'm browned off by bleeding hearts who demand Union bargaining rights for prisoners in jail; with being creamed by healthy teenagers panhandling on the street and exhibitionists who dominate our beaches in the raw. I'm browned off with being forced to finance the purple prose of literary louts whose vocabulary does not extend beyond the four letter word.

As we are bludgeoned black and blue by the iron fist of statism, we must be positive of course. After all, there could be a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow — if we ever get around to having another election!

Estimated $1 Million Loss to Toronto Hotel Chain Through Conference Loss

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Does the word "convention" suggest to you a noisy gathering of big butter-and-egg men, drinking and carousing their way through a week of expense-account merriment?

If it does, you may have been watching too many movies.

There's nothing very funny about the convention business in 1975—if, indeed, there ever was.

Conventions are a serious matter for most people who attend them—and for the people in the million-dollar business of staging and supplying conventions.

More than just hoteliers and caterers are concerned with the convention business, although they are the biggest beneficiaries of the $180 that the average delegate spends in his 3.4 days at the typical convention in Canada.

It's big business, as well, for suppliers of audio-visual equipment, printing services, identification badges, sightseeing tours and so on and on.

The White Paper on tax reform in 1969 initially proposed that convention expenses be disallowed as a cost of doing business. The government backed down when it looked into conventions more closely.

To get some idea of the financial importance of conventions, consider the convention that never was.

The fifth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and Treatment of Offenders was to have been held in Toronto during the first 12 days of September this year.

But it won't be, because of public opposition to the planned presence of "observers" from the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The cancellation of the congress is an "economic disaster" to Toronto, says Kai W. Herbranson, vice-president of Sheraton Hotels Ltd.

Mr. Herbranson is also general manager of the Four Seasons Sheraton Hotel, Canada's largest, which was to have been the focal point of the UN congress.

Three and a half years ago, his hotel had set aside 15,000 room-nights and all of its function space from Aug. 27 to Sept. 14 to accommodate the congress.

"We estimate our loss in revenue to be approximately $1-million," Mr. Herbranson says.

Other Toronto-area hotels have also suffered because of the cancellation.

Some, including the Four Seasons Sheraton, now are offering reduced rates to lure visitors during what was to have been the sold-out period of the congress.

The bigger they are, the harder they fall—as the saying goes.

Only the largest cities in Canada can provide as much accommodation as is required for gatherings such as the aborted UN congress or the recent North American Shrine convention.

Sizable groups can also be accommodated in venerable railway resorts such as Banff and Montebello, which are popular with golfers. One of the best of those old timers, the Manoir Richelieu at Murray Bay, Que., was suddenly closed a few weeks ago.

A trend has been developing in recent years toward decentralization of business gatherings, however.

The idea is to get away from the distractions of the big city (where it's too easy to keep in touch with the job) and the lure of the golf course.

A campus on a university in a smaller city can be a good alternate choice, especially in May or September, which are favorite convention months. Students are away then, and so accommodation is plentiful.

Cruise ships are also popular for conventions. Everyone is eager to go on a cruise—but once aboard, the delegates can't get away from the business sessions.

The following evening, August 24, the Fort will be returned to the hands of the Fort Henry Guard. Lt.-Gen. Samuel Jaskilka, Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps, will be the inspecting officer at this cermony. On both occasions, visitors to Old Fort Henry will be treated to a spectacular display of music, marching, drill and gunfire, in which all units will participate.

Labor Force Is Predominantly Young

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian labor force is predominantly young.

It involves a greater proportion of the population than ever before.

But a diminishing fraction of that work force—10.34 million in June, reflecting the usual summer swelling by students and others—is employed making things.

In these and other ways, the nature of employment has been transformed in the last decade or more.

And economic planners inside and ouside government, say they worry that public attitudes and programs have not kept pace with the fundamental changes.

Education, recruitment, retraining and unemployment programs in many cases are geared to a long-gone workaday world when male heads of families dominated a labor force comprising less than half the working-age population were engaged in turning out products of factory, forest or farms.

"The view of our labour market has to be changed very drastically," says Andre Raynauld, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada.

Here are some of the main changes in the labor force, which includes every civilian over 13 outside jails or hospitals who is employed or seeking a job:

Men 25 or older make up fewer than half the labor force, a reversal of the historic pattern that began in late 1973.

—The proportion of working-age persons in the labor force has risen to more than 58 out of 100 from 54 per 100.

—Almost two out of three employees work for governments, in offices and other service jobs, with only one in three producing things—the opposite of the situation less than 30 years ago.

The increased participation in the labor force, especially the growth in numbers of young people and adult women, has been accompanied by a change in the old view that it is important to get a secure job and hold it—to stick to a line of work, if not one employer, for life.

"Young adults and adult women . . . are typically secondary income earners in the family and, therefore, may have weaker job attachments," says the annual spring review of the economy published by the federal finance department.

Adequate unemployment insurance, "together with the growing social acceptance of the right to seek satisfying jobs," has made it easier for people to change jobs and even stay unemployed for stretches between jobs, the finance department observes.

But planners and policy-have to adjust to the changed employment habit and attitudes, economists say.

The idea is no longer valid that young people and women moving in and out of employment constitute the fringe of the labor market, says Mr. Raynauld. Preliminary results of a study of the labor force indicate that the so-called fringe makes up a major proportion of available employees.

"The regular employee stable, keeping his job—is not yet a minority, but almost."

Employers tend to search for what the finance department calls "prime-age male" who are rigorously trained and want a secure job. But there are fewer and fewer around.

Government programs likewise seem geared towards a work force of middle-aged husbands and fathers who are the sole breadwinners in a household and must have and hold a job.

Unemployment insurance programs had such workers uppermost in mind. Parliament seemed to have the adult male breadwinner in mind when it approved the present unemployment system in 1971.

Manpower programs designed to move workers between industries and places often founder on attitudes that put living satisfaction above job security.

Labor economist Kenneth Strand of Vancouver says he sees managerial attitudes changing substantially in the next to years because many now in senior positions started working during the 1930s Depression when jobs were much more vital than today.

But they are being replaced by those developing in less harsh economic conditions.

In any event, the federal manpower department has begun issuing forecasts of the number of new job expected to develop in new industries as far ahead as six years.

Companies do little such planning, says Duncan Campbell, assistant deputy minister for planning and research in the manpower department.

"They put a lot more effort into their financial planning than they do into their manpower planning."

But labor economist Noah Meltz of University of Toronto says the manpower department could do more.

He told a Senate committee that the department doesn't analyse the raw material it does have in the shape of jobs it helps to fill through manpower centres, people hired through its offices for specific job or how many times it finds workers for the same job.

"The present extends into the future," he said. "The same occupations that are in demand now were in demand a few years ago."

Drivers Drunk

YELLOWKNIFE N.W.T. (CP) — RCMP are continuing a crackdown on impaired drivers in an attempt to curb an increase in offences. Police said 21 drivers a month are apprehended with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per-cent, many "well over" that limit. Other alcohol offences do not seem to have increased, but impaired driving charges are "glaringly high," RCMP said

Jobless Insurance: Soft or Too Stern

OTTAWA (CP) — Life isn't easy for the unemployment insurance system.

Some critics regard it as a soft touch for those who would rather use it as a crutch than work.

To others, including perhaps most of the 704,000 jobless estimated for June, it is a stern-hearted, bureaucratic and demeaning alternative to gainful employment.

The answers aren't easy to isolate, especially at a time when despite all the conventional economic wisdom, the jobless rate is running at 7.2 per cent of a labor force of 10.34 million although signs are increasing of an economic upbeat.

Two recent straws in the wind:

An Ontario government study says one reason job vacancies co-exist with unemployment is that employers dislike hiring women, minority worker groups or those from poorer areas.

It discounts the attraction of unemployment insurance in keeping recipients away from available jobs.

A federal study of recipients of jobless insurance in the first half of last year said only one of every five had quit work, Manpower Minister Robert Andras reported to the Commons recently.

Two of every five had been laid off and the other two were out of work and drawing benefits for reasons ranging from pregnancy to illness, return to school, retirement or labor disputes.

He said many out of work cannot qualify for benefits.

In any event the June 23 federal budget moved to toughen qualifications for unemployment insurance for those leaving jobs or refusing to take new ones.

It also forecast legislation to boost premiums paid by employers and employees by about 20 per cent effective next Jan. 1, to a maximum of about $3.11 weekly for workers and $4.34 for employers.

Finance Minister John Turner announced June 23 that the swollen jobless rate, up to 7.2 per cent for June, indicates the benefits bill for the year ending next March 31 will be about $3.75 billion, or more than 1.4 billion higher than last fiscal year.

The other side of the coin for the system is illustrated in legislation being drafted to make job training courses available to those out of work.

Mr. Andras sees it as in-programs with jobless insurance, and a pilot project is being tested in Newfoundland

But federal governments have been wrestling for yars with the system. Adult occupation training, for example, began in the mid-1960s.

The old National Employment Service, now known as Canada Manpower Centres, was separated from unemployment insurance in 1966 because it was criticized as being more concerned with the jobless than in finding jobs for them.

Under the proposed new legislation, more unemployed would get unemployment insurance and training at the same time, rather than getting separate training allowances. It is hoped this will free more money to train or retrain more people.

Slightly more than half the people now taking training programs are jobless when they start, with about 70,000 in federally-financed training programs at any one time.

In an interview, Mr. Andras said job training provided under a 1967 act was slow to develop.

Under that legislation, the provinces do a major share of the work with federal funds contributed.

Manpower department officials say there are three basic guides involved in the existing system of job training:

1. The employer is considered responsible for training.
2. Training is considered a major tool in shaping industrial development strategy.
3. The government objective that all workers be given tial workr an equal chance at a job, hence the emphasis on training handicapped.

Jobless Rate Climbs In Spite of 'Recovery'

OTTAWA (CP) — Amid signs of economic recovery, the jogless rate still is the worst—and rising—since the Depression of the 1930s. It is expected to stay high for some time yet.

Creation of new jobs will lag behind improvement in other sectors of the economy, Manpower Minister Robert Andras has said in discussing programs in the June 23 budget to meet that problem. Finance Minister John Turner says the problem may run well into 1976.

The Conference Board in Canada, in a quarterly assessment issued July 4 by that private, non-profit organization of corporations, governments, some unions and trade and industry associations, forecasts a strong economic recovery in the last half of 1975, but an increase in the jobless rate.

That might mean an official jobless roll of one million or more next winter, always Canada's darkest employment period.

But some senior economists say the situation may not be as grim as the statistics show. They have counselled caution in applying special, costly job-making efforts and the federal budget in fact limited provisions for such steps to $450 million over two years.

Experts such as Andre Raynauld, chairman of the advisory Economic Council of Canada, and Gerald K. Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, argue in effect that:

—Official unemployment statistics may add up to an exaggeration because they take no account of changed work habits and attitudes, including thousands who may go jobless on purpose.

—Unemployment is not the hardship it used to be. Families often have more than one income. Unemployment insurance benefits are bigger since 1972 reforms. There are other sources or ready cash, such as monthly family allowances.

—Expensive counter measures now against unemployment would probably stimulate inflation.

In any case, the economists predict, the job market should be booming again once the country moves out of the 1970s.

The arguments against special measures for the unmployed offer no comfort, of course, to the likes of Toronto welder Fred Hargreaves 47, father of four, one of the 800,000 official unemployed in the spring, who said after almost four months living on unemployment insurance and searching vainly for work:

"You get by . . . but it's been the most depressing time in my life."

Nor does it necessarily help to grasp the expert explanations easily, as does honors economics student John Dorsay, 23, of Dartmouth, N.S., who had trouble finding a summr job for the first time in seven years.

If present trends hold, the job situation will be even worse when John Dorsay and thousands like him complete their schooling next spring.

By then, Statistics Canada may be recording one million unemployed—one in 10 of the work force. That is the worst mark since the Great Depression 40 years ago put more than one million members of a much smaller labor force out of work and pushed the estimated unemployment rate to 23 per cent.

The latest figures show unemployment totalling 704,000 or 7.2 per cent on the seasonally-adjusted basis used by Statistics Canada to even out the dips and peaks in the labor market caused by Canada's seasonally-influenced work patterns.

That figure for June confirmed forecasts by inching up from 7.1 jobless in May and Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, noting that the rate for those under 25 was 12.6 per cent, accused the government of fighting "inflation on the backs of the young people of this country."

The jobless rate thus may move into double figures—10 per cent or more—following months of so-called double-digit inflatin.

It is the persistence of high rates of inflation and unemployment at the same time that has prompted economists and others to question the job statistics.

The arithmetic of recent unemployment seems simple enough: More than 360,000 people joined the labor force in the 12 months ended April 30, as employees or persons looking for jobs. But the number of available jobs grew by only 135,000 in the same period.

Simple subtraction gives the result: Unemployment up by more than 225,000 this spring over last spring.

At the same time, the annual inflation rate continues as more than 10 per cent. And by orthodox economic theory, that isn't supposed to happen.

Conventional economics has it that productive activity and employment is strong — unemprice are rising rapidly under pressure of strong demand for goods and services.

And steady or falling prices are supposed to be a sign of slackening business activity, when the job market tightens and unemployment gets worse.

In fact, ignoring short-term ups and downs, the unemployment statistic have really been worsening steadily for the last 10 years. They show the labor force has grown by almost 2.7 million in a decade, but the number of jobs by fewer than 2.2 million, leaving 500,000 to join the unemployment list.

Authorities say they are puzzled in particular by the persistence through the last two years of comparatively high rates of unemployment — more than 500,000 or an average 5½ per cent of the labor force — when productive activity and prices were going full blast in 1973-74.

Healthy growth in output, says the Economic Council, seems unlikely anymore to signal reduced unemployment, as it once did.

"We cannot be absolutely sure of this. . . . This puzzling phenomenon suggests the possibility, at least, that there are factors that tend to keep the numbers of measured unemployed substantially higher than in the past," the council says in its latest annual review of the economy.

The economists say they suspect that the factors keeping jobless rates high through good times and bad include a trend among housewives and younger people to take occasional jobs. They move in and out of employment but stay officially in the labor force, often collecting unemployment insurance between jobs.

These groups swell the size of the labor force and the tally of jobless.

But economists are not certain about the extent or permanence of such changes in employment habits.

And politicians and planners are groping for ways to respond to the changes through new tax and spending policies, and by industrial, training and immigration programs.

Exercise — Everybody's Doing It!

By Sharon Airhart

The man down the street is jogging every morning at 6.

Your grandmother bought a 10-speed bike.

Everybody, it seems, is into exercise.

If you're a basically sedentary person, you're probably beginning to feel a little uncomfortable. It's beginning to look like you're just going to have to do something or be left far behind by the keep-fit freaks. Besides, it looks like they're having more fun than you are.

What are you going to do about it? Likely you'll buy or borrow from the library one of hundreds of books on exercise and keeping fit. National magazines — mostly U.S. — based — over flow with how-to articles designed to keep you fit with a minimum of agony. There's even a new book, recently serialized in a national newspaper, which promises to keep you fit in 30 minutes a week. After four weeks you'll be in good shape, the author promises and after six months you'll be in excellent shape by any standards.

Or perhaps you'll sign up for an exercise or keep-fit class at the YMCA, take up jogging or buy a pedometer and measure you miles or take up badminton or yoga with Kareen.

Whatever road you take, you'll probably be better for it.

Pam Barrett, YMCA physical director, demonstrates exercise cycle.

Only Way to Get Fit Is to Keep on Trying

Pam Barrett, physical director at the YMCA, says that most people can't get fit because they become discouraged too easily.

"They've been out of condition for years and then they come in here to an exercise program and expect to get in condition again in a week," she says.

"It won't happen. It takes a long while to get in shape."

In spite of the easily discouraged who drop out, more than 300 persons work out regularly at the Y, many in exercise, keep fit, aquabics, yoga and judo classes. Others just swim and sauna regularly to get and stay in condition. There's even a slender figure class.

Pam expects the numbers to increase as long as interest continues to grow in getting into condition.

What might also encourage more fitness is a new program which the Y hopes to initiate in the fall.

"We're hoping to get fitness testing into the Y," she says. "People can come for an evening and be tested — including a test of their cardiovascular system — and find out what level they're at. They can learn what level of physical fitness they can hope to reach."

"I think Participaction—the federal government's advertising campaign to promote physical activity — has encouraged people who weren't active before."

She said the object of the program was to counter the competitive aspect of physical activity so that more people would become active.

"The emphasis is on individual pursuit."

"We like to encourage people because they give up so easily," Pam adds.

"They believe exercise is something they have to do not want to do.

"We think you should do something you enjoy — like swimming — rather than jogging a mile and hating it."

Burning Calories

Housewives Luckier Than Typists

If you're planning to sit and watch television tonight, remember that your body will only be burning 25 calories an hour while you're at it.

That hardly balances a fat handful of potato chips and a soft drink or beer.

If you took up knitting while you watched television, however, you could probably eat an apple every hour without being overdrawn at the calorie bank for the day.

On the other hand, if you did the week's ironing while watching you'd be able to reward yourself with a piece of apple pie.

Keeping fit and free from obesity is a matter of this basically simple mathematics with, some experts contend, one proviso. To stay slim you must expend as much as you taken in; to stay fit some of the calories you burn must be used in more-srtenuous-than-normal activity.

Experts say that your body burns approximately 1500 calories a day just operating; any caloric use above that comes solely from activity whether you're spending 270 calories and hour hanging up the wash or 100 calories an hour preparing supper.

If you're an office worker you're spending far fewer calories than the housekeeper (bed-making 300, dishwashing 75, laundering 200, floor mopping, 200) or the outdoor labourer (tree chopping 480 farmer driving tractor 150 or lawn mower 460). Typing for example, expends only 50 calories an hour; bookkeepers do no better. Seated benchwork such as an assembly line worker might do, burns only 75 calories an hour.

But if you're physically active after work: gardening, 250; tennis doubles, 250; or even golfing, 250, you can make up the difference between calories in and calories out.

And if at least 200 of those calories according to author Laurence Morehouse, are used in doing something which increases your heart rate, you will keep you body from deteriorating.

How can you do that without changing your lifestyle and making a basically non-active person into a sport? Morehouse, in total Fitness, recommends doing everything you do a little more strenuously.

Another good idea might be simple activity substitution. Instead of playing cards with friends, 25 calories an hour, try croquet. Even that tame sport burns 250 calories an hour. If you were going to play volleyball, play badminton instead — you'll expend twice the calories.

Even going fishing expends six times the calories you'd use watching a sportsman's show on television.

In really severe cases, you might even ask for a job transfer.

A file clerk uses 200 calories an hour compared to the switchboard operator's 50. A carpenter might give up hammering (250) for sawing (300).

Whatever you do, you're burning calories.

In fact just reading this article probably used about 10 calories.

Salt Shortage Stops Picklers

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Food processors might be forced to close next week because of a shortage of salt used in canning operations, industry spokesman said Monday.

The major salt suppliers—the Canadian Salt Co. of Windsor and Sifto Salt, a division of Domtar Chemicals—both are on strike.

Muriel Webster, manager of the Ontario Food Processors' Association, said her organization had surveyed its 45 members and discovered some companies might run out of salt by Aug. 20.

She said tomatoes will be hard hit because the impending salt shortage coincides with the peak delivery time for the crop, and tomatoes must be processed as soon as they are delivered.

Spokesmen for Hunt-Weston Foods of Canada Ltd., Libby McNeil and Libby of Canada Ltd., and H. J. Heinz of Canada Ltd., said they have stocks on hand and have placed orders with suppliers in the United States.

But U.S. suppliers might fail the Canadian market, Mrs. Webster said. She had been told they planned to supply their own customers first and ship only excess stocks to Canada.

Mrs. Webster said higher consumer prices for all tomato products would result from a prolonged strike in the salt industry.

Healing Substance...
Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch
Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Ann Landers

Last Straw for Restaurant Worker

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to you because tonight was the last straw.

I've been in the restaurant business for 12 years—started as a dishwasher then progressed to management. I've seen some pretty strange things in this line of work, but what happened this evening took first place.

About 6:30 p.m. a young couple came in. I seated them and went for the menus. When I returned they were already spooning Chinese food from cartons on to our dinner plates. They had purchased egg rolls and chop suey down the street from a carry-out place.

When they saw me standing there with the menus they ordered tea. I was so stunned I couldn't speak. I served the tea and clocked them. They stayed for about an hour, enjoying our linen napkins, water, salt and pepper, sugar and dinner rolls. No tip was left.

Something like this probably won't happen again for another 12 years, but if it does—what would you do if you were in my place?—Speechless

Dear S.: I'd inform the clods that they should picnic elsewhere and then I'd usher them politely to the door.

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to answer some of the questions asked by "You Know Me—I'm Your Wife," because I think I DO know her and she IS my wife.

The woman wrote, "My husband gave me the same thing again this year for my birthday. An argument."

I wonder if she remembers our early years. Every gift I ever bought for her was too big, too little, too loud, too ordinary.

She griped because "he gave me a broom and new linoleum for Christmas instead of something personal." Could it be that he did it because she took far more pride in the way the floors looked than in her own appearance?

Her final volley, "It hurts when the person I love most in the world won't even buy me a 10-cent card for my birthday." I can just see my wife's face if I ever handed her a 10-cent card. I'd never hear the end of it.

Thanks for letting me have my say.—Feel Better Already

Dear F.B.A.: How would you feel if you knew I received nearly 100 letters from men who were certain that letter was written by THEIR wives? Have a nice day—all of you!

Dear Ann Landers: You are forever stressing the importance of women having pap tests and breast examinations in order to detect cancer early. Please tell me at what age should these examinations begin?

My mother says not until you are married or have a baby. But some of my friends who are 7 and 18 have already started to have these examinations.

Please print this letter because I'm sure a lot of other teen-age girls would like to 17 and 18 have already started 16

Dear W.: If a girl has not had sexual relations, such examinations are not necessary until 22 or 23, unless, of course, she notices some symptoms, such as unexplained bleeding or lumps in her breast.

If the girl has had sexual relations, the examinations should start at 18.

Karsh Has Learned to See With His Mind and Heart

OTTAWA (CP) At a recent photographic exhibition of Men Who Make Our World by Yousuf Karsh, the museum director noticed that, day after day, an elderly visitor stood before the same portrait—that of the famous cellist, Pablo Cassals, photographed from the back.

Finally, consumed with curiosity, the director asked why. The visitor put a finger to his lips.

"Please do not disturb me," he said, "can't you see, I am listening to the music."

Karsh's eyes twinkled with delight as he retold this story. He believes a portrait photographer has two main tasks: to lay bare the soul of his subject, and to stir the emotions of his viewer.

"To make enduring photographs," he said, "one must learn to see with the mind's eye, for the mind and the heart are the true lens of the camera."

At 66, Yousuf Karsh is, as he has been for many years, the world's most famous portrait photographer. The first thing one notices on entering his studio in the Chateau Laurier Hotel here is a familiar photograph of the Queen and Prince Philip.

Reproductions of this "portrait by Karsh" are hanging in classrooms, courtrooms and civic buildings across the country.

Its prominent place on his wall is perhaps symbolic of gratitude for his Canadian citizenship. He came to Canada in 1924 as a refugee from the Armenian massacres, bringing with him little more than good manners and the name of his Uncle Nakash in Sherbrooke, Que. Now the still-youthful and enthusiastic photographer says of his adopted country: "It happened to be the best in the world."

Several months in the fourth grade in Sherbrooke represent his only formal education. But he has since been granted honorary doctorates by a score of Canadian and American universities.

Karsh first achieved international renown in 1941 with his photograph of Winston Churchill. It was taken without Churchill's advance permission, with the help and encouragement of Karsh's friend and patron, then Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The British prime minister had just addressed the combined Houses of the Canadian Parliament. He was taken aback to find a photographer in the Speaker's chamber, lights already in place.

"It is true," Karsh admits to the frequently - asked question, "that I did remove the cigar from Winston Churchill's lips—but with infinite respect!"

Since then, Karsh has photographed the Royal Family, Pope John XXIII, Pablo Picasso, John F. Kennedy, Albert Einstein, Eleanor Roosevelt, Helen Keller, Nikita Khrushchev, George Bernard Shaw, and countless other leaders in the arts and sciences and in world affairs.

"But it is the great in spirit I like to photograph," he said, "whether they be famous or humble."

However, there are gaps in his collection.

"Chairman Mao still is missing," he said, with a note of wistfulness.

Even if this picture were possible, Karsh would not be wholly content.

"I would have liked to photograph the great leaders of all ages, and the great sages of all religions."

Karsh is at present studying languages and carrying out experiments in photography, in addition to performing photographic assignments all over the world.

Last spring he spent 10 days on horseback, photographing wild boars and flamingoes in France. He also is working on a new book of portraits of Canadian personalities.

This summer he is guest of honor at the Arles Festival of the Arts in France and will show some of his famous photographs.

Crossing Generations

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A tiny tot attending the Tamalpais nursery school, after observing the senior neighbors in the Redwoods retirement hom across the street, suggested: 'Let's visit those old ladies across the street." The nursery school teacher thought it a good idea and it was arranged. Now, once a week the little ones bring smiles and happiness to the facs of the older ones.

Nuns Want Equality

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The 750 Roman Catholic nuns meeting here this weekend want an equal partnership in the running of the church, including ordination of women and perhaps the eventual election of a woman pope.

The members of the National Assembly of Women Religious say they seek more control over their own lives so they can respond better to today's social issues.

"I am 'church' as much as any bishop," Sister Catherine Pinkerton, 53, said. "We want partnership in the church.

"The whole thrust of this organization is that women should be at the decision-making and policy-making levels in the church."

And she said this includes the possibility of a woman pope someday.

The 3,500-member organization, formed seven years ago, endorsed the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and supported the ordination in 1974 of 11 women in the Episcopal (Anglican) church.

Members of the Chicago-based nuns' group belong to different orders across the United States.

In Edmonton

Family Runs Magic House

EDMONTON (CP — When customers enter Willard's House of Magic, they sometimes take one look at the skeleton on the wall and slowly back out.

Wilfred Willard, who last September opened Alberta's first magic shop—as opposed to joke or novelty shops—says people in Edmonton "still find a magic shop a little strange."

"But I think they'll soon catch on and realize it's a place for jokes and entertainment," he said in an interview.

The shop, designed for both the novice conjurer and the professional performer, sells everything from coin tricks and magic books to a genuine dove pan for stage.

Novelties and masks hang from the ceiling, faded posters of Houdini and Dante the Magician line the walls, and under one counter the owner keeps a bulgy scrapbook from his days as a stage performer.

"You have to be a magician to have a magic shop," said Mr. Willard, 45, who has studied magic for 29 years and made his living at it from 19.

His clientele includes children "who are dying to get in here," mothers who see magic as a possible cure for withdrawn children or those suffering from muscular diseases, and stage groups who want something new for their act.

Salesmen who use magic techniques as ice-breakers, and "old-timers" who dropped the craft and want to get back, are also frequent customers.

A former nightclub performer and carnival swordswallower, Mr. Willard doesn't believe magic can be marketed on a self-serve basis.

For that reason, he and his wife Rita transform the small shop into a free magic show at the customer's request. They will demonstrate any trick, although they won't tell how it works until it is purchased.

"A lot of people who come in the shop aren't interested in magic until they see the tricks demonstrated," the owner said. "Then they become my best customers."

He recommends mechanical devices, which give the illusion of magic but require no skill, for beginners. A jiffy coin-changer which "transforms" nickels into dimes, and a $1 cigarette holder which seemingly produces cigarettes from thin air, are two popular novice items.

Other tricks, such as a cup and a ball, require some sleight-of-hand and take longer to master, Mr. Willard said. From there, the tricks advance to the professional level.

Mr. Willard, who gets help demonstrating from his two sons, said the handful of full-time magicians in the city seem enthusiastic about the shop.

The magician, who first became interested in magic at the age of nine when he saw Dante perform in Montreal, said he has dreamed of owning a magic shop since visiting one in New York in 1946.

A native of Montreal, he worked in clubs there and started his own road show before moving to California where he lived for 15 years. A visit to Edmonton to see relatives last year convinced the Willards to settle here.

However, the magician said that although the shop attracted a lot of initial curiosity, it has taken time to build up a clientele.

"People come by and look in the window, but they won't step inside for weeks. Then sometimes they spend $20 at once."

Future plans include being host at a free one-hour magic show on Saturday mornings, and starting magic classes for hobbyists and close-up performers.

Mr. Willard, who said magic develops speaking ability and wit, believes interest in the "good clean art of magic" is increasing. Last year, it was the fastest-growing hobby in the United States, where magic shops are numerous.

"There isn't a fortune in it yet for me, but I hope that soon we'll get more people in Edmonton interested."

New Ontario Legislature Will Have Eight More Seats

TORONTO (CP) — The new legislature that will sit after Ontario's general election Thursday, Sept. 18, will have 125 seats, eight more than the last house.

The eight seats were added last May, after new boundaries were worked out by an independent commission headed by Rod Lewis, clerk of the legislature, and after a long fight in the legislature, laced with charges of gerrymandering and shouts of foul.

Three of the seats were added in Metropolitan Toronto, one in Halton, two in Peel, one in Kitchener-Waterloo and one in the Niagara area, in order to take into account the rising population in southern Ontario.

One key to winning in the new ridings will be local organizations. With parts of old ridings included in the new constituencies, the three major parties must revamp their local structures.

In addition to adding the eight new seats, the redistribution also restructures a number of older constituencies.

In southwestern Ontario, for example, a new riding, London Centre, has been added to London North and London South to cover the city of London. The two rural ridings of Middlesex North and Middlesex South have been combined to form the riding of Middlesex. All four of the old ridings were strongly Conservative in the 1971 election.

Other MPPs will find their ridings expanded, reduced, or eliminated. For example, Solicitor-General George Kerr's riding of Halton West disappears. He plans to run in the new seat of Burlington South, while James Snow, minister of government services moves to Oakville riding, a new seat replacing Halton East.

There are few changes in Eastern Ontario. Ottawa Centre, held by Michael Cassidy for the NDP in the last legislature, is to be expanded, as is Ottawa East, held by Liberal Albert Roy.

Mr. Roy's constituency originally disappeared, but he waged a successful fight against the redistribution proposal and eventually won a chunk of adjoining Carleton East. His argument was that, because of its high French-Canadian population, Ottawa East should not be split up, as the boundaries commission suggested.

Political Spending To Be Scrutinized

TORONTO (CP) — As the campaign for the Sept. 18 Ontario election gets under way, the new commission on election contributions will start up as well, keeping a legislated eye for the first time on political spending.

This is the first election to come under the government's Eelection Expenses Act, passed in May after a long battle in the legislature.

The act regulates the amount of money a party may spend on advertising and the size of political contributions, requires disclosure of contributions and will provide some help for would-be candidates.

The commission, charged with ensuring that the act's provisions are obeyed, is led by Arthur Wishart, 72, a former provincial attorney-general and Conservative MPP from 1963 to 1971.

The main thrust of the act restricts the amount that may be spent on political advertisi g and limits that spending to the 21 days preceding election day.

Political parties may spend 25 cents for each registered voter and that amount may be equalled by local riding associations.

With about 5.2 million residents of the province eligible to vote, each party will be allowed to spend about $2.6 million on ads.

Individuals or organizations may contribute up to $2,000 to a party and $2,000 to riding associations, with no more than $500 to each riding. These contributions may be doubled in an election year.

Contributions made after Feb. 13—the day the bill was introduced in the legislature—are subject to disclosure two months after the election. Donations made earlier may remain anonymous.

Another provision of the bill allows candidates polling more than 15 per cent of the vote in their riding to collect up to $7,000 from the province to help defray their campaign costs.

However, the bill sets no limit on the total spent on all aspects of the campaign spending, a provision which the opposition demanded when the bill was before the legislature. This means there is no limit on how much candidates or parties may spend on such things as transportation, staff or telephones.

Three Party Leaders Are Quick off Mark

TORONTO (CP) — Less than 24 hours after the provincial election was called Monday, the three party leaders were on the campaign trail in their five-week quest for votes.

Premier William Davis returned to his tour of Northern Ontario for a visit to Sault Ste. Marie after interrupting the six-day tour to return to Queen's Park to announce the Sept. 18 provincial election.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon kicks off his third provincial campaign in the Toronto area. Leaving Queen's Park at noon, he meets Liberal association officials in Scarborough North and later officially opens the party headquarters in Oakwood riding.

Stephen Lewis begins his second campaign as NDP leader with a news conference in Peterborough and lunch with NDP candidate Gillian Sandeman, followed by a stop at the Oshawa Co-op Store to meet party candidates Mike Breaugh in Oshawa and Doug Moffat in Durham East.

Public Employees Will Fight Davis

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says that the Public Service Employees Union is preparing to launch a $150,000 campaign through newspaper, radio and other media to oppose the Conservative government in the provincial election and to state the union's case against legislation governing civil servants.

The union represents 52,000 Crown employees in Ontario.

The Globe and Mail says the goal of the union is to swing support behind candidates favorable to its position on gaining full political rights for civil servants and changing the Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act.

The campaign will not overtly support an opposition party but the content will make it clear that the Davis government does not back the union's position on legislation relating to civil servas, the newspaper says.

Civil servants cannot actively support or work for a political party and their union cannot contribute any union dues or otherwise support a political party.

The union is holding a news conference today to announce its intention to participate in the election campaign, the newspaper says.

Admits Veto

MONTNEAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau confirmed Monday he personally vetoed an International Olympic Committee (IOC) plan to send a European technical expert to inspect construction progress at the Olympic stadium.

Black Woman Feared She Would Be Doubted

RALEIGH, N.C., (AP) — Joan Little testified at her murder trial Monday that she did not report a white jailer's sexual advances because she felt a black woman's word would not be taken over the word of a white.

"In Washington, N.C., coming up as a black woman, it's different saying what you did and having your word go up against a white person's," Miss Little told District Attorney William Griffin.

Miss Little, 21, is being tried for second-degree murder in the slaying last Aug. 27 of Clarence Alligood, 62, at the Beaufort County Jail in Washington, N.C. The prosecution says he was killed as part of an escape.

But Miss Little contends she stabbed Alligood with an ice pick while fighting off a sexual attack.

She said Monday that Alligood forced her to perform oral sex on him before she stabbed him and fled the jail.

She said, however, that Alligood was alive and standing in the doorway of her cell when she ran.

Griffin asked her to read at length from notes she made while in jail, which recorded nighttime visits by Alligood and other law enforcement personnel. Much of the material focused on her desire to get out of jail to get back to her friend, Julius Rodgers.

She read a notation, which Griffin said referred to Rodgers, that said: "I miss you so much I'm about to go crazy here. I've got to do something."

Kelly Gone

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — City police, who went on 12-hour shifts here at the end of last week in an effort to find suspected murderer Donald Kelly, will be back on eight-hour shifts today, officials said.

Det.-Insp. W. C. Craig of the provincial police said Sunday a motorist had identified Kelly as the hitch-hiker he picked up Friday morning about 15 miles from here on Highway 17 going west.

The unidentified motorist, who identified the picture in an Edmonton police station, told police that he and his passenger arrived in Calgary Sunday afternoon.

Alleged News Leak Probe Won't Be Press Inquisition

OTTAWA (CP) — Commons inquiry into allegations a Liberal MP leaked confidential tax information opened Monday with a discussion of freedom of the press and the affect the hearings might have on court action in the case.

The Commons committee on privileges and elections is examining allegations by Montreal Gazette that John Reid, parliamentary secretary to government House Leader Mitchell Sharp, leaked information on an amendment to a tax bill.

While the hearing spent most of its first session on procedures and testimony from a Commons legal authority on parliamentary privileges, Liberal members turned aside Progressive Conservative suggestions that a precedent might be set lessening freedom of the press.

Bud Cullen (L—Sarnia-Lambton) said there would be no inquisition of the press. But the committee had to carry out its instructions from the House to look into cmplaints by Mr. Reid that the newspaper story violated his privileges as a member.

Sinclair Stevens (PC—York-Simcoe) said earlier that members should be careful of precedents.

Mr. Reid has said he plans to sue both the Gazette and La Presse, a French-language paper which carried a translated copy of the Gazette story, but Joseph Maigot, Parliament's resident legal expert, said there is no barrier to the committee hearing evidence whil the matter is before the courts.

The Gazette reported that Mr. Reid leaked budget information but later apologized and said he had leaked information on an amendment introduced after the budget.

The story also said he shared information on lifting of an excise tax on small boats with manufacturers who could gain from the information.

Mr. Reid has denied the allegations, saying his predictions that the excise tax would be removed were "just a good guess."

Doctors Get Complaints

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons says the number of complaints it received in a five-month period ended in April increased more than one-third from the similar period last year.

In its annual report Monday, the college says it received 368 written complaints from November, 1974, to April, 1975, compared with 222 in the similar period a year earlier.

The report says 68 complaints were referred to the complaints committee, 109 listed as dismissed, unresolved—cases in which further evidence or information is sought—or withdrawn, and 101 continue under investigation.

CONSERVE ENERGY

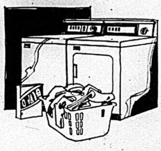
9 ways to conserve energy and save money in the big "hot water" areas of your home.

Apart from home heating, a family usually consumes the most energy in producing hot water. So it makes good sense to follow these energy-saving tips—whether your water heater is gas, oil or electric.

The Bathroom

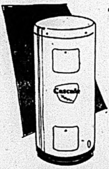
- Showers usually take less hot water than baths. Since baths and showers account for about 40% of home hot water use, taking showers can offer considerable savings.
- When you turn off a hot water tap, make sure it doesn't drip. If it does, it probably needs a new washer.
- More frequent use of the sink plug can prevent a lot of unused hot water from going down the drain.

The Laundry Room



- Always match the amount of hot water you put in your washer to the size of the load.
- Whenever possible use cold water for rinsing.

The Hot Water Tank



- Long runs of hot water pipe should be well insulated—especially in unheated areas.
- Switch off your electric water heater when going on vacation.

The Kitchen

- Using too much detergent to wash dishes can waste hot water in extra rinsing.
- If you use a dishwasher, wait until you have a full load.

The Cascade water heater will give you a dependable supply of hot water, but it is up to you to use it wisely. If we each save a little, we'll all save a lot.

Jeffrey Begins Campaign Today For Seat in New Legislature

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey went home Monday night with a bouquet of flowers and the cheers of Quinte riding Torys ringing in her ears.

In a single-ballot vote, the Belleville mayor won the Progressive Conservative nomination convention, defeating Trenton insurance agent Doug Whitley and earning the right to represent the riding in the upcoming provincial election Sept. 18.

Before her victory in the two-way race, Mayor Jeffrey told delegates, 200 from Belleville and 70 from Trenton (404 total) that she has been and will remain a "full-time politician".

She promised to remain accessible to the people with no other business interests to interfer with her representation of the Belleville-Trenton constituency.

Her style of campaigning, to start today, will be "door-to-door, person-to-person contact," she said.

In an interview, Mayor Jeffrey said her style in her bid for the Conservative nomination was the same: "I campaigned from early morning to night."

Mayor Jeffrey also disclaimed the "rubber stamp" saying she was competing with a man who had a great deal of political finesse gained in numerous federal and provincial campaigns in the past.

She acknowledged she had the advantage of being highly visible as mayor of the riding's largest municipality. But she said she had a decision-making role that elicited "pro and con" sentiment that counteracted that advantage.

A Proven Quality

Mayor Gets Tory Nod For Quinte Riding Bid

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey will be the Tory standard-bearer for Quinte riding in the upcoming Sept. 18 provincial election.

Mayor Jeffrey captured the Conservative nomination Monday in a single-ballot vote over Trenton insurance agent and long-time party organizer Doug Whitley at a nominating convention in Trenton High Scool.

No other serious candidate arose to vie for the nomination, sparked by the retirement of Ontario Correctional Service Minister Richard Potter who has represented the Belleville-Trenton area constituency for eight years.

Earlier in the meeting Ted Parker, a Trenton businessman, Fred Deacon of Deacon Brothers Sportswear Ltd. and Dr. Potter declined to stand for nomination.

Mayon Jeffrey's victory was the culmination of close to three weeks of campaigning to gain the votes of the riding's 404 convention delegates, 200 of whom are from Belleville.

After her win, Mayor Jeffrey called the ampaign "clean" and said she "ran scared" against a man with "a great deal of political finesse."

Takeing his defeat philosophically, Mr. Whitley said "Only one person can win the marbles."

"She's a capable gal," he said, predicting that she would leave a mark on Queen's Park.

Her ability, education and "pizzaz" will earn her an assistant ministerial post within two years and a cabinet post within four, he said.

Mayor Jeffrey said in an interview that she would start campaigning today. She said she expects a "hard campaign" and will meet as many people as she can.

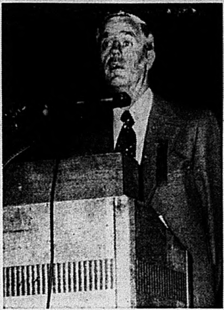
During her speech before delegates, she re - iterated planks in her platform of seeking provincial dollars for water and sewer servicing of land needed for housing and industry, for establishing municipally-owned land banks, for continued emphasis on safeguarding the environment and providing parks and playground areas.

Mayor Jeffrey said she would ensure Trenton would continue to grow and retain a competitive position, industrially and commercially, with other municipalities in eastern Ontario.

She called for regional cooperation as an answer to regional government and suggested Trenton and Murray Township negotiate to swap land for services as Belleville and Thurlow Township now are doing.

Retiring MPP Dr. Potter and Hasting MP Jack Ellis both won their seats after terms as city mayor.

Mayor Jeffrey's nomination also continues a dry spell Trenton began in 1932 — the last year the PC riding candidate came from Trenton.



Stands on Record

Trenton insurance agent Doug Whitley told delegates to the Tory nomination convention in Trenton Monday he stood on his previous work in Conversative federal and provincial campaigns in the Quinte area. He lost in a single-ballot vote defeat to Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey.

Irvine Says Regional Government Not Policy

TRENTON — Provincial Housing Minister Donald Irvine called for a new tax sharing system with Ottawa Monday in the face of provincial revenues that he said aren't increasing as much as they should.

Mr. Irvine was speaking to delegates at the Quinte riding nomination convention that chose Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey as the Progressive Conservative candidate in the Sept. 18 provincial election.

"We have to have other funds," Mr. Irvine said. "The pot is dry."

The minister also told the convention the Belleville-Trenton area can be designated as a growth area if it so wanted. The government, with the help of elected officials, can then develop eastern Ontario to provide jobs.

He restated his government's policy to not impose regionalization: "You'll only get it (regional government) if you ask for it." Queen's Park is listening to you."

Mr. Irvine said his ministry has done "well" in provision of 1,000 senior citizens and Ontario Housing Corp. low income homes in Trenton, Belleville and Frankford.

Question of Office Remains Unresolved

TRENTON — Mayor Robin Jeffrey, following her selection as PC candidate for Quinte here Monday night, said she was "not ready to make any statement" about her future as Mayor of Belleville. "I will have to assess the situation now."

She said it would be possible for council to appoint an acting mayor during the period of her campaign, or she could resign. If she resigned, council could elect a mayor from among themselves, or an election could be called to fill the position.

Whitley Says Race 'Uphill' All the Way

TRENTON — Defeated candidate for the Quinte riding Progressive Conservative nomination, Doug Whitley predicted Monday Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey will win a "runaway" victory in the upcoming provincial election.

Mr. Whitley said there is "no one on the horizon" among Liberals or New Democrats who could effectively challenge her candidacy.

Only Trenton realtor Hugh O'Neil (a Liberal) "would give us a very clean, hard fight," said Mr. Whitley. He did not feel that Mr. O'Neil would leave a young business to enter provincial politics.

Speaking of his own campaign in the two-way race, the Trenton insurance agent and long-time party organizer said it was an uphill fight.

Discounting any "parochial" attitude in Mayor Jeffrey, he said it'll always be difficult for a Trenton candidate to win because Belleville sends more delegates than the rest of the riding.

"Unless you win more delegates in Belleville, you don't stand a chance," he said.

He threw his support ("I'm a Conservative first and a candidate second") behind Mayor Jeffrey and predicted her abilities would carry her to a cabinet post within four years of her election to the Legislature.

Officials Stress Early Application Needed for LIP Grant Hopefuls

The federal government's Local Initiatives Program '75 is bigger than ever but time is running out for applications.

This year's program, announced during finance minister John Turner's June budget, is providing $150 million across Canada for LIP distribution.

But, instead of applications being accepted through the fall, this year's program must have applications in by Sept. 12.

At a public forum in Centennial Secondary School Monday, representatives from the Toronto and Belleville offices of the Canada Manpower explained the modifications in the current program and fielded questions from a small audience.

None of the spokesmen could say how much of the total LIP funds would be allocated to Ontario or more specifically to the Quinte area.

Ceilings for funding have been increased this year allowing a maximum of $150,000 for municipally-operated projects and $100,000 for individual projects. However, spokesmen said projects in the $150,000 range had the best chance of approval.

Albert Lee, supervisor for LIP programs in the Toronto region, said this year's program is "flexible and capable of handling a wide range of project ideas.

"The general requirement is that the program must satisfy some community need and that hopefully alternate ways of funding will take over when LIP funds run out in June," he said.

While some LIP projects could begin as early as October, the majority of projects will be commenced in November, a spokesman said.

Depending on the volume of applications, a reply either approving or refusing funding can be expected right to 10 weeks following submission, said Mr. Lee.

Complete information and application forms are available at all area Manpower offices.

Recreation Department Entertains Parents

More than 200 children and their families Monday attended neighborhood night at the recreation department's 22 summer park locations.

The evening events, an annual occurrence in the department's summer program, was a chance for the parents and families of the children involved in the daily sessions to become more familiar with its operation.

The parents were entertained by children performing skits and games, took part in the activities and viewed the arts and crafts projects the children worked on during the summer.

At one park, Hillcrest School, 30 participants watched and acted out plays took part in games and shared refreshments supplied by recreation staff workers.

All across Belleville, at all the other locations, a Miss and Master for the individual centres were chosen with the winners receiving prizes.

The winners earned a chance to compete for the municipal title which will be awarded at the annual Penny Carnival which will be held Thursday, August 14, at the Belleville Arena.

Movers were temporarily halted early today when dolly wheels on the vehicle broke. The house was being moved from Reed St. to the county but the breakdown occurred on Dundas St. West. Police expected repairmen to have the vehicle moving by later today.

Driver Gives Up

MADOC — A 42-year-old man surrendered to Ontario Provincial Police here, Monday, in connection with the hit-and-run death of a 16-year-old Quebec youth.

Harry Young, RR 1, Madoc, turned himself over to police Monday at 9.45 a.m.

Police were seeking the driver of the car which struck and killed Robert Schulz on Highway 62, about one mile north of Ridge Rd., Sunday night.

Police said the bicycle was proceeding south in the northbound lane when it was in collision with a northbound car, which was passing another vehicle.

Mr. Young was charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident and was to appear in Madoc Provincial Court today.

An autopsy revealed the youth died from a fractured skull and brain lacerations.

Hail Reported

ROSLIN — A brief, intense storm dumped 1.1 inches of rain on this community Monday night. While the rain was welcome, the accompanying lightning and hail caused some minor damage.

Cruises Continue Despite Rising Costs

Secondary schools in Hastings County will once again offer student Mediterranean cruises this year despite the escalating costs of international travel.

Cruise organizer Lloyd Jones, an educational assistant with the Hastings County Board of Education, said Monday students in each secondary school have indicated a willingness to take the trip despite the fact that costs have dramatically increased since 1971.

Last March Mr. Jones organized a Mediterranean cruise that took about 170 students to several middle east countries, as well as Turkey and Greece. The students, supervised by 10 teachers, made stop-over visits in Amsterdam and Yugoslavia.

Mr. Jones said there were other factors affecting the decision to continue the cruises this year. "Evaluation returns from students who took the last trip supported 100 per cent the continuance of the cruise as a worthwhile educational experience," said Mr. Jones.

About 60 per cent of the 170 students paid all of their own fare and an additional 20 per cent paid at least half, suggesting that the cruise is financially within reach of some students.

"Thirdly, an examination of alternative educational schemes indicate that the cruise is by far the lowest cost per day plan," explained Mr. Jones.

Mr. Jones said students interested in the cruise this year should consider two aspects of the Mediterranean '76, the cost and dates of travel. The Toronto trip has been quoted at $755, but air fares could rise at any time.

Additional expenses include spending money, $50, passport, $12 to $15 and transportation to the airport about $12. The fee includes meals, accommodation, fares, transfer specified tours, seven different insurance companies, airport taxes, or in other words all travel expenses after departure from Canada.

The projected dates for this year will be between March 4 and 21. This includes two weeks of school time and only three days of spring break

Recruiting will take place during the first two weeks of September and be completed by September 15 if possible.

Becker's Store Robbed

MARMORA — Ontario Provincial Police are seeking an unidentified youth following the armed robbery of a local variety store here Monday night.

Mrs. Bertha Coulthrad was working at Becker's Milk Store, on Forsythe St. when a youth entered the store with a towel wrapped around his head brandishing a knife.

Mrs. Coulthrad stepped away from the register and the thief reached into the drawer and made off with $250, police said.

Police are seeking a male caucasian, 17-18 years old, medium build and about 5-feet-6 inches tall.

Police said the youth fled on foot.

Lightning Levels House

KALADAR — A two-storey frame house and all its contents, valued at $30,000 were destroyed in a fire caused by lightning, Monday evening.

The home, one-half mile north of Kaladar on Highway 41, was owned by Milliard Oliver of RR 1, Kaladar.

The lightning entered the house through the electrical service, travelling into every room on the internal wiring, a spokesman for the Land O'Lakes volunteer fire department said.

The house was levelled within 10 minutes, he said.

Mineral Sites Key Asset Says Hobson

Increased government support is needed to fully develop the tourist potential of the Bancroft area — with particular attention paid to the area's geological resources, says Dave Hobson, Liberal candidate for the Hastings-Peterborough riding.

Mr. Hobson, in a written release, outlined five proposals which, if implemented, would create a string of parkettes across the area to open more land for mineral collectors.

His recommendations are — all geology sites must be freshened and monitored to ensure rockhounds will be able to get samples.

— the ministry of natural resources must rent or buy sites that can be retained for public access.

— a central park for campers and catering especially to rockhounds.

— a live-in geology school and the fostering of more geology training in the school system.

— an extensive advertising program adopted by the government.

Mr. Hobson said the rockhound business — and the subsequent tourist dollar — is suffering in the area because many geological sites are being closed or have been worked out.

The five recommendations proposed by Mr. Hobson, he says, will ensure continued growth of the area's popularity as a geological site and ensure thriving tourism and jobs for local residents.

Peanut Scramble

Debbie Kerik, 6, recently crowned Miss Hillcrest at neighborhood night for Hillcrest School, shows even contest winners can discard their regal bearing when helping a younger sister, Cathy, 2, scramble for peanuts. The event was part of the recreation departments family evening to acquaint parents with their children's activities during the summer parks program.

Lethbridge Falls To Thunder Bay

Bay outslugged Lethbridge 10-9 to take a share of first-place at the Canadian little league baseball championships Monday in a game which saw three home runs and the tournament's first grand slam.

Lethbridge, favored in the game, came close to pulling it out in the sixth and final inning, falling short by one run on a two-run rally.

Thunder Bay pitcher Glen Wilson went the distance for the winners, allowing eight hits and fanning seven.

Alberta, who beat defending champions Vancouver 17-5 in their opener Sunday, threw in three pitchers, allowing Thunder Bay eight hits.

Alberta took control of the game in the bottom half of the first inning on the four-run homer by Alberta catcher Roy Hesch and picked up a sixth run that inning on a single by second baseman Rick Gall.

Thunder Bay squeezed across one run in the first and added three in the second on a three-run left-field blast by Jeff Backen.

Lethbridge extended their lead by three runs in the second inning on a two-run homer by pitcher Bruce Lyon.

In the bottom of the third, Thunder Bay closed the gap to 7-6 and took the lead in the third 9-7.

Regina Girl Tops In DCRA Shoot

SOUTH MARCH, Ont. (CP) — Despite a heavy rainfall, a 14-year-old girl became a strong contender for the Macdougall trophy for markmanship with a near-perfect opening-day performance at the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association (DCRA) competitions Monday.

Using a .308 sporteo rifle, Lynn Joerissen of Regina, one of five female army cadet marksmen at the meet, scored 46 out of a possible 50 points to lead in the first phase of shooting for the trophy.

The match called for 10 rounds each at 200 and 500 yards. Under DCRA rules, a bull's eye counts five points and three outer rings are worth four, three and two points respectively.

A late start and intermittent rainfall postponed the second phase and officials said results would not be tabulated until Tuesday.

About 100 army cadets are competing for 18 positions on the 1976 Royal Canadian Army Cadet team which will attend the Bisley rifle matches in England next summer. Names of the cadets who will represent Canada will be announced when the meet ends Saturday.

As well, about 350 civilians are competing for trophies and prize money to be awarded Saturday.

Despite her showing, Miss Joerissen said she does not expect to make the team. "They don't usually pick first-timers but you really learn to shoot here—so maybe next year.

"And even if I don't make the team, just being a girl and being able to shoot as well as the guys here is really something special."

Tiger Coach a Lonely Man at Third Base

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In the hot and uncomfortable dog days of August, Joe Schultz has the easiest job in baseball.

Schultz is third base coach of Detroit Tigers, who haven't needed a third base coach in their last three American League games.

The Tigers bowed to the Texas Rangers and Gaylord Perry 7-0 Monday night, becoming the first Detroit club to suffer three consecutive shutouts—one short of the major league record—and extending their team record to 16 losses in a row.

The Tigers haven't scored in 29 innings. They managed only five hits off Perry and only Aurelio Rodriguez, who doubled in the eighth inning, made it as far as second base.

He was promptly cut down trying to take third when a pitch rolled a few feet away from catcher Jim Sundberg.

The Tigers didn't get a runner past first on Sunday as Minnesota's Bert Blyleven four-hit them and the last time Schultz saw a familiar face was in the eighth inning of Saturday's five-hit shutout by Minnesota's Dave Goltz when Rodriguez made it all the way to third—on an error, wild pitch and an infield out.

In Monday's other American League games, Oakland A's edged Boston Red Sox 4-3, Baltimore Orioles blanked Kansas City Royals 4-0, California Angels whipped New York Yankees 8-1 and Minnesota Twins outslugged Milwaukee Brewers 8-7.

Detroit manager Ralph Houk stocked his line-up with left-handed batters against Perry but righthanders Rodriguez and Willie Horton collected four of the Tigers' five hits.

The Tigers aren't winning and aren't scoring, and they aren't fielding very well, either. Left fielder Dan Meyer overran a fly ball which went for a double and first baseman Jack Pierce committed two errors—he booted a grounder and dropped a pop foul—in one inning, giving him 13 in 50 games.

Toby Harrah's two-run homer in the second inning was all the support Perry needed.

Vida Blue blanked Boston for seven innings and then needed help from three relievers following a long-ball attack in the eighth. The Red Sox struck suddenly on a home run by Fred Lynn, Jim Rice's single and Carlton Fisk's homer.

Paul Lindblad and Jim Todd each retired a batter with the potential tying run on third base in the ninth inning as the A's increased heir lead to 6½ games over Kansas City in the AL West. The Red Sox had their East Division lead over Baltimore cut to six games.

Bobby Grich ripped a two-out, two-run double off Steve Busby in the seventh inning to break up a scoreless duel. Meanwhile, Mike Cuellar held the Royals to John Mayberry's fourth-inning double and a single by George Brett in the fifth and retired the final 14 Kansas City batters.

California stole four bases in a three-run fourth inning and Mickey Rivers had four hits and stole three bases, running his season total to 60 as the Angels stole a club record six bases.

Minnesota wiped out a four-run deficit on Eric Soderholm's three-run homer in the third inning and Steve Braun's two-run homer in the fifth.

Alert Bench Turns Tide

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cincinnati Reds prefer to bludgeon the opposition with base hits but a little fancy footwork now and again doesn't hurt.

Monday night the fancy feet belonged to slugging catcher Johnny Bench. Bench made it to third base on an infield grounder in the fifth inning and Chicago Cubs never recovered, eventually falling to the Reds 9-3 in a National League baseball game.

The Reds, trailing 3-1, picked up a run when Pete Rose doubled, Ken Griffey singled and Joe Morgan hit into a force play to score Rose.

Bench then grounded to Bill Madlock at third but was safe when first baseman Andy Thornton came off the bag too soon.

Morgan tried to go all the way to third on the play but was thrown out and Madlock, thinking the side was retired, rolled the ball to the mound. The Cubs trotted toward the dugout but Bench headed for third.

In Monday's other National League games, Los Angeles Dodgers whipped Philadelphia Phillies 7-1, Pittsburgh Pirates clubbed Atlanta Braves 8-1, San Francisco Giants bombed Montreal Expos 9-2, Houston Astros dumped St. Louis Cardinals 7-2 and New York Mets beat San Diego Padres 8-4.

"It was just one of those freak things," said Bench. "I heard the umpire holler safe and then everybody looked to third."

Bench even crossed up umpire Chris Pelekoudas. "He was cleaning off the bag at third," said Bench.

"I thought he was out at first," admitted third base coach Alex Grammas. "Then I heard all the yelling and I thought a fight broke out."

Tony Perez got Bench home with a game-tying double and the Reds broke it open with two runs in the sixth and four more in the eighth.

The Reds, leading the National League West by 15½ games, have won eight of their last nine outings and have scored a whopping 61 runs in their last seven games.

Andy Messersmith stopped Philadelphia on four hits—and drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly and a bases-loaded walk as Los Angeles won its fourth consecutive game.

Habs Meet USSR Team in Series

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League (NHL) will meet Central Army of the Soviet Union's major league here Dec. 31 as part of an eight-game series this winter between NHL and Soviet teams.

The newspaper says the Army club will play four games against NHL opposition beginning Dec. 27 or 28 against the Rangers in New York. They then would play the Canadiens here before meeting Boston Bruins and Philadelphia Flyers in their home rinks.

The other touring team, Soviet Wings, will play Pittsburgh Penguins, Buffalo Sabres, Chicago Black Hawks and New York Islanders in their respective home rinks, the newspaper says.

Soviet officials met NHL representatives here earlier this year to plan the series after NHL president Clarence Campbell said he did not support an international series proposed by Alan Eagleson, president of the NHL Players' Association.

Army, coached by Constantin Loktev, has won the Soviet major league championship in six of the last eight seasons, including 1974-75. The club has provided numerous players to Soviet teams competing in world championships and the 1972 and 1974 series against NHL and World Hockey Association all-star teams.

The Wings, coached by Boris Kulagin, defeated Army for the Soviet championship in 1974 to end a three-year Army reign and lost to Army in this year's final.

The Soviets will provide two game officials for the series.

"They will have split assignments," O'Neill is quoted as saying. "If one of the Soviets referees, then we'll provide the two linesmen. When we provide the referee, one of their referees will act as one linesman and we'll provide the other one.

"They'll have one official in every game and they'll referee half the games."

Halicki Finds Range

MONTREAL (CP) — Ed Halicki of San Francisco Giants has been blessed with ample talent but little help in his brief National League pitching career.

Halicki struck out 12 batters before leaving for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning of the Giants' 9-2 baseball win Monday night over Montreal Expos.

The performance, in which the six-foot, seven-inch, 220-pound right-hander came within one of matching the NL season high for strikeouts in one game, moved his won-lost record to only 6-9.

"He's a much better pitcher than his record indicates," said Giants manager Wes Westrum. "We've played some shoddy baseball behind him, and he's been the victim of his own fielding a few times too."

Halicki finds the situation familiar. In his first major-league stint last year, he compiled a 1-8 record with the Giants. His team-mates scored only 16 runs behind him in the eight losses and allowed 10 unearned runs.

But adversity has not deterred the 24-year-old native of Newark, N.J.

"I'm trying to get my pitching to a degree of consistency," he said. "My last three games have been good enough to make me happy."

He left Monday night only because of tightening in his right shoulder, a condition with which he has played for some time.

"It's been like that for about three games—nothing serious. I didn't feel too good in the first inning, but from the second through the fifth I felt great—no pain or stiffness at all."

The shoulder began bothering him in the sixth, however, and it felt "really tight" in the seventh. Randy Moffitt got the call for the eighth and finishd up.

The Giants grabbed a quick lead on Chris Speier's two-run double in the top of the first before the Expos got a run back in the bottom of the inning on a walk to Mike Jorgensen and singles by Larry Biittner and Larry Parrish.

Canadiens Set Dates for Camp

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens will open their National Hockey League training camp at the Forum Sept. 15 and, four days later, meet Boston Bruins in an exhibition game at Springfield, Mass., general manager Sam Pollork said Monday.

About 65 players will report to coach Scotty Bowman, 12 of them trying out for the first time.

In other exhibition games, the Canadiens return home to play defending Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers Sept. 20, and the next night, play a return engagement at Philadelphia. They move to Vancouver to meet the Canucks Sept. 23 and 24, then play the Bruins in Boston Sept. 27.

Sept. 28, the Canadiens meet the Black Hawks in Chicago and at Ottawa Oct. 1 before moving to Moncton, N.B., Oct. 3, to play the Bruins, who go to Montreal for the final game of the exhibition schedule Oct. 4.

The team opens its regular season Oct. 8 at home against Los Angeles Kings.

Tonelli Case

OHA Is Backing Toronto Marlies

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association (OHA) Major Junior A series governors have given their backing to legal action by Toronto Marlboros against player John Tonelli.

"We plan to make an appeal to the courts," league commissioner Tubby Schmalz, said after a monthly meeting Monday. "We'll talk it over with our legal counsel on exactly what court action will be taken."

Tonelli, 18, was a star centre with the Marlboros until late last season when he signed a conditional contract with Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association (WHA).

The professional hockey league approved the contract last Thursday, reversing an earlier decision. The WHA previously considered Tonelli still bound by his junior contract under Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) rules, which do not allow Tonelli to turn pro until his 20th birthday.

The OHA Major Junior A series and Marlboros club will begin legal action immediately.

A Different Ottawa Teams But the Same Old Story

What's that old ball expression, something about 'three strikes and you're out'? That's exactly what Ottawa district should be when it comes to Junior A representation in the Ontario Amateur Softball Association (OASA).

The last three consecutive years Belleville has drawn the misfortune of having to compete against an Ottawa club for the right to advance beyond the first round of OASA playoffs.

Saturday night, for the third year in a row, the Ottawa club did not fulfill their OASA playoff commitment — they didn't bother to show up.

Two years ago the Ellis Juniors lost their opener to Ottawa City in a best-of-three series. The great Ottawa crew lost the second contest and then lost the toss. With the flip of a coin, Belleville gained home-ground for the third and deciding contest.

"The place (Alemite Park) was packed," said former Ellis coach, Don Wood, "and when the other team didn't come it really embarrassed a few people."

Wood explained though that the team had decided to win the series on the field rather than take it by default.

However, when the game was re-scheduled, and again spectators had jammed the park, the only representative from Ottawa was a lonely outfielder. It seemed he had attended a track meet earlier in the day and had driven the distance to Belleville. His teammates had climbed into a bus and decided part way down, or perhaps even the parking lot before leaving, that they should cop out; again.

In 1974, Belleville won the first game 5-2 in Ottawa and, after spending many dollars on promotion (and again in front of a near full-house), the local juniors earned the best-of-three match-up by default. This time Ottawa Ranger backed out. The Ellis squad had no quips about taking the series this time after spending X number of dollars on advertising. Doreen Reid aptly demanded remuneration from the OASA. Her bills were wisely honored.

This time around the locals took care of any unforeseeable problems. Doreen Reid spent nothing on advertising, the club was on the lookout for a no-show and very few spectators turned out. (The Ellis squad had won the first game 5-1).

Carlsbad Springs was scheduled to take to the field, at Alemite Park, Saturday at 8 p.m. By 9:15 p.m. a handful of die-hards were refunded their admissions and the lights went out. A suitable occurrance since Carlsbad appeared to be in the dark anyway.

At 10:10 p.m. their bus rolled in — two hours and 10 minutes late. They were informed they had lost the second game of the series by default, but none seemed particularly distraught, or even concerned about losing.

"They didn't appear to me to be very upset," said Mrs. Reid, "they just got back on the bus and headed out."

Mrs. Reid feels it is about time the OASA did something to keep teams from repeating such shenanagans.

"There should be more than a $10 forfeit," stated Mrs. Reid, "this is probably the only sport that doesn't have a performance bond."

Mrs. Reid feels that if the forfeit was of some monetary consequence, teams would not be so likely to walk out on a series.

There, she has a point. With an Ottawa area club — three different ones at that — forfeiting contests in OASA playoffs, perhaps the association should step in and put its foot (or is that feet) down.

My opinion is that Ottawa, or the zone it represents, should be outlawed from OASA play at the junior level for a few years. Is any zone really bigger than the organization itself?

However, to appease the less radical fans in the crowd, a second solution may be a heavy performance bond. After all, money does talk.

SLICES — The Ellis Juniors now meet Kemptville in the deciding round for the Eastern Ontario championship. Dates and times have not been fixed for the three game series.

Tonight's football referee's meeting may tell an unfortunate tale if there isn't a sound turnout. The Central Ontario Referee's Association is rapidly depleting in number and new, interested bodies are urgently needed. That is the purpose of the meeting, tonight at 7:30 at the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle Street.

If you are at all interested in getting into the football refereeing game — now's your chance.

Invitational to Ingram

Betty Ingram, of Bay of Quinte Country Club, fired a 76, Sunday, to capture low gross at the Bay of Quinte Ladies Invitational Tournament. Her score was the best in the field of 105 golfers.

Low net went to Betty Gilbert, from Islington, with a 68. Low Putts for the field went to Anne Newman from Pineridge with 31 and May Lowe, of Glen Lawrence Golf Club, took the award for closest to the pin on the eighth hole.

Muriel McPhail took first Flight low gross. The Glen Lawrence golfer had a 79. North Halton shooter, Joan Shapcott had First Flight low net with a 74.

In Second Flight, Bay of Quinte golfers walked away with the top awards. Audrene Moorman had low gross with a 91 and Dolly Diamond and Marg Cousins tied for net with 77s.

Third Flight gross went to Peterborough's Esther Might, with a 99 while Mary Merton's 76 was enough to give the Barcovan representative low net.

Pat Raycroft checked in with a 107 to earn Fourth Flight gross and Loyola Cunningham and Phyllis Tracey recorded 73s to tie for net. All three golfers are out of the host Bay of Quinte Club.

In all, 19 clubs were represented in the event.

PENSSL Race To the Wire

With only four games remaining in season action in the Prince Edward North Shore Softball League, only sixth place in the standings has been decided. The other seven spots are still up in the air.

Each team has one game left to play and with the points race as close as it is, the standings could change a great deal before the end of regular action.

In play Sunday, J. Goode's edged Ameliasburg A's 5-3 to tie them for second place with 29 points. Meanwhile, Bayview Orchards blanked Carrying Place 2-0 to move back into first place by one point.

Sonny Holoway was the victor on a four-hitter in the first match, walking three and fanning eight.

Perry Soule led the winners 12-hit onslaught with a pair of doubles; Bill Clapp had a triple and a single, Harold Babcock had a double and two singles and Rod Salter singled twice.

Gary Thompson replied for Ameliasburg with a pair of singles.

Steve Doxtator and Don Bonter shared the pitching duties in Bayview's win. They combined to fan five while walking none and giving up just one hit.

Dan Wannamaker only gave up six hits, while striking out 11, but still suffered the loss.

Fundic Power For Olympics

After playing loosely for most of the game, the Belleville Olympics, behind the three goal effort of Zdravko Fundic, downed Toronto Ferma 3-1 in Premier Soccer League action on the weekend.

In the other Premier contest, Quinte Hellenic battled to a 2-2 draw with Peterborough Vi-Mar at Sir James Whitney School.

The Olympics sat behind a 1-0 count in Toronto for three-quarters of the contest. Then, with Fundic spearheading the attack, they exploded for three unanswered markers.

"We played poorly for most of the game," said coach John O'Neill, "the only thing that gave us the win was conditioning."

Locally, Hellenic held the lead for most of the game, but fell behind 2-1 after two successive goals by Peterborough's Bob Campbell in the second half.

John Prionas scored the Hellenic first goal and Andy Vinieris gave them the tie with less than five minutes to go.

Saturday, the Olympics play host to Ferma at Sir James Whitney, at 6 p.m., while Sunday, Hellenic is in Kingston to take on the Portuguese, also at 6 p.m.

Rorabeck Does Favor For the Ellis Juniors

With only two games left in the regular schedule, Rorabeck Real Estate has picked a fine time to win their first ball game. However, their timing isn't exactly great for Howard and Robert Printing.

Monday night the Realtors dumped the Printers 6-1. The loss left Howard and Robert just two points ahead of Ellis Juniors in the final playoff berth. While the Juniors have one game left, tonight, Howard and Robert has two, but one, also tonight, is a return bout with Rorabeck and the other is against the hot Trenton Auger entry.

In the other Quinte Fastball League contest, Monday, Auger wa southit 10-3, but outscored Devolin Motors 2-1.

Should the Junior win tonight and the Printers lose their final two games, a playoff would be necessary to decide the bearer of the final playoff berth.

Rorabeck, behind the four-hit pitching of Mark Sheridan, scored four times in the first inning to put the game on ice. Bernie Coughlin and Lyle Lloyd led the winners' eight-hit attack with a double and a single apiece.

Sheridan scattered four singles across the board, fanned 10 and did not walk a man. Ron Hill struck out six, but was tagged with the loss.

Don Holoway, who took the Devolin loss, is quickly becoming known as Mr. Hardluck. He struck out five, only walked two and gave up just three hits.

Bob Swan was the winner with six strikeouts and a walk. His teammates took advantage of two errors and a fielder's choice in the fourth to score both of their runs.

Playoff Upsets Are Common

When playoffs roll around, it's a whole new ball game. Black Diamond of the Belleville Industrial Softball League will certainly vouch for that.

After losing only four of 20 games in the regular season and leading not only their division, but the entire league in points, they dropped the first game of their semi-final series to the Post Office 8-1. The Postmen finished second in the weaker West Division.

Norm Lockhart appears to be the key to the Posties success in post-season action. Monday night he set a dozen batters down on third strikes, gave out no free passes and allowed just four hits.

It was a different story for loser Ron Bateman as he was reached 11 times and struck out only three. His teammates didn't help much. They committed six miscues.

Wayne Leitch pounded a home run for the winners, George Johnson added two doubles, Steve Cronkright doubled and singled and Soup Campbell punched a pair of singles.

Bateman had a double and a single in his own cause.

Melrose, Foxboro Move in Front

Melrose and Foxboro Merchants scored quarter-final playoff wins in South Hastings Baseball League action, Monday.

Foxboro topped Shannonville 7-3 while Melrose whipped Cannifton Plane's 9-3.

Merchants lead their set 1-0. Melrose is in front 1-0 with one game tied.

Ron McTaggart struck out 12, walked two and gave up six hits in earning the Foxboro win. His mates reached loser Bill Barberstock for nine hits. Harrison, Bill Arthur and Ted Foster each singled twice for the winners, while Dale Tummon and John Masterson added a double apiece.

Mike Brant had a pair of Shannonville singles.

Terry McTaggart got the Melrose win, spinning a solid five-hitter. Loser Larry Adams was touched for 12 safeties. Each fanned one and walked one.

Rick Meagher homered for Melrose. Larry Pascoe supplied a triple and two singles. Tops for Plane's was Neilson with a home run and a single.

Nancy Garapick in Championship Form

Pan American Games Team Has Plenty of Surprises

CALGARY (CP) — Steve Pickell of Vancouver and Nancy Garapick of Halifax, Canada's top-ranked international swimmers, removed themselves Monday from consideration for the Pan American Games and the result was a long list of surprises for those named to the team.

The selections were announced at an athlete's function concluding the 1975 Canadian championships and Pan-American Games trials at which Pickell won four championships and Garapick two.

On the final day, Wendy Quirk of Montreal and Bruce Robertson of Vancouver captured 100-metre butterfly championships, Joann Baker of Thunder Bay, Ont., and Graham Smith of Edmonton captured 200-metre breaststroke championships, Michael Ker of Vancouver won the men's 1,500-metre freestyle and Shannon Smith of New Westminster, B.C., won the women's 800-metre freestyle.

It was the second championship each for Quirk, Baker, Ker and Smith.

Ker joined a long list electing not to compete at Mexico City in October and the other three were named to the 30-member team, made up of 17 men and 13 women.

Graham Smith's inclusion was a surprise because he has aching knees. His sister Susan, who coaches Graham and sister Becky Smith along with Cheryl Gibson at Edmonton's Olympians, said her brother and sister both would miss the Mexico trip.

However, she changed her mind when the selection committee agreed to let both withdraw if doctors agreed it would be for the best. Becky has been bothered with allergies, bronchitis and general weariness following her recent appearance in the world championships at Cali, Colombia.

The replacements for Canada's first-liners did not know until the last minute they would be going to the Pan-Am Games.

Derek Cathro, 19, an engineering student at the University of Alberta, said his surprise international trip would force him to miss his first semester, "but I don't mind."

"I thought I'd be lucky to make the team to go to Britain."

After his name was read by president Larry Tapp of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, Cathro stood for about five minutes before he could shake hands with his new team-mates or accept congratulations from friends.

Less surprised, but equally excited, was Rick Frame, 18, of Oakville, Ont.

"I know I'm only going because Pickell isn't," he said, "but he's so good he doesn't need to go.

"I need the international experience. I'm like everybody else, looking forward to the Olympics, but that would have been my first big international meet. Going to Mexico is sure to help me."

In world championship trials at Winnipeg last spring and in the championships just concluded, Frame twice finished third in a backstroke event only .02 seconds from a second-place qualifying spot.

Besides the Pan-Am team, 23 athletes—13 women and 10 men—were named to compete in the British National Championships at Coventry, England on Aug. 28-30. None has been outside Canada for competition previously.

Julian Carroll of Ottawa, executive director of the CASA, and coach Derek Snelling of Vancouver agreed the decision of the top-notchers to stay home will benefit swimming in the long run.

"It's bound to increase our depth in world-class competitors," said Snelling, whose Vancouver Dolphins easily won the team combined title here.

"We're not interested in the Pan-American Games at the expense of the Olympics in Montreal next summer. Anything we do now that helps make us stronger then is a good thing."

Wheelchair Competition

Canadian Squad Now Unbeaten in Three Games

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Canada's basketball team extended its unbeaten streak to three games Monday with a 58-37 win over Jamaica at the Pan Am Wheelchair Olympics.

Kevin Earl of Richmond, B.C., scored 18 points with Peter Colistro of Vancouver adding 13 and Tom Sharkey of Edmonton 10 for Canada in Monday's game. The Canadians had whipped El Salvador 48-6 Sunday.

Elaine Ell of Edmonton took a silver medal in the women's archery while Canadian men's and women's relay swimming teams took bronze medals in other action Monday.

Earl, Bill Brouse of Ontario and Clarence Bastarache of Bathurst, N.B., were on the men's Class 3 and 4 team while the women's team had Ell, Mary Jane Waugh of Edmonton and Diane Sharkey of Edmonton.

A total of 312 athletes from 15 countries are competing in the games.

Participants in the six events—swimming, track and field, weightlifting, archery, table tennis and basketball—are divided into six classes according to medical standards set for wheelchair sports.

Marlene a Qualifier In U.S. Tournament

WEST NEWTON, Mass. (CP) — Marlene Stewart Streit of Stouffville, Ont. carded a six-over-par 39-40-79 Monday to qualify for match play in United States Women's Amateur golf championship.

Mrs. Streit won this event in 1956 and was runner-up in 1966.

Other qualifiers included Dale Shaw, Sydney, B.C., 37-39-76; Marilyn Palmer, Kamloops, B.C., 37-40-77; Janice Palmer, Vancouver, 40-41-81 and Susie Conklin, Lachute, Que., 41-40-81. The cut-off point was 82.

The low 64 players will compete in match play with single rounds today and Wednesday, a double round Thursday, semi-finals Friday and the 36-hole final Saturday.

Government Policy Disregarded

South African Athletes In

TORONTO (CP) — Organizers of an international track meet decided Monday night to disregard federal government policy and let South African athletes compete.

The Canadian Masters Association (CMA) reversed an earlier decision on South Africa after athletes from many countries threatened to boycott the World Masters Meet, which begins today.

The earlier decision to bar the 14 South Africans, who paid their own way to the meet, was made after the federal government said it would withhold a promised $32,000 grant for the event.

A spokesman for Health Minister Marc Lalonde said the government would cut off funds for any Canadian sports event that included teams from South Africa because Canada "will not support apartheid."

The week-long amateur meet is expected to draw more than 1,400 athletes over the age of 40 from 32 countries.

Both the original ruling and Monday's change of heart brought threats from spokesman for national teams that they would pull their teams out of the meet.

A spokesman for the five-member Yugoslavian team said it probably would withdraw after Monday's decision because his government opposes its athletes competing with South Africans.

And Sylvester Stein, a British team member, said he doubted all countries would take part after Monday's ruling.

Earlier, David Pain, founder of the meet and coach of the 250-member U.S. team, said he would pull his team out unless the South Africans took part.

But he said many other athletes might refuse to compete over the issue.

The 53-year-old lawyer from San Diego said the Canadian government had no right to ban the athletes because they entered the event as individuals, each paying his own $2,000 air fare and expenses.

Pain said the athletes might raise the $32,000 among themselves to repay the government grant, but the CMA said it did not know if or how the money would be returned.

Because of a communications breakdown, it wasn't until the South Africans arrived here Sunday night that they learned of the government decision, made less than two weeks ago.

Caribous Nipped 19-18

Tomahawks Pad Lead

QUEBEC (CP) — Long Island Tomahawks got three goals from three players Monday night as they strengthened their grip on first place in the National Lacrosse League with a 19-18 win over Quebec Caribous.

Jan Magee, Charlie Henderson and Jim Johnston scored three goals apiece and Al Gordancer, Ted Greves and Bill Foote added two each as the Tomahawks moved eight points ahead of the idle Montreal Quebecois.

The Tomahawks, who held a 70-64 edge in shots on goal, have 26 wins against 15 losses for 52 points. The Caribous remained tied for fifth place with Maryland Arrows at 34 points.

Pat Differ led Quebec with three goals and five players chipped in with two each before 2,687 fans.

Plan 2,000 Rental Units

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Mortgage Corp. (OMC) is inviting applications for construction of 2,000 rental housing units in the province, Housing Minister Donald Irvine announced Monday.

Mr. Irvine said in a news release that funds for the units were made available to OMC in supplementary actions to the 1975 budget July 7.

OMC is providing first-mortgage financing at favorable interest rates to developers wishing to build and operate accommodation for low-and moderate-income occupants under the Accelerated Rental Housing Program, he said.

Eight-per-cent loans, covering up to 95 per cent of construction costs as determined by OMC, are available for projects in municipalities with vacancy rates of about two per cent.

Mediator May Be Asked

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A mediator may be called in this week to attempt to reach a settlement in the fifth week of a strike by 300 construction workers, union representative Michael Sullivan said Monday.

Mr. Sullivan, representative of Local 247, Laborers International Union, said talks may be initiated with the Kingston Construction Association.

He said that 35,000 Ontario union members have pledged support to the strike but will not picket the Portsmouth Harbor Olympic site, where some construction workers are on strike, unless association workers are hired to work there.

The union is seeking a $3-an-hour increase over two years. The association has offered about $2.50 an hour for two years.

Davis Won't Help Havrot

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Monday he won't visit the provincial riding of Timiskaming to help Ed Havrot, the sitting member of the legislature for the Northern Ontario riding, gain re-election.

At the same time, he said Mr. Havrot will be afforded the same financial assistance from central party coffers as any other candidate.

Asked if he supported Mr. Havrot's bid for re-election, the premier said: "He is the party candidate."

IN MEMORIAM

LITTLE — In loving memory of a dear wife, mother and grandmother Anne Little who was laid to rest one year ago today, August 12, 1974.

Our lives were blessed with the goodness, understanding, and love of a very wonderful woman.

She was not only a wife, a mom, and a Nan, but also our very special and dear friend.

—Forever remembered and sadly missed by Joe, Elaine, Ray, Ron and Rick and families.

WILSON — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Becky M. Wilson who passed away August 12, 1965.

The joys we shared together,
The memories we hold dear,
The love and happiness you gave,
Will always keep you near.
It broke our hearts to lose you,
But you did not go alone,
For part of us went with you,
The day God called you home.

—Husband Leslie, sons Terry and Laurie.

KITCHEN — In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Katherine, who left us August 12, 1974.

One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away,
God took her home, it was His will,
Within our hearts she's with us still.

—Dearly remembered by Mum, Dad, Larry and Don.

Much Is Wrong With Liquid Diet

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there anything wrong with a person going on an all-liquid diet of fruit and vegetable juices for the purpose of reducing? I'm also taking protein tabs, and all vitamins and minerals for proper nutrition.

While on this diet is it possible or necessary to have bowel movements? Aren't all waste products from a liquid diet excreted from the kidneys?

I am unable to lose weight on a 500-calorie diet, which I have adhered to for many months.—Mrs. B. G. M.

Your liquid diet is far out and no way to lose weight. Consider the fact that a glass of orange juice contains about 108 calories, and a cup of, say, tomato soup about 90 calories. That's already two fifths of your diet — practically starvation.

It is apt to be too low in protein anyway in spite of the protein tabs. It gives no bulk whatever, and without bulk you would have no bowel action to speak of. Oh, there are so many things wrong with your diet that it would take reams of writing to just outline them. For example, the very necessary process of chewing is abandoned. Your body is becoming, under your diet, nothing more than a liquid-filtering machine.

The kidneys will, incidentally, excrete what they are intended to excrete no matter in what form it enters the digestive tract. Chiefly, they excrete nitrogen wastes.

It is hard for me to accept your claim that you have been unable to lose weight on a 500-calorie diet. It is, as I say, practically starvation. You must be doing something wrong.

There are many other serious disadvantages in your diet. You should consult with your doctor before continuing such a foolish program.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it possible to be "addicted" to sweets? When I eat sweets such as pastries or candy, I get very nervous and tired.—Mrs. D. G.

I don't think you mean "addicted." The word "tolerance" is more appropriate.

Your symptoms should be warning enough for you to want to learn what the connection is between your sweets-eating and your nervousness and fatigue.

Your eating of sweets most likely triggers a release of insulin in your pancreas, and since insulin enters the blood to metabolize blood sugar, the result is a lowering of blood sugar, a possible cause of your weakness and nervousness.

The obvious answer for you is to have a blood sugar test, a rather simple procedure which will definitely determine whether or not you are hypoglycemic.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a mild diabetes, and I'm concerned about my teeth and what one should do about having them pulled. My dentist believes in keeping your own as long as you can, but does it hurt to pull diabetics' teeth?—S.

A diabetic may have an extraction when indications for one exist, but with the usual precautions and care. As you know, diabetics are particularly prone to bacterial infection. Post-surgical care is essential to prevent this.

Your physician should be informed before you have any extraction so that he can advise your dentist about your diabetes, a matter of prudence.

If the bidding of today's hand looks funny, don't blame us. Victor Mollo wanted South to be in a four-heart contract and this shows how he might get there.

Victor asks, "After ruffing the spade lead, what cards should be played to the next three tricks?"

The answer is: "Ace of diamonds, king of diamonds, ace of clubs."

If South can score seven tricks in trumps plus two diamonds and one club, he makes his contract. In other words, a cross ruff is indicated.

It is easy to see why he cashes dummy's ace and king of diamonds to prepare the cross ruff. It is a trifle harder to see why the ace of clubs is taken next. However, look what happens if South doesn't cash that ace of clubs.

When South ruffs a diamond, East discards one club; when he ruffs the last diamond East discards his last club. South makes seven trumps and two diamonds, but the ace of clubs has been made into a loser.

An Arkansas reader wants to know what you bid after your partner has doubled your left-hand opponent's one heart bid. You hold:
♠AQxx ♥xx ♦Kxxx ♣Qxx.

The answer to his question is that you bid two hearts. This cue bid does not guarantee a heart control, but merely shows a very good hand and forces your partner to bid.

You will take further strong action at your next turn.

Researcher Attempting To Measure Snake's IQ

OTTAWA (CP) — Are snakes smart or stupid?

Harry Parsons, a snake expert at Carleton University, is trying to find a way to measure a snake's IQ.

"It's genuine research. I really don't know what I'm looking for," says the young herpetologist.

The problem, it seems, is that little is known about snake habits and the usual IQ tests don't fit them. They won't do tricks for food because after eating one good meal a snake will happily go without eating for two months.

"They only seem to do things important for survival and breeding. As far as experts know they don't even play," Mr. Parsons explained.

He believes money has not been spent studying snakes because snakes are not commercial animals.

"You don't harvest them or hunt them so people aren't all that interested in them. The government spends a lot of money learning about deer, but it also gets a lot of money from hunting licences."

Mr. Parsons is doing his snake intelligence research on his own time and money. He works as a herpetologist for Parks Canada and has written a book on snakes in national parks to be published next year.

"The parks people feel that every living thing in a park has a right to be the e, and I agree with them. I hope my book Foul Loathsome Creatures, will help educate people to lose some of their misconceptions about snakes."

Mr. Parsons also hopes that by watching sackes eat, rest and crawl around and by keeping meticulous notes of their behavior he may find a key to understanding them better.

He is studying an eight-foot anaconda, an emerald tree boa, a tiger snake and a five-foot Brazilian rainbow snake. He often takes them hom in a pillowcase to study them better.

"I think it is a bad idea for people to keep tropical snakes like these as pets because it is very difficult to keep the temperature, humidity and food just right.

"I suspect many of them don't live too long as house pets and it's a pity because so many of them are endangered species which could become extinct."

Mr. Parsons became interested in snakes when he was about 10 years old.

"My parents didn't care much for snakes, but they let me keep mine in the basement. I think many parents are responsible for the bad attitudes children have about snakes."

A professional herpetologist for four years, Mr. Parsons has trapped rare snakes for museums and his own research during a hunting expedition in South America.

Since snakes seldom venture near traps, natives located and caught them by hand, using special tongs for poisonous ones.

Their prize find, a deadly coral snake with a bite so poisonous it can kill in 90 seconds, was drugged and stored in an air-tight jar.

Thinking it dead, Mr. Parsons tried to take it from the bottle. To his surprise it moved and crawled off the table.

"It took a coupl of drinks of rum to calm my nerves and you can believe that after that I was more careful."

Call Boxes To Go

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — There will be no more fire-alarm call boxes in Lethbridge after Sept. 1. "It's an outdated system," said Deputy Fire Chief Jim McKenna. Less than one per cent of the calls the fire department received from the boxes were fire calls. Most were false alarms. The fire dpartment will switch to a new communications system in Septmber to which all city buildings, schools, hospitals and other major buildings will be connected.

Japanese Mercury Victims Tell Indians to Be Militant

George Hutchison of London Free Press has studied the effects of mercury pollution in Ontario waters and has returned from a trip to Japan where Ontario Indians met victims of a pollution disaster.

MINAMATA, Japan (CP) — Japanese mercury victims have told Ontario Indians to become militant over their pollution problems at home in the Kenora district.

The advice was given aboard a bus that carried five representatives of the Grassy Narrows and Whitedog reserves of northwestern Ontario to this troubled fishing and farming village where more than 100 have been killed by mercury and more than 700 maimed and blinded.

"With the knowledge you get from this visit, you can confront the company and the government," said a crippled patient of "Minamata disease," as mercury poisoning is known in Japan.

"Unless you realize this, the trip is pointless," said Tsuginori Hamamoto, chairman of the Minamata Disease Patients' Alliance, whose family was ravaged by mercury. His parents were killed and he and his sister are permanently crippled.

On this pollution fact-finding mission to Japan, the Ontario Indians were shocked by films of Japanese in the throes of death and disturbed by similarities in government reaction to contamination of fish in their own district, the English Wabegoon rivers country of Ontario.

"Like something out of Hollywood—a horror movie," commented Tommy Keesick, former Grassy Narrows chief, after viewing a three-part film on Minamata's experience over the last two decades.

Mr. Hamamoto told the Indians that Minamata victims had to rise up in demonstrations before the government was forced to co-operate in legal action against the giant Chisso Corp., which dumped mercury-contaminated waste into Minamata Bay until 1968.

The victims held sit-ins and at one point bought stock in the corporation to attend and disrupt stockholders' meetings with their demands for compensation.

The patients won a legal fight in 1973 which initially cost Chisso the equivalent of $3.2 million in settlements.

Compensation payments range between $90 and $180 a month, depending on the degree of affliction. Death results in a $60,000 settlement with surviving members of the family.

Mr. Hamamoto said Minamata victims received no encouragement from government and were compelled to use militant means to publicize their plight.

The touring Indians were from reserves downriver from the Dryden Chemical Co. and its pulp and paper plant at Dryden, which in 1970 was found to be discharging mercury waste.

High concentrations of mercury were discovered in fish, and commercial fishing on the reserve was closed. The Indians also lost about 100 jobs guiding visiting anglers because of the closing of two large fishing lodges.

Andy Keewatin, the soft-spoken chief of the Grassy Narrows Ojibwa band, reacted cautiously to the suggestion to adopt confrontation tactics.

"We hope we can do a little better," he said.

But his younger and restless predecessor said the time has arrived for radical steps to be taken.

"I believe from now on one has to be a little radical to get things done," said Tommy Keesick, 29. "We, the younger generation, feel we have to take radical alternatives to wake up the government."

One hundred per cent agreement," Mr. Hamamoto said.

Several symptoms of Minamata disease have been detected on the two Ontario reserves, but no deaths have been confirmed and no acute cases have been documented, although the Indians suspect some of the residents are affected.

Mr. Keesick told Japanese reporters the Indians might use "some of the types of tactics used by the people of Minamata."

"Does the government," he asked, "want 300 of our people to die before they do something about it?

"They have got to wake up. They are doing a poor job for the people and the province they control."

On another phase of their visit, mis-shapen and mentally-retarded children met the Indians as the devastating effects of mercury pollution were translated from Japanese to Ojibwa in human terms.

"They come, they come," a deformed 13-year-old girl managed to slur the words as the five Indians visited her poor fishing village just north of here.

Takako Isayama let out a happy cry and her limbs shook with excitement when the Indians, one by one, said hello and touched her.

"She can talk, but only a few words," the Indians were told. "She understands what you are saying."

Takako was one of 40 children born in the late 1950s and early 1960s with congenital Minamata disease because their mothers had eaten too much mercury-contaminated fish during pregnancy.

The unseen poison penetrated the placental screen and accumulated in the wombs of the mothers, attacking the unborn children, causing still-births and deformities.

Of the original 40, seven have died. The most recent death was this year when a 24-year-old victim strangled because of inherent difficulty in swallowing.

Many of the survivors spend their lives in the Minamata Nursing Home.

Along with elderly bed-ridden Minamata disease patients, they pass the years in a bemused fog.

Most of the children spent the summer with their families. But 18-year-old Chizuri Namaka was there.

She always will be.

Wrapper The Key

PEKING (Reuter) — Foreigners are buying a lot of fruit in order to read the newspapers wrapped around it. The only two dailies foreigners may subscribe to are the nationals — The People's Daily and the Guangming cultural newspaper. Events of local interest however, appear in the Peking Daily, which can be read over people's shoulders on the bus.

Plums, grapes and eggplants come wrapped in back copies of this and the even more secret Liberation Army Daily.

Minimata Disease Victims Pledge Support to Indians

MINAMATA, Japan (CP) — Patients of Minamata disease and seven Japanese scientists will visit Canada shortly to gather additional information on mercury pollution in Ontario.

The trip was disclosed as victims of mercury pollution here pledged support for the struggle by Kenora-district Indians to gain compensation for pollution of the English-Wabigoon river chain in northwestern Ontario.

"Pollution is spreading all over the world—we cannot relax," Tsuginori Hamamoto, chairman of the Minamata Disease Patients' Association, said at a public meeting at which residents met the five touring Ontario Indians.

"From Canada, from Minamata," we must fight together."

A collection was taken to help pay for the trip to Canada by three diseased patients from this small southern Japanese city where more than 100 were killed and 700 crippled and blinded by mercury-contaminated fish.

Details of the Canadian fact-finding mission are not complete. The patients may travel apart from the scientists, who want to visit research facilities in Winnipeg, Toronto and Ottawa.

The scientists, members of a voluntary international pollution research group, plan to conduct detailed examination of residents of the Grassy Narrows and Whitedog reserves to document Minamata disease in Canada.

Dr. Jun Ui, a chemist from the University of Tokyo, said he also wants to check underwater soil samples below the Dryden Chemical Co. and its pulp and paper mill at Dryden, Ont., to determine what similarities there are to the industry that polluted Minamata Bay.

Dr. Masazumi Harada, neurologist at the University of Kumamoto, said the isolation of the two Indian reserves provides an ideal opportunity to study the medical effects of mercury pollution on a community.

Dr. Ui, Dr. Harada and Dr. Kenichi Hiyamato, an Osaki University economist, made a similar research mission to Canada in March but studies the next time will be more thorough.

Spokesmen for the militant patients' alliance, which staged demonstrations and sit-ins to win a major court settlement from giant Chisso Chemical Corp. two years ago, have been encouraging the Canadian Indians to use confrontation tactics in dealings with the Canadian and Ontario governments.

Tommy Keesick, a 29-year-old radical who was replaced as chief at Grassy Narrows because of his participation in the armed occupation of Kenora's Anicinabe Park a year ago, is anxious to follow their lead.

Difficult Times Seen For Police

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — More than 200 delegates attending the Police Association of Ontario (POA) annual convention were told Monday that "difficult times may be ahead" for policemen in the province.

Judge Bruce Macdonald, Windsor police commission chairman, speaking at opening ceremonies of the five-day convention, warned that the future may bring "outside interference" by government into police matters.

"There are problems for policemen in this province and the POA should seriously look at what action needs to be taken," he said.

"We've seen what happens in other countries when police are interfered with by higher authorities. Freedom and equal justice no longer exist."

The delegates represent about 20,000 municipal and provincial policemen in the province.

Among topics scheduled for debate during the convention are: capital punishment and bail reform, other new proposals to amend the Criminal Code, internal association matters such as pensions and bargaining powers and proposals to lessen police and judicial bureaucracy.

Conciliation Board Tackles Mail Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — Mr. Justice Jean Moisan of Quebec Superior Court was appointed chairman Monday of a three-member conciliation board to settle a contract dispute between the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) and the Post Office.

Mr. Justice Moisan will work with two Montreal lawyers, Guy Dancosse and Irving Gaul, on the board. No date has been set for hearings.

The dispute centres on the union's demand to bargain for control of technological change and for higher wages.

Whites, Natives Agree on Need For Land Accord

NORMAN WELLS, N.W.T. (CP) — Whites and natives found some common ground when the Mackenzie Valley pipeline inquiry moved into this predominantly white oil-company settlement of 350 people.

Motel owner Georgie Monuik told the inquiry Saturday that he agrees with the native people of the Northwest Territories that there must be a land settlement before the pipeline is built, "if for no other reason than to return friendliness, peace and good will to the North."

Raymond Yakeleya, a 21-year-old Metis, said he quit his job with Imperial Oil Ltd. two days before the inquiry arrived so he could speak without being a hypocrite.

"The land shall serve the needs of Canada only when her rightful owners are fairly compensated," he said.

"Don't use force because this time we have nothing to lose . . as long as Dene bloods flows in this great land the pipeline will be built only with our consent or it will flow red to the south."

UN Control of Sea Bed Proposed by Kissinger

MONTREAL (CP) — It was Henry Kissinger Day here Monday, as the U.S. state secretary flew in to address members of the American Bar Association (ABA).

Mr. Kissinger unveiled a compromise proposal for exploitation of the sea-bed, which, at least on the face of it, would give Third World countries a greater voice and increased revenue.

Expressing support for Canada's decision to seek international approval before establishing a 200-mile offshore economic zone, Mr. Kissinger proposed setting up a new international body within the United Nations with responsibility for exploration of the sea-bed.

The U.S., like Canada, wants to establish a 200-mile offshore economic zone for control of fisheries and mineral resources, Mr. Kissinger said.

The offshore limits dispute has been running ever since Peru extended its territorial waters to 200 miles.

When the Law of the Sea conference convened in Caracas last year, Mexico proposed a compromise solution based on the traditional 12-mile territorial limit and a 200-mile zone of "national sovereignty."

The U.S. delegation opposed the Mexican position, which had the support of the Latin American bloc and other Third World delegations.

The conference's subsequent session in Geneva ended in deadlock.

In his speech here Monday, Mr. Kissinger said Washington recognizes the claims of some countries, Canada among them, to extend their territorial waters even beyond 200 miles—out to the continental shelf.

But he cautioned that unilateral action would invite retaliation from other countries.

And he made clear that the proposed new UN body ought to "reflect and balance the interests of the participating states."

Today, the House of Delegates continues its study of resolutions, one of which, hanging fire since last year's convention, would endorse legalization of prostitution.

The House—the ABA's governing body—will be asked to recommend legalization of prostitution in the 49 states where it still remains a criminal offence.

The ABA's criminal justice section, which blocked the resolution last year, dropped its opposition after the section on individual rights, which is sponsoring it, accepted a compromise draft.

A morning panel meeting was to discuss securities problems relating to Canadian-U.S. transactions.

The impact of Canadian anti-trust laws on U.S. firms was also slated for panel discussion.

Other scheduled panel topics were "no-fault divorce: debits and credits" and a "town hall forum on criminal justice," with Carl Stern of the National Broadcasting Corp. (NBC) television network as moderator.

Lottery CNE Feature This Year

TORONTO (CP) — One of the more than 3.6 million people expected to visit the Canadian National Exhibition (CNE) this year will go home with a $150,000 prize—a fully-furnished three-bedroom house.

The house is the grand prize in the first CNE Lottery and will be given away to the holder of the winning $2 ticket on Sept. 1, the last day of the fair.

In addition, 20 persons will win cars in draws held on each day of the 97th annual CNE.

This year's CNE will be opened officially Thursday by Gordon Sinclair, writer and broadcaster, but the gates will be open for business at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

"I think this is the best exhibition we have ever put together," Howard Tate, CNE assistant general manager, said in an interview.

With live entertainment, food and drink, international displays and the 1½-mile-long midway, this year's CNE should have something for everyone—except those who hate crowds.

Organizers say they expect attendance figures, down last year due to a strike by the Toronto Transit Commission (TTC), to break the record of 3.5 million set in 1973.

There will be a parade by the 1,500 pipers and drummers of the Scottish World Festival on Wednesday and the group will perform at the grandstand on four days.

Frank Sinatra will perform Aug. 21 after an absence of about 35 years. He first appeared in the 1930s as a singer with the Tommy Dorsey band.

For fans of Canadian music, Anne Murray and Paul Anka will perform Aug. 23 and 28, respectively. Rock music will be supplied by Chicago, America, John Denver, Bobby Vinton, the Beach Boys, the Stampeders and The Guess Who.

The sounds of the big bands will be heard at a special dance tent and Lawrence Welk will bring his own special brand of music to the grandstand Aug. 27.

Twenty-two countries, including Greece, China, Austria, Poland and parts of the United States will be represented this year.

Industrial Sale Price Declines

OTTAWA (CP) — The industrial selling price, a broad measure of factory gate prices, turned downward in June after nearly two years of regular monthly increases, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

The index was three-tenths of one per cent lower than the May level, but is still 11.9 per cent higher than in June, 1974. Industry prices had been rising steadily since September, 1973.

The most significant declines were for petroleum and coal products and primary metals. Prices in the food and beverages industries were lower because of declining sugar and flour prices. Leather industries and non-metallic minerals were fractionally higher.

The general wholesale price index, a less extensive survey, also showed a three-tenths of one per cent decline in June after three consecutive monthly rises.

The index is still 6.8 per cent higher than a year ago.

Six of the eight major groups measured by the wholesale index turned lower, while one rose and one was unchanged. The largest declines were for vegetable products, fully-manufactured goods, wood and textile products. An 18.3-per-cent drop in prices for sugar and its products contributed to some declines in other product categories.

Ransom Ready

Bronfmans Told Son Buried Alive

YORKTOWN HEIGHTS, N.Y. (AP) — Kidnappers of whisky heir Samuel Bronfman II are reported to have demanded a $4.5-million ransom and have warned his family that he is buried with a 10-day supply of air and water.

Spokesmen for the Bronfman family have refused to discuss the amount of ransom demanded or other details of a letter received in the mail Monday. But they said Tuesday they had complied with its instruction.

Sources close to the investigation were quoted as saying the ransom figure was $4.5 million, believed to be the highest in U.S. history.

The New York Daily News quoted sources close to the case as reporting that the letter said young Bronfman, 21, missing since Saturday, was buried somewhere in Westchester County. His parents live in Westchester County, 35 miles north of New York City.

The Bronfman family spokesman confirmed that a "substantial" sum of money had been collected and that the family was awaiting the next move by the kidnappers. He said the family was negotiating with the kidnappers independently of the FBI and local police.

Edgar Bronfman, 46, head of the billion-dollar Seagram Co. Ltd., of Montreal, flew by helicopter from his estate in this Westchester County community Monday to New York City, apparently to fulfill some of the kidnappers' demands. He returned about 7 a.m. Tuesday. A family spokesman early today refused to say whether the senior Bronfman was home or what he was doing.

Samuel Bronfman, oldest of the whisky magnate's five children, had dined with his father Friday night in the huge Tudor-style mansion. He left about 11:30 p.m., saying he was going to a party.

Several hours later, he telephoned his father to say he had been abducted by three men while driving to his mother's home in Purchase, N.Y., about 20 miles away.

Samuel's car, a green 1973 BMW sedan, was found parked in his mother's garage, the ignition key in the lock.

Bronfman and his wife, the former Ann Margaret Loeb, whose father is a partner in one of the world's largest brokerage firms, were divorced in 1973 after 20 years of marriage.

Samuel had lived with his mother since graduating from William College in Massachusetts in June. He had planned to start work with Sports Illustrated magazine after Labor Day.

Family friends discount the possibility of a hoax, saying Samuel was a smart and likeable person who would not participate in a hoax.

Davis Hits Nixon Criticism

'Deliberately Dishonorable'

SAULT STE MARIE, Ont. (CP)—Premier William Davis turned from low-key campaigning to all-out offence Tuesday, launching a harsh attack against Liberal Leader Robert Nixon.

Mr. Davis, apparently stung by a suggestion Monday by Mr. Nixon that governmental integrity should be a key election issue, lashed out against his opponent in no uncertain terms.

He said Mr. Nixon is using an arsenal of innuendo in making remarks about government integrity.

"I can only say of it in the most direct and simple terms that it is deliberately dishonorable," the premier charged.

He said the Liberal leader should step forward and make his charges, if he has any.

"But I am not personally prepared to listen to a stream of innuendo from him about my integrity or that of my colleagues, and to endure in silence the five-week Liberal campaign of mud and hot air."

Uncharacteristically, the premier railed against Mr. Nixon himself.

"Reasonable men to not attack the integrity of others, nor do they attack the honor of others unless they are prepared to support such action and put their own integrity on the line."

The partisan crowd cheered through his remarks.

Mr. Davis said he doesn't want to see a Liberal campaign harping on integrity.

"The people of Ontario, myself included, should not be expected to go through the next 36 days on a steady diet of weasel words from the Liberal leader on so important a charge."

He said there is a difference between honest mistakes and deliberate wrongdoing.

Later, in an interview, he noted that Mr. Nixon had referred to Fidinam, Ontario Ltd., a company linked to a $50,000 campaign contribution to the Conservative party in the 1971 provincial election.

Mr. Davis quoted the Liberal leader as saying: "No doubt Fidinham is still a large contributor."

The premier said the recently-passed Election Expenses act limits individual political contributions.

He promised to investigate whether or not such a contribution has actually been made and make his findings public.

Nixon Predicts Davis Will Lose Own Seat

Mr. Nixon told a shopping centre crowd of about 100 that Liberal Party candidate Bill Agnew will defeat the premier in the riding of Brampton.

Mr. Davis represented Peel North in the last legislature, but that riding disappeared during redistribution, to become Brampton constituency.

Earlier Tuesday, spent in and around Metropolitan Toronto, Mr. Nixon issued a challenge to Mr. Davis and NDP Leader Stephen Lewis to meet him in a televised election debate.

The government's inadequacy was nowhere more evident than in the failures of the education system, he said.

Lewis Pledges Farmers $7,000 Minimum Income

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario NDP Leader Stephen Lewis made his first campaign pledge Tuesday, promising farmers "an absolute minimum income of $7,000 plus" if elected premier Sept. 18.

He made the pledge in Peterborough at his first campaign news conference where he said he would increase the $20 million alloted for farm income support in the last provincial budget to about $150 million annually.

He also promised tough new laws to prevent farmland from being taken over by developers. Twenty-six acres of prime farmland are being lost every hour in Ontario because of urban encroachment and other reasons, he said.

He stopped short of suggesting a land freeze of the controversial nature tried by the NDP government in British Columbia. But he proposed improved zoning bylaws, development controls and first-purchase rights for the government when a farmer wants to sell land.

Seventy-year-old Thurlow Barn Is Being Moved to New Site

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

CORBYVILLE — If a man reaches 73 he should be retired but if a barn reaches that ripe old age it should be moved to a new job — and that's exactly what Thurlow township dairy farmer John Huffman is doing.

Mr. Huffman, along with a crew of neighbors, friends, and relatives, is moving a 36 by 70 foot barn about one-quarter of a mile from a nearby farm to his own. Mr. Huffman's farm is located on Thurlow Concession, 5, about six miles east of Highway 37.

The wooden frame barn, which was built in 1902 and served most of the years as a dairy barn, is destined for a life as a machine shed on the Huffman farm. Mr. Huffman, 54, estimates a new barn of similar size would cost about $5,000.

"This is not the first barn I've moved," said Mr. Huffman, "but by far it's the biggest." He is using 32 truck tires and large wooden beams to hold the frame up. Several tractors do the actual labor.

Mr. Huffman spent about five weeks last winter removing the wooden frame from its eight foot high stone foundation. Original owner of the barn, Ken Leavens, gave the frame to Mr. Huffman for the expense of clearing the site.

Mr. Leavens, a retired railroader, estimated the barn to weight about 50 tons. The work of moving it started Tuesday and it is expected to be in place today.

"The frame structure is still in excellent condition," said Mr. Huffman, "it's a tribute to the carpenters of those days,".

Ron Carson

Yours for the Asking

Thurlow township dairy farmer John Huffman may not be able to move a mountain but he can move a 50-ton barn. The 73-year-old barn, which is 36 by 70 foot, is being moved from the farm of Ken Leavens to the Huffman farm about one-quarter mile away. Mr. Huffman got the barn for cleaning up the original site.

No Deal Made On Solzhenitsyn

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger says he urged the Soviet Union to let Alexander Solzhenitsyn leave the country a month before his exile last year. But he denies there was any U.S.-Soviet deal that prevented President Ford from seeing the author when he first came to this country.

"There was no deal of any kind as to how Solzhenitsyn was to be treated in the West," an angered Kissinger said Tuesday in a telephone call to reporters accompanying Ford on his vacation in Vail.

Fire Rages Unchecked

HANNOVER (Reuter) — West Germany's worst forest fire raged unchecked towards the East German border early today — and one weary fire official said the gian blaze seemed to be unstoppable. Helicopers and army trucks snatched hundreds of villagers to safety Tuesday as a 30 foot wal lof flames swept towards their homes in Rebberlah, Scheuen, Garssen and Starkshorn.

Steel Price Raised

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's two largest steel producers have introduced steel product price increases following recent wage settlements in the industry and a continuing rise in fuel and raw material costs.

Argentine Army Split

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — President Isabel Peron faced a fresh callenge today as reliable military sources reported a split in the armed forces over her appointment of an army colonel to the key interior ministry. Some armed forces leaders are concerned that the appointment of Col. Vincente Damasco might give the appearance of military interference with the executive branch.

Fire Beats Rain

MANITOUWADGE, Ont. (CP) — A forest fire six miles south east of this community, about 250 miles east of Thunder Bay, continued to burn out of control today despite rain during the night.

Find Bodies Of Children

SASKATOON (CP) — A man was arrested Tuesday after police found the bodies of four children whose disappearance earlier this summer sparked a country-wide manhunt.

The man, who was not named, was to appear in court today on charges of murder punishable by life imprisonment. The bodies were found in two rural locations near the city.

"There is no question these are the bodies of the youngsters," Police Chief James Kettles told a hastily-called news conference early today.

He said the parents had positively identified the bodies as those of Dahrlyne Cranfield, 12, and Robert Grubesic, 9, who both disappeared June 15; and Samantha Turner, 8, and Cathy Scott, 7, both missing since July 26.

Teachers Won't Back One Party

TORONTO (CP) — Spokesmen for various Ontario teacher associations said Tuesday their membership will not support any one party in the Sept. 18 provincial election.

Patrick O'Neill of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association said the government's decision to give teachers the right to strike has dampened any organized anti-Conservative move on the part of the membership.

Joseph Atkinson of the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation said a decision will be made Thursday on what role the federation will play in the election.

He said funds may be allotted "but I'm sure it will be for non-partisan work and issues."

A spokesman for the Ontario Teachers' Federation said that group will attempt to encourage teachers to get involved in non-partisan activities during the election.

Portuguese Crisis

Security Chief Meets Officers

LISBON (AP) — Security chief Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho met today with military commanders following two nights of attacks on Communist political offices in northern Portugal.

A power struggle within the armed forces continued to divide the pro-Communist officers and moderates opposed to the establishment of a Communist dictatorship.

Anti-Communist violence that claimed four lives and injured scores in the north appeared to have let up today.

There were unconfirmed reports that Carvalho, one of three generals on the ruling junta, was preparing his own program for the next steps in Portugal's 15-month-old revolution.

The Carvalho program was described as slightly to the left of the demands of nine moderate officers whose position paper called for turning the revolution from its veer leftward back toward the centre.

President Francisco da Costa Gomes' office said it could not comment on a report that the dissident nine, reported as being backed by 85 per cent of the armed forces, had demanded the resignation of pro-Communist Premier Vasco Goncalves.

Three Million Solutions Are Looking for Problems

MANSFILD, Conn. (AP) — A small group of people in a cluttered office is offering an unusual commodity to companies with problems—three million solutions.

The chemists, engineers, computer scientists and student aides who make up the New England Research Application Centre (NERAC) act as a sophisticated information line.

Industries call up with their problems and, for a price, the agency searches its computer for the answers.

"We're in the business of helping industry benefit by using somebody else's technology," said Dr. Daniel Wilde, the centre's director.

"We have three million solutions looking for problems."

Programs are developed to search the computer, located a few miles away at University of Connecticut, for articles and documents that might have answers sought by the centre's clients.

The agency is a partnership among the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), universities and industries, said Wilde, who has a PhD in computer science.

There are five similar NASA-affiliated centres in the United States: at University of Pittsburgh, Indiana Universiy, University of New Mexico University of Southern California and Research Triangle Park in North Carolina.

The New England centre gets about $200,000 a year—30 per cent of its budget—from NASA. The rest comes from clients' fees, Wilde said.

The centre has more than 200 clients who pay between $1,700 and $40,000 a year for the right to ask questions.

Much of the information at the centre's disposal is non-classified NASA data developed for the space program. The Space Act of 1958 that created NASA requires that the agency's technological discoveries be disseminaed as widely as possible.

Most of the clients request confidentiality, for competitive and other reasons, but Wilde said they are wholesalers and producers rather than retailers.

The Saturday gardener couldn't ask how to control dandelions, but a firm that makes weed killer could use the centre's bank of chemical data.

"We order documents from all over the world," Wilde said.

An obscure contract turned up in Leningrad and made its way to the centre and its clien via a lending arrangement in Europe.

"Russia is the biggest buyer of documents in this country," said Wilde. "They buy everything."

A Philadelphia firm, H-B Instrument Co., wanted to know: "What's the most suitable ceramic ink to bake on a thermometer, and how should we work with it?"

The center provided data which "enabled us to eliminate five manufacturing steps and thus double our output of thermometers," a company official said. "If we had done he research on our own, the costs would have been prohibitive."

Hare Krishna Movement Is Lucrative Business

TORONTO (CP) — Youths walk on the city streets, long robes flowing, incense burning, chanting a spiritual mantra to the Lord Krishna. It isn't on the distant streets of New Delhi or Calcutta but right on Toronto's Yonge Street where devotees of the Hare Krishna movement stop passers-by with their spiritual philosophy.

The youths look alike. The young men have long braided hair jutting from an otherwise bald head and wear long white robes. The women wear Indian saris and scarves over their heads. There is an intense, almost pleading look as the Krishna disciple asks the passer-by to stop and buy a book on "spiritual pleasures" or piercingly sweet incense.

The Krishna movement, like other spiritual organizations spreading across the world, is a lucrative business. Formulated by Swami Pradhipada on the Indian Lord Krishna's concept of singing and spirituality, the movement invites participants to give up material possessions and join the total devotion of worship.

A successful incense factory, magazine and book publishing companies and soliciting in streets for donations contribute handily to the group.

Often, "unenlightened" parents try to claim their offspring who have joined the Krishna people and live in the group's ashram, spiritual home and centre.

Such was the case of Murray Epstein, a Canadian father concerned over his daughter, Linda's Krishna religion. She was taken from the centre and "de-programmed" by an expert specializing in de-programming participants of cult movements.

Some persons feel the Krishna movement has a programming effect on the children of the devotees. When a woman or man joins the organization, they must practise celibacy until marriage partners are chosen for them. Then, they are only allowed to sleep together at certain times of the month.

Carnival Ride

The horse ride was one of the popular attractions at a penny carnival sponsored by the Picton recreation and parks commitee Tuesday night, at Benson Park. On the horse Toby owned and led by Donna Barsley, are Janet Everhardus, and Janet Thompson, both 10-years-old. Supervisor of the park, Janice Gordon said there was a good turn out. "Everyone seems to be having fun especially with the haunted house, and bobbing for apples." Said Miss Gordon.

Student Exchange Program Outlined to Rotarians

PICTON — Bill McKay of the Belleville Rotary Club was the guest speaker Tuesday at the weekly Rotary meeting held at the Prince Edward Yacht Club here. His topic was student exchange.

Mr. McKay noted that the receiving club takes the responsibility for the student for an entire year. This means providing a counsellor to oversee the student, an allowance, free schooling and text books, said Mr. McKay.

Giving examples from the last exchange student, Tanie Bowman from Finland, Mr. McKay said the student was met at the airport by the host family.

"In due respect, we found that if the exchange student stays with one family for only three months, it tends to be better for everyone concerned," said Mr. McKay.

It is also recommended the visiting student bring about $400 which is to go into a joint bank account between the student and the counsellor.

A former host and counsellor, Mr. McKay said this is to avoid the student being broke after only a month or two.

Since the local Picton Club is interested in setting up an exchange program, Mr. McKay recommended the first exchange be with an English-speaking country which will avoid the language barrier.

A method to get club members involved is to have them take the student to a variety of places, said Mr. McKay.

An example given by Mr. McKay was a trip Tanie Bowman took to South Carolina because of the Rotary member going there during his Christmas holidays.

Exchange Talk

Bill McKay, of the Belleville Rotary Club, talked to the Picton Rotary Club about the student exchange program, at the weekly meeting held at the Prince Edward Yacht Club, in Picton. Local members were told by Mr. McKay of the need of co-operation within the club to make the exchange program work effectively. The receiving club should provide an allowance, free schooling and text books, and plan visits to important areas, Mr. McKay said.

Work on Bain Park Facelift Under Way

TRENTON — Work began this week on grading of Bain Park in east Trenton in the first step of an estimated $125,000 scheme to transform the park during the next three or four years into a multi-use recreational haven

Deno Gettas, parks director said Tuesday bulldozers were on site Monday and will complete shifting at least 60,000 cubic yards of earth within three weeks.

Grading on the park site is the first step in a five-point program, valued at $75,000 that will be completed this year.

By far the largest slice of costs will go towards creation of a baseball diamond with $40,000 in funds donated by the Rotary Club of Trenton.

Services, water, power and a parking lot, will be installed this year.

Mr. Gettas said the parks board's use of earth skimmed from the soccer pitches in the park will be built into berms, 12 to 14-feet high, and will thus break the monotony of the present park flatness. Use of the earth will have a secondary purpose: to save money.

He estimated a $60,000 expenditure ($1 per cubic yard) would be necessary if the board had to buy clean sand.

Grading operations should not interfere with soccer games now played in the park. Work is proceeding from west to east, thereby leaving one pitch available for the one game scheduled in Bain daily.

Plans for the park were drafted in late June by Steve Skidd, a University of Guelph landscape architecture student.

Development this year is concentrated in the upper, — active portion of the park. Along the bayshore, plans call for retention of stands of mature trees, a boardwalk, and picnic tables. In the centre of the park, a small plaza or square will be created.

Work this year is scheduled for completion by early September.

The charges follow a collision in which a 16-year-old Quebec youth, Robert Schulz, was knocked from his bicycle and killed by a passing motorist Sunday.

The accident occurred one mile north of County Rd. 8, on Highway 62.

Allan Lawrence as the 'True Voice of Conservatism' and Potential PC Leader

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Allan Lawrence, Conservative MP for the Ontario riding of Northumberland-Durham, looks like a leader.

And some members of the Conservative parliamentary caucus, looking for a leader, are looking at Allan Lawrence.

So already he has a power base among those Conservatives who, holding seats in the House of Commons, speak for the party.

They are determined this time to wrest control of the party out of the hands of the appointed officials in the headquarters organization who masterminded the deposing of three-time winner John Diefenbaker, and the elevation of three-time loser Robert Stanfield as leader.

With this kind of support then, among the men who fought and won elections — as against those who only sat and schemed in the backrooms of Tory power — Allan Lawrence has to be considered as a serious contender.

He has not said yet that he is running — but neither has he said that he isn't.

So let's look over Allan Lawrence.

He is attractive, young enough at 50, trim, blondly good-looking — not altogether dissimilar in appearance to golf star Jack Nicklaus — articulate, and unlike some other Tory leadership aspirants, a genuine Conservative.

He has experience. A lawyer, a war veteran, he has a working knowledge of social, labor-management and community affairs.

He did 15 years in the Ontario legislature, four of them in the provincial cabinet, and has been in Parliament three years, already the winner in two federal elections.

He has a party election strategy.

"If in the last campaign we had put half the effort into Ontario that we wasted in Quebec, Stanfield would have been prime minister," he says.

"Trudeau didn't win the election as much as we lost it.

"Next we must reinforce our successes in the Maritimes, the West and British Columbia, and make the drive-to-win in Ontario.

"If we win it, and it can only be won by recovering our strength in Ontario, then Quebec will follow along as it did the last time."

Should Allan Lawrence bid for the leadership and take it, he would recruit John Diefenbaker as a key national campaigne .

Last time around, Stanfield and the party brass kept Dief on the sidelines pretty well confined to his own turf in Saskatchewan.

"Dief is living history to the young," says Allan Lawrence, "and respected and admired as no other politician is by the older voter. He knows thousands of Canadians by name, and crucial in any campaign, he instinctively knows the issues."

Allan Lawrence, disregarding the wishes of the left-leaning party headquarters and the Toronto power manipulators, would take the Conservatives to the right.

The way he sees it now, the party can't be clearly identified by the voters as much difference than the New Democrats.

"On some issues," he says, "the Trudeau Liberals are to the right of us."

Allan Lawrence has been disturbed to see some Conservatives in Parliament over-anxious to criticize actions of the Trudeau government, but too timid to present alternatives.

This reluctance to take a stand on issues, he suggests, could be a reaction to the party's performance in the last election when positions were taken — on wage and price controls and the renunciation of former Moncton mayor Len Jones as a Conservative candidate which turned potential victory into certain defeat.

"We can reform ourselves as a party in the next few years," says Allan Lawrence, "and again become the true voice of Conservatism.

"We can become a movement the like of which has never before been seen in Canada. We can involve huge numbers of Canadians in a responsible, responsive and representative political organization. It's an exciting prospect."

Sense of Community

Columnist John Harbron had some timely advice last week on the need for a welcome hand toward New Canadians from the Third World, and toward the less educated in particular who may find themselves more often the target of racial slurs.

Having said that, it is difficult enough for the average Bellevillian to get to know people from overseas. The latter in many instances keep to themselves, preferring their own company. This might be said in particular about people from Asia; for instance it was rather like old-home week for a group of new citizens from India at The Outlet over the long weekend. But then, the same might be said of many a group enjoying some leisure time, whatever their background.

Perhaps an initiative at the municipal level could break down some of this insularity, and bring citizens together. There have been occasions such as this, but more people are coming to Belleville and as the city grows the more "big-city" — and lonely — it will become.

In any event, it is Belleville's gain that it has become so cosmopolitan, a factor given momentum by the various exchange programs of recent years. It only remains for the city to live up to its reputation as "The Friendly City" — all the more so as Centennial year draws closer.

Realities of Detente

Detente? Detente, that is, between the East represented in the main by the Soviet Union, but not forgetting China either, and the Western world with the United States, primarily, carrying its banner.

What detente really means, aside from live and let live, is a continued recognition of the balance of terror.

Former British Prime Minister Harold MacMillan put it best when he said: "War, happily, has become too dangerous."

But more subtle forces are at work today, and the trouble is they seem to be working more against the West. It's not just that ideological influences are being brought to bear — in Africa, Asia, and Latin-America — we have to contend also with the phenomenon of Western academics and media people siding as it were with the enemy, turning against everything western from capitalism to free enterprise. Against a system which, whatever its faults, guarantees the individual a large measure of personal freedom and opportunity.

Edward N. Luttwak, head of the foreign policy section of Johns Hopkins University, has some thoughts on this. He's quoted by Globe and Mail columnist Richard Needham who asks, "What's happened to patriotism?"

Luttwak answers it thus, in a magazine article: "The intellectual attitudes on both sides of the Atlantic reflect a common logic of opposition to one's own nation and to all its agencies of power, especially military power. A good many of the journalistic academics and academic journalists who form the country's opinion-making elite no longer view the protection of American and/or Western interests as legitimate."

Luttwak sees the clamor from now familiar "environmentalist" pressures, leading to shutting down of industries, and aimed at nuclear plants, coal mines, offshore oil enterpises and so on, as part of the same tide of domestic political interference.

Needham, incidentally, views it in the same light as vandalism, sabotage, rebellion — motivated, in an affluent, bored society, by hatred or self-hatred, in much the same manner as the actions of our modern, teenage vandals.

Mini-Mall Is Planned

The prospect of another plaza or mini-mall on the corner of Coleman and Moira gives further thrust to Belleville's burgeoning economy and industrial progress.

The facility will be a distinct asset to downtown and to that area of the city in particular, without detracting from the existing business core.

It will enhance the location, aesthetically, add life to a section of town that already has a number of businesses but which surely will benefit from the diversity that will now accrue.

Belleville may see more of this kind of initiative on the fringe of downtown, complementing existing facilities.

It is quite a far cry from a decade ago, when there was no Mall, no overpass at the intersection of highways 2 and 14, no Four Seasons, and little of what is now a growing Industrial Estate close to 401.

Today, Belleville's future is bright.

Robert Nixon Girds Up His Forces

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — It looks like a good election.

Bob Nixon in a long article in the Globe and Mail outlined his personal political philosophies and mentioned a number of points which obviously will be part of his election platform.

And it appears that the Liberal leader will be going to the country with considerable appeal.

He apparently intends to zero in on the fact that the PCs have been in power for 32 years and that this is strait-jacketing their usefulness.

He ties this in with an almost $2-million deficit this year, failure to try and cope with inflation and an over-sized cabinet.

He also says there is much too much secrecy because of this and that it prevents effective cost-cutting in government.

On the positive side he is coming out strongly for price control and review.

Rather than a separate board he would put these under a standing committee of the legislature, and in other directions he would put more responsibility in the hands of the elected representatives.

These and other items in the Nixon proposals probably don't sound too impressive when presented flatly as they are here.

But as presented by him they carry conviction and will have appeal.

Two disturbing points to the observer are that the Liberal leader is stronger than ever in his fetish for municipal autonomy and that his judgments tend to be not fully formed.

He would give local authorities almost entire control over their programs and spending.

But unless and until local councils raise all of their own money, instead of receiving a great share of it from the province, this just isn't practical.

It is notable that at the recent meeting of the Association of Ontario Municipalities there was a move to have the Ontario Municipal Board done away with. But one wise councillor said no. At least some municipalities, he said, needed the control that the board exercises.

As to the completeness of the Nixon thinking, there is one example in his position on establishing new communities and cities.

He is against this, saying that preferably we should expand present centres, which is against all of today's planning and social concepts.

But these are points which will register mainly only with those very close to politics and public affairs.

Most of the public will not see through to them.

Rather it will see the promises and the logic in his arguments and it seems these may be quite good.

The government is probably in for more of a battle than it has been figuring on recently.

William's Oil-O-Matic metered, low pressure oil burners started coming off the assembly line at Morch Manufacturing Ltd. recently, as Belleville's newest industry went into production. It is expected that production will be stepped up in the first half of 1956 with the addition of 15 to 20 employees. Future plans call for production of a new burner — a unit capable of heating a six to eight room house, air conditioners and boilers.

Canada's Food Industry: Quotas, Restrictions et al

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

There's an Alice-in-Wonderland feeling about the market situation in that most basic of all primary, industries—food.

We are reminded daily of the tragedy of hunger in less-developed parts of the world. Few Canadians would disagree that this country has a special responsibility to help, by increasing our production and exports of basic foods.

As well, we are constantly reminded of the tragedy of inflation. People on modest incomes, especially retired people, are engaged in a losing struggle to maintain adequate diets in the face of food prices that rose nearly 15 per cent in the past 12 months—but at an annual rate of almost 28 per cent last month.

Yet even a cursory look at the federal and provincial governments' array of food quotas, floor prices and all-round marketing restrictions gives the impression that our problem is an over-abundance of food production, selling at depressed prices.

Consider just a few examples:

Milk costs consumers more in Canada than in many other agricultural countries, largely because so much of our production is held off the market and processed into skim milk powder.

A large part of that powder ends up in a stockpile that stood at 207-million pounds at mid-1975—nearly 2.5 times the mid-1974 inventory—because world markets can't absorb any more of it and international prices have plunged.

Canadian eggs, Grade A, are being sold to shoppers in some northern U.S. cities at roughly half the price being paid by consumers in Canadian supermarkets.

And while our government-appointed regulatory agencies are generously aiding the starving masses of upstate New York and Michigan, they are ordering certain Canadian farmers out of business for producing more than their allotted quota of eggs.

Poultry are buried, fish dumped, potatoes destroyed—all in the name of quotas and price maintenance, with no thought apparently given to an alternate, more humane use.

Now there is growing concern about the policy of marketing Canadian wheat, in view of the orders placed by the Soviet Union last month with the Canadian Wheat Board for two million tons of milling wheat and one million tons of durums.

In 1972, when the Soviets placed huge orders for U.S. wheat—as they have done again this year—the transaction was cloaked in bureaucratic secrecy.

Only later was it learned that U.S. negotiators had made errors that led to acute shortages and soaring prices on the domestic market.

In an open letter, the Consumers Association of Canada has criticized the secrecy that surrounds our current sales to the Soviets, and asked whether the Canadian Wheat Board feels its job is to sell quantities of wheat even if the Canadian consumer is harmed.

It's at least possible that the 1975 exports to the Soviet Union could lead to new shortages here, combined with sharp upward price pressure on a broad range of grain-related foods.

There doesn't seem to be anything to be gained by official silence on our selling price—but there is a potential risk in secrecy.

Landlords and Inflation

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

With his usual simplistic one-sided view of the world's ills in general and Quinte's in particular, Mr. Hockley has come all out against Tory landlords, who apparently in his view are some unique breed of half man, half beast.

It is unfortunate that rents are on the increase but why must the landlords be the villain. Inflation affects both tenants and landlords. The latter are constantly faced with increasing plumber's fees, electrician's fees, hikes in fuel and hydro etc.

How Mr. Hockley in good conscience can ignore these factors is startling. Sweeping labels such as "Landlord Banditry" do nothing to bridge the credibility gap created by his biased writing.

Tenants don't wear all the halos.

Landlords don't wear all the horns.

ELIZABETH MORTON.

City's Bus Service

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

A lot of citizens were, apparently, very concerned when the Transit Commission cut off the buses in the evening. By the uproar that some raised the impression was that a large segment of the community were having to walk and that all sorts of hardships were being endured.

The Transit Commission felt that they had a duty to conserve the taxpayers money by not running buses that were, for the most part empty. The bus drivers, with a fine show of hypocrisy, felt the buses should run at night, empty or not. They were not very concerned about their running when they walked off the job as I recall, but then, we all have our weaknesses.

Subsequently, city council overturned a previous decision to cut the buses off after a reasonable hour at night. The Transit Commission observed that they hoped, as a result of the decision to return all buses to the usual schedule, all those complaining would be found filling the empty seats.

I have closely observed the buses at night and they are still the same empty vehicles they were before the fuss. This is one time the Transit Commission made a right decision. If the buses are not paying their way at night they should either be taken off the road or replaced by smaller ones.

Vatican on Defensive in the Wake of the Traumatic Political Events of '70s

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

There is something defensive, if you can imagine such a stance from the supreme pontiff, about Pope Paul VI's major Holy Year statement of mid-July.

"The Jubilee of 1975 is a great demonstration of the vitality of the Vatican Council and its application to the level of the universal church. We have here an indication that its teachings were not in vain," he said.

No such statement was forthcoming during the last Holy Year in 1950 when ultra-conservative Pius XII decreed that the Virgin Mary was bodily assumed into heaven with an added condemnation from him for those who thought differently.

Such a declaration from the Holy Father in the mid-70s after the cataclysmic events affecting the Roman Catholic Church in the 60s and 70s would be unheard of.

In 1950, in those historically most Catholic of states, Spain and Portugal with the church officially linked to the regimes of Franco and Salazar, Holy Year was practised with a pomp and style of the pre-Reformation Church.

This was routine since in these two once conservative nations, it was the revisionist Council of Trent of the late 16th century, and not the Reformation of the early 16th century, which has always influenced the church in the Iberian Peninsula.

I choose these because of the unprecedented changes under way in the church in Spain with her cardinals and bishops joining their priests and laity in publishing apologies for past associations with the Franco regime.

The Third World scarcely identifiable as such in 1950, was still the seat of Catholic dioceses within colonial empires.

In 1975 the time of the latest Holy Year, the Catholic church in the midst of being very unsettled, new nations play many roles, not the least of which is support of liberation movements and secular programs for social change.

In Latin America, considered in 1950 to be an appendage of the conservative Spanish church and where Spanish priests proliferated as missionaries, the turn-about and politicization of the church has been massive.

One of the great heroes of the Marxist guerrilla movement is the dead Father Camilo Torres, the Colombian priest who joined the guerrillas, held high in the pantheon of heroes of the left, second only to Che Guevara.

And yet much is positive about Holy Year 1975 and in favor of today's gradualist approach to church problems practiced by the 77-year-old frail and middle-of-the-roader Paul VI.

The faithful have flocked to Rome in twice the numbers of 1950, in spite of that city's disarray from endless strikes and inflation and the much higher cost of travel.

The church of Rome like other global institutions facing attack in the '60s, is in a time of repose as are its many critics inside and outside the organization.

It has not bent one inch on its opposition to abortion laws and pressures to institute them around the world, even though population could be the worst crisis for humanity by the year of Our Lord 2000.

The married priest is a fact-of-life, an important spiritual leader in the community not to be shunned for doing so.

Indeed further investigation of the misty proof that Our Lord really meant priests to be celibate and male, is a priority for Rome in the years before the next Holy Year in the numerically spectacular year of 2000 A.D.

Taylor to Run Again as Race Under Way

By RON HIUSER
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Meetings are being planned, pamphlets are being printed and other forms of campaigning are underway as preparations for the Sept. 18 provincial election begin in Prince Edward — Lennox Riding.

The only official candidate for the riding to date is Jan Nicol, representing the New Democratic Party.

"I'm delighted that it has started," said Miss Nicol.

After working on the campaign for about two months, Miss Nicol said, "We can't compete with a slick T.V. campaign. We'll be canvassing and talking to particular groups in the riding."

Talking from her headquarters at 21 Elizabeth St. Picton, Miss Nicol stated the issues of the election will be the entire Davis administration, especially the problems of the inequality of income and housing.

"The Davis government hasn't allowed eastern Ontario to share in Ontario's development," said Miss Nicol.

A freeze on the industrial development of farm land will be one the NDP platforms brought forth in the election said Miss Nicol.

In the last four years, an average of 26 acres of prime farm land has been developed for industrial use each hour, said the NDP hopeful.

Jim Taylor, the Progressive Conservative incumbant for this riding, said in a telephone interview Tuesday, he would be a candidate at the nomination convention which date has yet to be set.

"The nomination meeting should probably be within a week's time. As yet I have not heard of any opposition," said Mr. Taylor.

Mr. Taylor said he feels the election will be fought on "certain concepts".

"One cannot discount leadership. We have an excellent leader," said Mr. Taylor.

The Liberal leader and his concern of regional government is just "poppycock" said the incumbant.

"He's four years behind the time," commented Mr. Taylor.

Mr. Taylor explained that the option of regional government is in the hands of the local councils and the provincial governmnt will not implement regional government unless requested by the local officials.

The past record of the Davis government in the restriction of growth around Toronto, and the move to decentralize development to such areas as Oshawa, th Port Hope — Cobourg area, and the industrial park Spenserville, near Prescott, proves the work of the present government to follow through with their plans, said Mr. Taylor.

"I don't want heavy industries in the county. I would like small industries developed for this area," stated Mr. Taylor.

As part of the decentralization plan, Mr. Taylor noted creation of the Eastern Ontario Development Corporation in Kingston which gives low-interest loans to prospective companies.

The Liberal Party has not decided who their candidate is yet, but a date for the nomination meeting will be decided Friday night at the executive meeting held in Napanee, said Terry Larstone, president of the ridings Liberal association.

"I'm not at liberty to mention any names as nominees," said Mr. Larstone.

"The main issues will be about the cost of government, regional government, and education on a provincial scale, but I think farming will be an important issue in this riding," said Mr. Larstone.

"The candidate will decide how he or she is going to run the campaign and what the issues are," said Mr. Larstone.

"Government bureaucracy is out of hand. It has grown to such an extent government is remote from the people. It is ridiculous," said the president.

On the question of housing, Mr. Larstone said he feels it was not as critical as in some areas.

Mr. Larstone said he feels if another Davis government is elected regionalized government will be through-out the province within a year.

Other issues mentioned by Mr. Larstone are the problems of inflation and the question of energy in "all forms."

Party Hopeful

The only official candidate in the next provincial election, is Jan Nicol, who is representing the New Democratic Party in the Prince Edward - Lennox Riding. She started her campaign about two months ago Miss Nicol is a former civil servant with Canada Manpower.

Marine Museum Adds Several New Exhibits

SOUTH BAY — A new addition to the Mariners' Park Museum here is planned for the near future, says historian and member of the Prince Edward Marine Society, Willis Metcalf.

Mr. Metcalf, who is author of Canvas and Steam on Quinte Waters, said the addition will house the growing collection of newly-acquired artifacts.

New this year at the museum are a number of small artifacts, including loading hooks and a double-sheaved wooden block pulley, salvaged recently from the schooner Olive Branch which sank in 1880. Also new this year is a collection of stamps depicting a variety of sailing vessels, donated by David Smith of Picton.

Mr. Metcalf said that a Lathrop marine engine, donated by Robert Hart, owner of Main Duck Island, will be on display shortly. It is now being restored by students at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, Picton.

You preach it. Now read why you should practice it. Every day.

"Drink your milk." If you think this applies just to growing children, you are wrong. Nobody ever stops needing the good nutrients in milk.

YOU ARE CERTAINLY AWARE of your children's daily need for milk.

But did you know that you need it too? Every day, just as they do?

Well, you do. Milk is just as important to adults as it is to children. It contains more nutrients needed by all ages than any other food that Nature provides.

All by itself, milk is an excellent source of no less than five nutrients of major importance to adult health. Here they are:—

Calcium. Calcium is a factor in the maintenance, and repair, of bones and teeth. Milk is rated "excellent" as a source of this important mineral.

Protein. You think "meat"? Think "milk". Because milk is an excellent source of the same quality protein found in meat. (Bet you didn't know that!)

Riboflavin. One of the B Vitamins, Riboflavin is a factor in keeping you healthy. And what is an excellent, readily-available and economical source of it? Milk.

Vitamin A. Another basic factor in maintaining health in adults and children. Whole milk is an excellent source of this vitamin.

Phosphorus—of which milk is also an excellent source—works with calcium to maintain good bone condition throughout the whole of one's adulthood.

Wait. There's more to the story: milk is also considered a good source of Thiamine, another needed health factor. And, in Ontario, Vitamin D is almost always added as well.

In short, it's the deficiencies in milk that are hard to find! Just about the only important nutrients it cannot supply are iron and Vitamin C, both of which it has, but only in small amounts.

Now you know how much benefit milk can be for you, an adult. And, you will remember, you once drank it every single day ...through all of your childhood.

Maybe the time has come to start again.

"Every day is what it takes."
To get the most out of milk, make it a daily habit. Just the way you brush your teeth.

Fortunately, nothing could be much easier to make a habit of than milk. You don't have to mix, stir, cook. Just pour...and drink.

You don't have to revise your food habits, either. You can make room for milk in your daily diet simply by adding a glass to breakfast, lunch or dinner. If you have coffee breaks during your day, you can do yourself a real favour by making one a milk break instead.

Noonday soups can often be made with milk instead of water. Extra creamy as well as extra good!

And if you're counting calories, make your calories count—by drinking milk every day. It contains more nutrition per calorie than any other readily obtainable food!

Another benefit from milk.
There is one other aspect of your re-instating yourself as a daily milk drinker which deserves your very serious consideration.

It is this: if your children grow up seeing you, an adult, accepting milk as a fundamental part of your daily food intake, it will be a lot harder for them to get talked out of milk by their contemporaries who condemn it as "kid stuff". You're the daily proof that it isn't.

In this day of the junk-food explosion, that's a service that can be important.

And all the time you are setting an example for your children, you are doing a great big nutritional favour for yourself.

Two things to feel good about—with every glass of milk you drink!

Thank goodness for milk.
Over and above all its nutritional values—and no other single food outranks it—there's something uniquely satisfying about milk.

Perhaps this is because milk is such a basic food, so abundantly surrounded with associations of purity, wholesomeness, naturalness.

And, if you are like most Canadian women, you have already been away from milk for far too long.

Make friends with milk again. Every day. Starting now.

It isn't hard. And you won't regret it.

The heavenly aroma of melting cheddar drifts through the house, enticing appetites of all within range when baking the Cheese Snacks. Serve right from the oven for company or cool and flaky for anytime nibbling.

Cheesecake, a real "dazzler" that brings every meal — from the simplest family to the most elaborate company occasion — to a happy ending. Tangy with lemon, yet rich and creamy, the filling bakes in a crisp crumb crust. Topped with colorful pie filling, this elegant dessert tastes and looks scrumptious.

Quiche Lorraine

two cups cake and pastry flour
¾ tsp. salt
two-thirds cup shortening
four to five tbsps. cold water

Mix flour and salt. With a pastry blender or two knives, cut in shortening until the consistency of coarse meal with a few large pieces. Sprinkle with cold water, one tbsp. at a time, mashing with a fork. Use just enough water to make a dough which will cling together and clean easily from the bowl. Roll out half and line a 9-inch pie plate. Trim and flute edge. Wrap and store extra pastry in refrigerator.

Filling
1½ cups grated Swiss Cheese
½ cup diced ham
four eggs
1¼ cups light cream
¼ tsp. salt
pinch of pepper

Preheat oven to 450 degrees F. Sprinkle cheese and ham into pastry-lined pie plate. Beat eggs, cream, salt and pepper together and pour into pie shell.

Bake in preheated 450 degree oven for 10 minutes then reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake for an additional 30 to 40 minutes, or until set around edges and slightly soft in centre. Let stand 10 minutes before serving.

Cheese Snacks

two cups cake and pastry flour
½ tsp. salt
two-thirds cup shortening
½ cup grated cheddar cheese
pinch of dry mustard
four to five tbsps. cold water
poppy seeds

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Combine flour, salt and shortening as in pastry recipe for Quiche. Stir in cheese and dry mustard. Add water as for pastry. Roll, one-half at a time, ¼-inch thick on a lightly floured surface. Cut into various shapes. Brush with milk and sprinkle with poppy seeds. Place on ungreased baking sheet.

Bake in preheated 425 degree oven for 20 to 25 minutes, or until golden brown.

Makes eight dozen.

Dutch Cheese Shortbread

one cup (4 oz.) imported Holland Edam or Gouda ½ cup butter
½ cup all-purpose flour
½ cup whole wheat flour
¼ tsp. salt

Cream shredded cheese and butter; blend in flour and salt. Work with hands until the mixture forms a smooth ball. If it is too sticky add a little more flour; if too dry add a few drops water. Lightly butter one 9-inch square cake pan or one 9-inch round layer cake pan. Press the dough firmly and evenly into the bottom of the pan. Cut the shortbread into squares or wedges. Prick with a fork. Bake in 400 degree oven 20-25 minutes until golden. When cool cut down lines again and remove from baking pan. Makes 12 squares or wedges.

Holland Crisps

1½ cups boiling water
one cup cornmeal
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. curry powder
¼ cup butter
½ cup (2-oz.) shredded imported Holland Edam or Gouda

Pour boiling water on cornmeal. Stir to make a light batter. Season with salt; blend in butter and shredded imported Holland Edam or Gouda. Preheat oven to 425 degrees F. Grease baking sheet. Drop the batter by the half teaspoon about three inches apart onto prepared baking sheet. Dip metal dessert spoon in water. Press each mound with the back of the wet spoon into a thin wafer. Bake five-six minutes in 425 degree oven until lightly browned. Makes about four dozen crisp wafers.

Cheese Souffle

one cup milk
one cup soft white bread crumbs, free of crusts three tbsps. butter
three tbsps. flour
½ tsp. salt
dash cayenne pepper
one cup grated nippy cheese three egg yolks
three egg whites

Pour ⅓ cup of milk over crumbs and let stand. Melt butter in saucepan. Blend in flour, add seasonings and remaining ½ cup milk. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until sauce has thickened. Add cheese and stir until melted. Remove from heat, blend soaked crumbs in the beaten egg yolks. Cool and fold mixture into stiffly beaten egg whites.

Pour into casserole greased on the bottom only. Dish should be two-thirds full. Place in pan with 1" hot water.

Oven-poach in moderate oven 350 deg. F. until set, about 50 minutes. When cooked, a silver knife inserted into centre of souffle will come out with no uncooked mixture clinging to it. Serves six.

five hard-cooked eggs, chopped ½ cup finely diced celery
one tbsp. pickle relish
one tsp. minced onion
one-third tsp. salt

one 10-ounce can condensed cream of celery soup
1½ cups medium or old grated Canadian cheddar cheese

Black is on Its Way Out, The Tuxedo Turns to Color

By RON HIUSER

The traditional tuxedo for wedding and formal engagements seems to be slowly dying.

"The blacks are going out of style," said Rick Sexsmith, manager of Jack Fraser Men's Wear.

"Most people are going for lighter shades and the sporty look," Mr. Sexsmith said.

Summer colors of yellow and blue are the most popular of the newer fashion, he said.

The manager of Esquire Men's Wear, Barry Hayes said, "I haven't rented a black tuxedo in a year except for dinner engagements."

The newer style is more shaped to the body and usually trimmed in velvet, said Mr. Hayes.

"I rent about 90 per cent more colored tuxedos than black ones."

"I have a black tux in the book, but nobody takes it," said Mr Hayes.

Colorful suits are out-selling the traditional black by nine to one, according to Bill Meagher, owner of Meagher's Men's Wear.

"One thing, it has given business a shot in the arm," said Mr. Meagher.

"The black is dressy, but the color makes it more intersting for the younger people," said the owner.

The assistant manager of Dover's Ltd., Garnet Thompson said, "the higher the fashion, the better."

Mr. Thompson said he considers the higher fashion to be the brighter colors and the style.

"The suits are mainly for weddings. Last year the quantity of rentals were good and they are the same if not better this year," said Mr. Thompson.

Fashioned tuxedoes outsell the traditional tux about 90 to 10, said a spokesman for the Red Shark.

The spokesman added that it is erroneous to consider these suits "tuxes".

"They're no more tuxedoes than I'm a spaceship pilot."

"I feel the young kids rent these suits because they have no wardrobe other than jeans," said the owner.

The new styles flatter the outfits worn by the bride and her attendents, he said.

Murry McIntosh, the assistant-manager for McIntosh Bros. Stores Ltd., said the trend is toward the newer collors, as far as weddings are concerned.

"Young people are going for color," said Mr. McIntosh.

The black tux is still being rented for the dinner engagement, but as far as the young people are concerned, color is outselling the traditional black, Mr. McIntosh said.

RIVER VALLEY WI

Lois Hoard was hostess for the August meeting of the River Valley Women's Institute, at which 12 members displayed their various hobbies and crafts. Jewelry, weaving, pottery, rugs and paintings done on wood were among the pieces of work made by the women.

Helen Brooks convened the program, and Gladys Corby provided the piano music.

STIRLING WI

A chicken dinner was served to the Stirling Women's Institute at the Stirling Community Hall August 6, attended by 26 members and nine visitors.

President Anne McInroy conducted the business meeting, and Mrs. Gifford presented a program on world affairs. Luella Bronson and Myrle Tanner were in charge of games and contests to end the meeting.

Tanner Family Holds Annual Reunion Picnic

St. Thomas Church on the eighth concession of Rawdon township was the setting for the 19th family reunion of the Tanner family. More than 40 family members met August 10, after dinner served in the Orange Hall.

President Morley Tanner welcomed the crowd, mentioning especially those who had travelled long distances. Silence was observed in memory of those who had passed away during the last year, and each family was then introduced. A business meeting followed, at which minutes of the last picnic were read.

After the financial report a collection was taken, and a re-electing of present officers was held, with Lindsay Tanner back as secretary.

Prizes were given to several persons in various categories — oldest, youngest, longest married, largest family and those from the farthest distance.

At the close of the afternoon a memorial service was held in the little church chapel which had been closed for some time. Rev. Fred Gosse of Stirling led the service.

SHEILA MADELON BOURETTE, BA, daughter of the late Joseph Bourette and Mrs. Marjorie Bourette, recently received her Bachelor of Education degree from Queen's University in Kingston. Children Publish Magazine

Young Staff Produces 'Mini Mouth'

OTTAWA (CP) — Take an office in Ottawa that looks out on tennis courts, a product that costs a nickel and a staff of 10 children between eight and 13 years of age and you've got Mini-Mouth Magazine, a 16-page monthly for children.

Mini-Mouth, backed by a federal $5,700 Opportunities for Youth grant, was the brainchild of Merilyn Read, consultant to the project, which is run by three University of Ottawa students—Joy Kardish, Sheila McCarthy and Elizabeth Rutledge.

Mini-Mouth was designed to let children have a mouthpiece for information and ideas of interest to them and to "take them through all the channels of magazine publishing," says Miss McCarthy.

The staff for the first issue July 15 was drawn from a hat containing names of children from several Ottawa schools who had shown the most interest and enthusiasm. The staff changes each month to involve as many children as possible.

Experts were invited in to instruct in the basics of photography and reporting and some young staffers taught the rest of the group.

"The response has been tremendous," says Miss Kardish. "We received over 200 poems from school children, including entire booklets from some." A cover contest drew 40 entries.

The first issue was packed full of contributions, with copy running up and down and across the pages. Readers had to turn the magazine on its side to enjoy such jokes as : "Two peanuts were walking down the street and one was a salted."

A Dear Mini column covered such problems as Margo's: " . . . My brothers and sisters just don't notice that I am a girl."

Other features were an interview with children's entertainer Magic Tom, an editorial on TV violence, recipes, drawings, poems, crafts and book reviews.

Looking back on a job well done, Chi Carmedy, 10, one of the Mini editors, describes the magazine this way: "It's not like Time magazine. That's so bland with its straight lines. Kids like their magazines to go haywire."

Sometimes it gets so haywire that the adult consultants find they have to restrain themselves from making editorial layout suggestions, such as opposing the children's choice of bright green and yellow pages.

Another problem was that although many of the children could write imaginatively they could not write factually.

Four advertisements on the last page were solicited and drawn by the staffers, A supermarket ad offered such specials as a good selection of "ceareal."

The 400 copies of Mini-Mouth were distributed to libraries, bookstores and toy shops in Ottawa. If the magazine proves successful, national distribution is hoped for.

The staff for the first issue appeared to have enjoyed magazine publication. As nine-year-old Jennifer Wetlake put it: "It's satisfying, like working at a real job."

Antibodies A Cause

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (Reuter) — A South African gynaecologist claims that as many as one out of five childless marriages may be caused by the wife's "rejection" of her husband's sperm. This is because the women's blood serum contains antibodies against sperm which prevent conception. Investigation of 60 infertile women revealed antibodies in 13.

Ann Landers

Doctor Can't Afford Cheap Patient

Dear Ann Landers: You really fixed me but good. I read your suggestion that patients with appointments who are made to wait endlessly should deduct the "waiting time" from their bill, according to what THEIR time is worth.

Well, I'm not employed, but I figured my time is worth something. So, after waiting two and a half hours to see my doctor, I deducted $2.50 when I paid my bill.

I am sending you a copy of his letter to me. He is the best doctor I ever had in my life and now, on account of you, I can't show my face in his office again. Thanks for nothing. My name is Anne Johnson but I'm signing myself—Miss Led."

Dear Miss Led: I wrote to your doctor and asked permission to print his letter. He said "OK"—so here it is:

Dear Mrs. Johnson: Returned herewith is your cheque and my bill from which you made a deduction for the time spent in my waiting room

If you think my waiting room is "germ-filled," and the time I spend with each patient, including you, is excessive (which of course is why YOU had to wait so long), and a smart-aleck remark by a clever newspaper columnist justifies a deduction against my modest charges, then you obviously cannot afford me as a doctor. And I, very honestly, can't afford you as a patient. Sorry.—W. E. Manry, MD, Lake Wales, Fla.

Dear Dr. Manry: Thanks for permission to print your letter. And now, if Mrs. Johnson apologizes for calling your waiting room "germ-filled," will you please take her back as a patient?

In return I'll overlook your reference to the "clever newspaper columnist's smart-aleck remark." I guess it wasn't so smart after all.

Dear Ann Landers: We just put down new carpeting. Its light grey and soils easily.

How can I ask people to remove their shoes before entering the house without hurting their feelings?

I've already offended two friends. Their shoes weren't muddy but they were dirty. I'm sure others with light carpeting will appreciate some advice—Like Things Nice

Dear Nice: Carpets are to walk on so you should expect a reasonable amount of soil.

Unless a guest's shoes are unusually dirty, please don't ask him to remove them. Place a mat inside the door and suggest to visitors that they scrape their shoes—"in honor of the new carpeting." If you say it with a smile, they won't mind.

Dear Ann: Amen to your answer to the Phys-Ed "klutz" from Rockford. You said, "If you girls are trying your darnedest, the perseverance, earnestness and hard work should be reflected in your grades."

As a former teacher (now assistant superintendent) who has seen the heartache suffered by "special education students"—some retarded, others with learning disabilities and emotional problems—I'd like to suggest that your advice be extended to academic "klutzes" as well.—J. H.

Dear J.H.: Thanks for your support. I received precious little from other quarters. In fact, dozens of people wrote to say I was an idiot for suggesting such a thing. Glad to know there are others who believe in E for Effort and T for Trying.

Quebec Indians Mercury Victims

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail quotes a doctor working for the federal health department who says some Indians in northwestern Quebec have "frightening" blood-mercury levels that far exceed any previously recorded in Canada.

The newspaper quotes the doctor as saying several Cree Indians living off the land near Matagami have been found to have mercury levels of more than 500 parts per billion in their blood.

This is close to the levels found in Minamata, Japan, a fishing village where more than 100 persons have died from mercury poisoning, the newspaper quotes the doctor as saying.

Ontario has set 100 parts per billion as the safe human maximum.

The doctor, who asked that his name not be used, is quoted as saying federal health investigators are extremely concerned about the situation in Quebec.

He also is quoted as saying no symptoms of mercury poisoning have been discovered yet, but that the government wants to take three people with the highest mercury levels to a Montreal hospital for further tests.

Pollution Dispute Described

TORONTO (CP)—With anguish and bitter humor, the president of a Toronto recycling plant told an Ontario environment board hearing Tuesday of the frustration of being caught in a pollution controversy.

Morris Kaufman, president of Toronto Refiners and Smelters Ltd., recounted a tale of what he said were contradictory government orders, persecution by politicians and the news media and even attempted extortion

He said it all started June 19, 1972, when the environment ministry imposed an order closing down his company's battery crusher as a threat to human health.

The Bathurst Street plant recycles about one millionn batteries a year to recover lead for use by industry.

"This has cost me thousands of dollars . . . and my health," he said, referring to a recent heart attack.

Mr. Kaufman said he had received no warning or complaint prior to the order that lead emissions from his plant were suspect and it was not until "days after" that the ministry began running tests.

Meanwhile, the Toronto board of health complained about lead pollution from the growing accumulation of uncrushed batteries. Area residents, some 1½ miles away, began organizing a protest group with financing from a Local Initiatives Program (LIP) grant, he said.

He said the city blocked construction of a 175-foot smokestack favored by the ministry.

Mr. Kaufman also complained of unfavorable news coverage, citing one demonstration led by Ald. Daniel Heap.

News cameras were "conveniently" there and later they despicted black smoke from the nearby city garbage incinerator as coming from his plant, he said.

He added that at one point a local resident who had been active in the protest movement offered to be silent if he were paid $700.

Mr Kaufman did not identify the man, who has since moved, but told the board he refused to pay.

The hearing continues today.

Indians Face Fishing Charges

GORE BAY, Ont. (CP) — Several Manitoulin Island Indians charged with violations of provincial fishery regulations and the Game and Fish Act were remanded Tuesday in provincial court for trial Oct. 7.

The Indians, members of the West Bay and Wikwemikong bands, were charged in May with fishing in Blue Jay Creek and the Manitou River, designated at the time as a government sanctuary.

The Indians, however, said treaty rights give them unrestricted fishing rights on Manitoulin Island.

They told the court they had not had sufficient time to retain a lawyer.

Gore Bay is about 80 miles southwest of Sudbury.

Plan Meeting

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Bruce Warmington, manager of the Kingston Construction Association (KCA) said Tuesday a meeting between the KCA and 300 striking construction workers was tentatively scheduled for this morning.

Mr. Warmington said John Hopper, a provincially-appointed mediator, was to attend the meeting.

Tax Change Plans Like Budget News

OTTAWA (CP) — Publisher Mark Farrell of Montreal Gazette said Tuesday he saw little difference whether confidential information on tax changes was leaked to businessmen before or after a federal budget.

Mr. Farrell made the comments during the second day of the Commons privileges and elections committee hearing during which he stood by his newspaper's story last month that a Liberal MP had leaked such information.

The MP, John Reid, parliamentary secretary to House leader Mitchell Sharp, has denied the accusation, saying he only made a good guess as to the government's intention on taxes.

The Gazette originally said it was a budget leak but later apologized and said the information concerned an amendment to a tax bill introduced more than two months later.

Mr. Farrell, who said the only thing he regrets about the story is getting "the time frame" wrong, said he saw no real difference whether the leak was on the budget itself or a later amendment.

The story quoted Mr. Reid as saying he knew six weeks in advance an excise tax on boats was being lifted and that the information was passed on to persons in his riding, including a boat builder and three marinas.

Jacques Hamilton, the reporter who wrote the story, said Mr. Reid did not deny the quotes attributed to him.

Bud Cullen (L—Sarnia-Lambton) said the original interview with Mr. Reid was in the context of a series of articles dealing with the wide issue of conflict of interest. When the newspaper decided to make the question of possible budget leaks a separate story, it should have advised Mr. Reid and sought further clarification.

Mr. Cullen also said Mr. Hamilton should not have taped his first conversation with Mr. Reid without advising the MP. The committee was told such taping was against Gazette policy.

A transcript of Mr. Reid's replies in the taped interview was tabled before the committee, but Mr. Hamilton said the tape has been since re-used and is not available.

Mr. Farrell praised Mr. Hamilton as a senior, highly-competent reporter and said the Gazette is sorry to lose him. He resigned to become British Columbia correspondent for Macleans magazine.

Mr. Farrell said Mr. Hamilton was not instructed to table his notes, which were from an on-the-record interview. But notes from any off-the-record conversation would be a different matter.

"We'd fight anything off-the-record to the death," he said. "We'd make a stand on that."

Mr. Hamilton told the committee that if he had to do it over again, he would write the same story. But, in hindsight, he would have checked the ways and means motion that accompanies the budget, eliminating the error on timing.

Brodie Snyder, Gazette managing editor, said discrepancies between the official Commons transcript of the case the day the story broke and a transcript carried by The Gazette the next morning resulted from cutting the transcript to fit the page of type. He said there was no malice in making the cuts, agreed that some should not have been made, and apologized to the members.

Federal Politicians Prefer Holidays To Participation in Ontario Election

OTTAWA (CP) — Early indications are that most prominent federal politicians will be too busy enjoying their summer recess to become very active in the Ontario election campaign.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald is the only cabinet member to go on record as ready to do "anything he can" for the provincial Liberals. Ed Broadbent, leader of the New Democratic Party, is the only party chief committed to the campaign.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, continuing what they say is long-standing policy, will not campaign provincially.

Of the nine cabinet ministers from Ontario, including Mr. Macdonald, many are vacationing. Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner, scheduled to visit Eastern Europe after his holidays, is not expected back until Sept. 15.

Labor Minister John Munro (Hamilton East) plans to participate in an election-night television program in his home city.

The other six are Robert Andras, manpower and immigration; Barney Danson, urban affairs; Alastair Gillespie, industry, trade and commerce; Mitchell Sharp, Privy Council president; John Turner, finance; and Eugene Whelan, agriculture.

The Conservatives' participation in the Ontario campaign apparently will be by request only, says Sinclair Stevens, the party's finance critic and touted as a possible contender for the federal leadership when Mr. Stanfield steps down next February.

But he took advantage of an interview to make a plug for the Davis administration, saying "it would be most unfortunate for the wellbeing of the country" if, with a federal Liberal government and overwhelming Liberal majority in Quebec, the Liberals also took over Ontario.

Although Premier Davis announced the election date only on Monday, he really began his campaign much earlier—on an anti-Ottawa note.

When the June 23 budget was brought down by Finance Minister Turner, Ontario's reaction was swift. One of the main provisions was a 10-cents-a-gallon increase in gasoline taxes, which was opposed by the federal Conservatives and the Davis government.

A further five-cent increase, scheduled to go into effect this month, has been frozen by Mr. Davis. But this freeze will expire early in October—just enough time for the election dust to settle.

He also has called for a re-examination of federal and provincial government structures, questioning, for example, the need for 10 provincial labor ministers as well as a federal one.

But, apparently not desiring too wide a rift between Queen's Park and Ottawa, he said recently he is "four-square behind Confederation."

Police Reject Objection To News Report

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — The Sudbury Regional Police Commission has rejected a suggestion that police should not inform the news media of thefts at the post office.

Al O'Conner, Sudbury's acting postmaster, wrote a letter Aug. 1 complaining that the police department released details of a recent theft at the post office involving almost $20,000 worth of cheques.

Robert Desmarais, chairman of the police commission, said he believes it is to the benefit of the post office as well as to the public, that the news media be kept informed of such incidents.

City police are looking for the owner of a rowboat found adrift near Zwick's Island on the northside.

11-year-old wins Frisbee Throw

The sky over Belleville was filled with more than clouds, Tuesday afternoon, as 60 children competed for the recreation department's Frisbee championships for the western half of the city at the Parkdale Community Centre.

The children were tested in various manoeuvers with the flat disc scoring a maximum of 10 points in 10 individual contests.

There were curves, horseshoes, boomerang and accuracy events during the three-hour competition to determine the winners.

The winners will be eligible to compete at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, August 18, if they decide to, but they will have to pay their own expense for the national competition, a recreation department spokesman said.

The winners of the western championships were Trudy DeGenova, 11, with a score of 72 out of a possible 100 points; Larry Derouche, 10, with a score of 71½ points; and David Wright, 10, with a score of 68 points.

Stolen Van Recovered

BLOOMFIELD — Picton OPP recovered a stolen vehicle Tuesday at Outlet Provincial Park. The Ford van was taken off the lot last Thursday from Trudeau Motors on North Front St., Belleville Belleville city police have charged Richard Allan Loner, 16, RR 1, Bloomfield, with car theft.

Change of Command

Seated, Maj.-Gen. Kenneth Lewis signs changeover certificate Tuesday to mark his departure from CFB Trenton and the assumption of new duties by Big.-Gen. R. G. Husch (centre) and Brig.-Gen. L. V. Johnson. Maj. Robert Davidson (right) assists in the change of command ceremony that marks an end to Air Transport Command in the Canadian armed forces. Maj.-Gen. Lewis assumes new duties as deputy commander of Air Command in Winnipeg.

O'Neil First Liberal To Seek Party Standard

Trenton realtor Hugh O'Neil announced Tuesday he is seeking the nomination to represent Quinte riding Liberals in the Sept. 18 provincial election.

Mr. O'Neil is the first Liberal to make any candidacy announcement for the riding.

"The nominating convention is definitely no trigged — and I'm hoping for a good fight," said Mr. O'Neil during a press reception in his Trenton office.

Mr. O'Neil said he had been approached by provincial leader Robert Nixon's office to go for the party nomination but that "there's no way I'd want executive endorsement to secure the nomination," he said.

Mr. O'Neil refused to elaborate on any personal or party platform saying only that his personal aims will be included in his nomination acceptance speech Tuesday. The nominating convention will be held in Belleville's Centennial Secondary School.

Mr. O'Neil said, "I want someone to represent the people — to be accessible. If there's ever been a chance for a Liberal — it has to be now."

O'Neil Take 2

Mr. O'Neil took aim at the Davis government and Quinte Progressive Conservation candidate Robin Jeffrey saying "the government has been the worst this province has ever seen — and that the claim by the local Davis candidate that there will be no regional governments in this area shows she is extremely naive."

Commenting on Mayor Jeffrey's success as the Tory candidate, Mr. O'Neil commented, "The whole atmosphere of the meeting Monday nght was one of "we can get elected in this area no matter who we run."

Liberals Rebuilding From 'Grass Roots Up'

The Quinte riding Liberal organization must be re-built from the grass roots up, says Trenton realtor Hugh O'Neil.

Mr. O'Neil announced Tuesday he is seeking the nomination to represent Quinte riding Liberals in the upcoming provincial election.

During a press reception Tuesday he announced riding association president Lyn Harrington will act as his campaign manager in the event he wins the party nod.

"We're going to have to work at this election as a team," said Mr. O'Neil. "We intend winning but it will mean re-building the Liberal organization up from the grass roots."

Mr. O'Neil said a number of dependable party workers will be key figures in party organization.

"If there's ever a chance for a Liberal, it has to be now," he said.

Bell Jobs Scarce

Belleville residents seeking employment with Bell Canada here are going to meet with a lot of frustration.

Belleville District manager R. W. Carleton said Tuesday the local Bell office has no plans to hire. The move comes as a result of the July 28 Canadian Transportation Commission which granted only 50 per cent of Bell's rate hike request.

Mr. Carleton said Bell locally employs about 250 ne: including the Bell Training School. "The slowdown of programs due to the cutbacks in funds means less work" he explained. Bell normally hires in the spring, he said.

Hats Off to Hobo

Hobo, the canine wonder with a vocabulary of 5,000 words, removes the cap from the head of Ken Cottrell, 12, of Trenton. The dog was acting on the suggestion of his "educator". Charles Eisenmann, who is appearing with his animals at the Quinte Mall until Saturday.

Canine Trainer Says Dogs Think and Reason

By JERRY BROWN

Staff Reporter

Fido, get me my red bathrobe, a dry martini and a good book to read.

Impossible?

Not so says Charles Eisemann, owner and "educator" of The Littlest Hobo, from television series of the same name, and other members of his canine family.

"It's a revolutionary method of teaching a dog how to think, reason and behave that is a step ahead of society's thinking," he said in an interview following the performance of his dogs at the Quinte Mall, Tuesday.

"Ninety-per-cent of what trainers say about dogs is not correct," he said. "The habitual method of training dogs creates robots."

He said, for example, he has shown dogs can differentiate between colors disproving the notion they are color-blind.

"Perhaps an animal can't know what red or black is but these are just words," he said. "It is possible to teach the animal to recognize various shades of light and dark and to associate them with the same names people do."

The audience of more than 100 adults and children laughed and applauded the work of Mr. Eisenmann and his four animals during the 40-minute performance, one of three he gives daily at the mall.

Continuously the dogs chose and retrieved objects from his displays, differentiating between blues and pinks without any obvious command or indication by Mr. Eisenmann.

The dogs removed sunglasses from the head of one young man who was seated with two other children when instructed by Mr. Eisenmann to remove the glasses of the person wearing them.

Another child was picked out by the dog when Mr. Eisenmann spelled the inscription of the T-shirt the boy was wearing, while a third person hed her hat removed by one of the canines.

The dogs, unleashed and unattended appeared to be relaxed and were available for petting and handling by the audience after the show and displayed no signs of annoyance with the constant touching.

"The most important thing is never to embarrass a dog by asking it to do something outside the realm of it's capabilities or it will attach a bad feeling to the act and not want to do it," he said.

"If more people would adopt this method of educating dogs it would lead to a better relationship between canines and humans."

Yardmen Seize Band Equipment

By COLIN BRUCE

Staff Reporter

Two directors of the Belleville Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps have resigned following the seizure of the band's equipment and uniforms Tuesday night. And a band spokesman says the resulting cancellation of three weekend concerts could cost $2,000 in fines.

The seizure of the equipment marks the culmination of mounting friction between the band executive and the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund sponsors, which spokesmen say has been boiling for three years.

Art Lucas, assistant corps director, said today "I want my name completely dissociated with the band. John Dorrington, band treasurer feels the same way.

"I no longer want any involvement," he said. "It's just one big hassle.

"It is not because of just one reason but for a number of reasons," he said. "We've had problems since the corps was started three years ago."

According to band equipment manager Sally Finkle, the Yardmen sponsors came to the band headquarters on Station St. Tuesday at 10 p.m. and "loaded up all the equipment and took it away".

Ernie Belanger, Yardmen executive member, had no comment. A rental truck containing the equipment was parked in front of the Yardmen senior citizen centre throughout the morning.

Miss Finkle said she has not been given a definite reason why the equipment was taken back by the sponsors.

Mr. Belanger said some announcement will be made later today. The equipment — stored in the old St. George's Mission on Station St., — is valued at approximately $30,000.

Along with the Yardmen band equipment, a quantity of Kingston Grenadier equipment was also taken. John Raymond, director of the Kingston corps, met with Yardmen officials today.

Because top flight competition requires large bands, the Kingston and Belleville groups amalgamated earlier this summer. Shortly afterward, the Yardmen withdrew support, but reviewed it withhin a week.

Miss Finkle said the equipment has been seized with "only 12 days left in the summer schedule".

"We have competitions in Guelph for the Canadian Senior Championship this Saturday and in Rochester on Sunday . . . where we will be fined $1,000 if we don't show up," she said. "Our last competition is for the Red Carpet Association in Hamilton the following weekend where we will also be fined $1,000 if we don't attend."

Corps director Hugh Bondy is in Montreal today and unavailable for comment.

Transport Command Ends 27-year Role

By AL ZABAS

Staff Reporter

TRENTON — The end of Air Transport Command and the institution of two new Air Command component headquarters at CFB Trenton was made formal Tuesday with the departure of ATC Commander Maj.-Gen. Kenneth Lewis in a change-of-command ceremony.

On the parade square under sunny skies, Maj.-Gen. Lewis inspected 300 base personnel and a cadet band from CFB Borden for the final time.

After inspection, conducted by base commander Col. J. C. Henry, the last commander of the 27-year-old ATC arm of the Canadian Forces signed changeover certificates, with Brig.-Gen. L. V. Johnson and Brig.-Gen. R. G. Husch.

Respectively, the two men assume new posts as commander of Canadian Forces Training System and commander of Air Transport Group, two component units in the Air Command, the recently created air arm of the armed forces.

Maj.-Gen. Lewis leaves Trenton after a one-year tour of duty as commander of ATC. He assumes his new post as deputy-commander of Air Command Sept. 1.

In a brief address Tuesday, he said CFB Trenton now is the home of two headquarters instead of the one (ATC). No new faces will be seen at the base as a result of the changes since most of existing staff will continue to serve here.

Maj.-Gen. Lewis called the formation of Air Command (in Winnipeg) an "exceedingly positive step".

Base information officer Capt. Wayne Cross said Tuesday the change of command ceremony was the most significant one at CFB Trenton since the formation of ATC 27 years ago.

It marks the dissolution of ATC and control of all armed forces aircraft by Air Command.

Stationed here from Winnipeg is Brig.-Gen. Johnson, who served in Winnipeg in training command. His return here ends a three-year absence, part of which he spent as base commander at CFB Edmonton. Formerly, he acted as deputy chief of staff at ATC headquarters here.

Brig.-Gen. Husch will take over as commander of Air Transport Group, moving from his post as chief of staff at ATC headquarters where he has served for two years. Three years ago, he was base commander here.

Work on Booklet Begins

An editorial team from Windsor Publications, the firm preparing a new booklet about Belleville designed to attract industry and residents, will be in the city soon to begin gathering information for the project.

The crew will be working under the guidance of Richard Lumbers, past president of the Chamber of Commerce, the sponsors of the book, and will be gathering information about Belleville.

"Cost of publishing the book will be underwritten by advertising space purchased by members of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and business community," said George Thompson, president of the organization.

Local Youth Begins Year Visit to Finland

Finland, the land that gave the Western world the sauna bath, is the destination of Gareth Sansom, 16, of Belleville.

Gareth, a Grade 13 student at Moira Secondary School will be spending a year as international exchange students, part of a program sponsored by Belleville Rotary Club and the Isalmi Club in Finland.

Giving examples from the last exchange student, Taina Boman from Finland, Mr. McKay said the student was met at the airport by the host family.

"I'm really looking forward to this trip and the opportunity to learn about another culture," Gareth said in an interview Tuesday, shortly before he started his 25-hour trip to Finland.

Gareth must pay for his airfare to Finland but all his living expenses and a small allowance for incidentals will be provided by the home club.

He was chosen in a competition with other applicants applying for the exchange trip.

One reason he was interested in applying for the trip was the similarities between the two countries, he said.

"Finland has a climate similar to Canada and also has a two-culture population," he said. "The Swedish population in Finland is like the French-Canadian portion of this country's people," he said.

For the first three months in Finland he will be the houseguest of Taina Boman, the 16-year-old student who lived in Belleville for the past year as part of the program.

He will be living with Miss Boman and her family in Kuopio where her father is the mayor of the city. Located on Lake Kallavesi in south-central Finland the city of 45,000 people was founded in the mid-17th century.

Homes Ready for Most Venezuelan Students

By ROBIN CHASE

Staff Reporter

Volunteer Belleville families who will act as hosts to 22 Venezuelan post-secondary students taking English courses at Loyalist College this coming year have been sincere in their offers, says Art McFarlane, Loyalist director of student services.

The students will arrive next Wednesday for a nine-month stay to learn the English language before going on to technological studies — part of a five-year plan by the Venezuelan government to have its future business leaders educated in other countries at less cost than at home.

Venezuela will pay the entire costs for education, accommodation and recreation while the students are here with no additional onus on Ontario taxpayers.

Mr. McFarlane said there have not been any families who have volunteered solely to jump on the bandwagon.

"I think we've been pretty lucky that way," he commented. "These people have given it some thought before they phoned in."

"We've been encouraged by the public response," he remarked. "It's been excellent."

Mr. McFarlane said the college has received about as many offers as there are students but we'd be glad to have a few more names on our list just to be on the safe side."

He said accommodation will be demanding on both sides. "They (students) have to make an adjustment and the host families have to make adjustments, too."

The student services division "will handle every aspect of their lives here outside of the academic," Mr. McFarlane noted. "We're planning on-campus activities in the afternoons for them after classes."

In addition, during odd evenings and on weekends, the students will visit such cultural centres as Ottawa and Toronto and become acquainted with the historical and natural facets of Hastings and Prince Edward counties, he said.

Mr. McFarlane explained the historical portion will be "an informal sort of educational exposure — filling in the background."

"We're planning a semi-official schedule for the first 10 days or so," he said. Then college officials will gauge the students' interests and plan a long-term schedule.

Students Begin Annual Hunt for Living Quarters

Prospective community college students desiring September accommodation in modern, self-contained units or in converted buildings should begin seeking such arrangements now, advises Art McFarlane, director of student services at Loyalist.

"Your have to look for them very early," he said Tuesday.

Mr. McFarlane explained most students wish to live on their own and prefer such independant apartments which are at a premium in the Belleville area.

"We tell the students to rely on word of mouth and newspaper ads for self-contained units," he noted.

Room-and-board is the most easily obtainable accommodation and the college has a list for students to investigate, Mr. McFarlane said.

Students usually seeking "ideal" accommodation find apartment rents "beyond their reach so they have to compromise," he remarked.

Mr. McFarlane pointed out a problem with most room-and-board locations is that they "are off the beaten trail." Consequently, the college welcomes more offers from landlords, he added.

He commented that Belleville and area landlords have always been willing to provide accommodation for college students. "The general response from the public over the last eight years has been encouraging."

Uranium Gas Plant Proposed

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — The federal government's Eldorado Nuclear Ltd. is evaluating several Ontario sites for the possible processing of uranium into a gas compound for export to Europe and the United States, company officials said Tuesday.

In a copyright story, The Star quotes Frank Hueston, the company's manager of capital projects at Port Hope, Ont., as saying it is studying sites between Sarnia and Sault Ste. Marie after being directed by the company to make a feasibility study.

George Boyce, general manager of marketing in Ottawa, said the new plant might cost $50 million and employ 100 persons.

The company is studying the feasibility of expanding its production of uranium hexafluoride gas from partially refined uranium oxide in a process similar to that used at its Port Hope plant. The product is used in the enriching of uranium for some nuclear reactors.

Marchand Will Take Issue to Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Jean Marchand says he will take the explosive issue of bilingual air traffic control to the cabinet for a decision by late September—before a threatened pilots' walkout on Oct.17.

The bilingual traffic control program in Quebec is now a national problem, Mr. Marchand said in a telephone interview from his Quebec City home Tuesday. He said he hopes to meet with airline pilots' representatives to discuss the 24-hour work stoppage they have planned if the bilingual experiment is continued.

The pilots' ultimatum "is their right," he said. "They are concerned and I understand why they are concerned."

The Canadian Airline Pilots Association said in a Vancouver announcement last week that pilots would halt operations Oct. 17 if the bilingual experiment at five Quebec airports is not stopped.

Mr. Marchand announced the bilingualism experiment in June, 1974, after pressure from some Quebec controllers and pilots who wanted French as a language of aviation in the province.

Mr. Marchand agreed that bilingualism should not be introduced in traffic control at Montreal because of the heavy international traffic. English is the language used in most countries for international flights. Local languages is used for domestic operations with English available on request.

Transport department officials stressed last week that no decisions have yet been made. But they said no accidents had been reported because of the bilingualism program and complaints of a recent incident at Quebec City are being investigated. Safety is their main concern, they say.

Mr. Marchand has said "if the pilots tell me it is dangerous, they will have to prove in what circumstances there was a danger to the security of crews and passengers."

The pilots have complained that a safety problem exists when more than one language is spoken on radio frequencies.

Police Protest Commutations

WINDSOR, ONT. (CP)—The Police Association of Ontario (PAO) has demanded an end to the commutation of death sentences by the federal cabinet and may demonstrate on Parliament Hill to support its stand.

About 200 delegates to the group's annual convention unanimously passed the resolution, which also demanded tougher parole procedures. Today, they will vote on a motion to hold a demonstration on Parliament Hill Oct. 31, when the cabinet is expected to decide whether to commute the death penalty of convicted police killer Rene Vaillaincourt.

Larry Langlois, president of the Windsor Police Association, was among delegates who spoke against cabinet leniency on capital punishment.

"We should not have political intervention of the judicial system and that's what you have every time the cabinet commutes a death sentence."

Ron Sexton, Detroit Police Association president, complained of similar problems in the United States and was accorded thunderous applause when he said: "If we can't get justice through the legal process we may have to get it in the streets."

On parole, the PAO recommended that first offenders be denied parole until at least half their sentence is completed, repeaters be denied parole completely and those on parole be more strictly supervised. It also suggested creation of a "specialized service" to ensure that all paroled persons have work waiting for them upon release.

Meanwhile, the policemen will seek ways of enforcing motor vehicle convictions and improving promotional systems within individual forces.

Currently, $6.5 million in outstanding traffic fines is in Ontario.

School Teacher Fired For Endurance Tests

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state education commissioner has refused to reinstate a New York City teacher who allegedly induced a teen-age boy to carry him up 13 flights of stairs in an endurance test.

Commissioner Ewald Nyquist on Monday dismissed the appeal of Edward Grube, who was fired last year as a French teacher after being charged in 1972 with conduct unbecoming a teacher.

Six boys testified that Grube paid them nominal sums to demonstrate their endurance in sessions held behind locked doors and drawn shades, the state education department said.

"In one instance petitioner (Grube) had a 14-year-old student carry him up 13 flights of stairs," Nyquist said. "Although other incidents are not as extreme, all showed a reckless disregard of the potential hazard to the children's health."

Wintario Seller Can Read Tickets

TORONTO (CP) — A Wintario lottery ticket distributor says he has discovered an ingenious way to go after prizes that Ontario Lottery Corp. officials admit is legal and, for the moment, unstoppable.

Robert Good-Day of Toronto, who sells carpeting and tile and distributes lottery tickets from a west-end store, says he can find out what tickets are in the sealed packages distributors receive without breaking the seal.

After a draw, a distributor can open the envelopes to see if he has any of the winning tickets. However, he cannot return the tickets and get his money back if the seals have been broken.

However, by matching printing on the envelopes and opening one envelope, Mr. Good-Day is able to predict the contents of others in his possession.

Mr. Good-Day, who says he has not used his system to win any money, demonstrated his method about a month ago to Wintario officials. On Tuesday, he showed officials that they have not cleared up the problem by demonstrating his technique on a new batch of tickets.

He had bought 30 envelopes containing 150 tickets for the next draw, and was able to predict the ticket numbers in eight of the envelopes.

Robert Johnson, marketing manager for British American Bank Note Co., which produces the tickets, watched in dismay

Mr. Johnson said that after Mr. Good-Day's previous demonstration his company had tried to defeat the system by recalling all the tickets and shaking them by hand in mailbags.

He said after the next draw, Mr. Good-Day's system really should be defeated because each series of tickets will be split mechanically.

USING YOUR FREEZER ECONOMICALLY

Here are some hints for the constantly increasing number of home freezer owners.

Place the freezer in a cool, dry place with air circulation.

Carefully observe instructions for the make and model you use.

Budget freezer space to allow storage of a variety of foods, available throughout the year.

Use an orderly arrangement. You'll save space, find foods faster, and conserve the cold.

Label, date and rotate all packages. Keep an updated inventory.

Remember that empty space is wasteful, and the faster the food turnover the greater the economy.

Defrost and clean regularly.

Research Head

Antony George Fisher, former owner of a $51-million chicken farming company, is the acting director of the Vancouver-based Fraser Institute, an economic research organization. The Fraser Institute has been accused of trying to provide a rallying point for the forces of private enterprise in British Columbia. (CP Photo)

DAVID FROST INTRODUCES TRINIDAD AND TOBAGO

The islands of Trinidad and Tobago are not quite as well known to tourists as other Caribbean islands. In this book a vatiety of authors have each contributed a section on some aspect of life on these two islands. For instance, Michael Anthony writes about the people of a village in Trinidad. Wenda Parkinson tells why she decided to make Tobago her home. There is a chapter on the carnival (Mardi Gras), one on architecture, natural history, and so on.

SMOTH'S MOSCOW — by Desmond Smith

This is one of the few guidebooks to Moscow available in recent years. The author worked in Russia for the American Broadcasting Company and has written a comprehensive work. The book is a practical guide, starting with how to get a visa and giving detailed information on hotels, restaurants, walks to take, transportation, emergencies. There is even a list of useful telephone numbers.

MY ORPHANS OF THE Wild — by Rosemary Collett

Mr. and Mrs. Collett have a home in Florida with an acre of land. Mrs. Collett spends most of her time caring for injured or orphaned wild creatures. In the book she writes of her bird and animal babies and goes into considerable detail as to the methods she uses, the food they require, medicines, and how to build cages. A useful book and an interesting one.

HEAD NURSE — by Barbara. Villet

Based on months of research, Head Nurse takes the reader into the lives of nurses, doctors and patients in a typical overloaded, understaffed metropolitan hospital. It is also the account of one woman's struggle to keep medicine humane in circumstances which tend toward the opposite.

FLY PAST — by Arthur Gould Lee

Air Vice-Marshal Lee says he has put down "some of the chapters of my cloudscape fly past". It is a narrative of serious and light-hearted episodes of flying in wartime and peacetime. These range from training days on Maurice Farman Shorthorns, through air fighting in Sopwith Pups and Camels and on to years of diversified aviation in Turkey, Greece, Persia and North Africa and Yugoslavia. This far from typical service career could not be duplicated today.

THE LAST TESTAMENT OF LUCKY LUCIANO — by Martin A Gosch and Richard Hammer

Charles "Lucky" Luciano was born in Sicily and emigrated to the United States in 1906. By the time he was 20 he had recruited partners Costello, Lansky and Siegel and was involved in the rackets. Together they transformed the underworld from small "family" businesses to a smooth-running, fabulously profitable criminal empire. Finally, exiled by the U.S. Government and excluded from the rackets by his partners, he decided to dictate his real life story, holding nothing back. The Last Testament is the result.

Sun Used To Heat Pools

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Development of solar energy is being experimented with by a company here.

The manufacturers of plastic pipe fittings, Canplas Industries Ltd., are experimenting with solar collectors as supplemental heating systems for swimming pools.

The research into solar energy has the enthusiastic backing of R. A. Skaer, its vice-president and general manager.

The experiments are taking place on the roof of a home.

The collector consists of two walled, insulated plastic panels about five-eighths of an inch thick. The pool's filter pump moves the water through piping to panels. Heated by solar radiation, the water then returns to the pool by gravity.

The flow of water can be regulated from the pump. Thermometers installed at the outlet and inlet will measure water. A company designer is working on finding out how many panels are neded for a specific pool size.

"The collector should be able to hold the temperature. "It will be capable of picking up at least two degrees per day, which is the normal heat loss during the night."

He said the company is also investigating using a plastic sack, similar to an air mattress, as a roof top collector.

"We are attempting to develop an inexpensive pool heating unit which could be marketed as a do-it-yourself assembly kit," Mr. Ellis said.

No such Canadian product exists, he said. But some American models, best suited to the United States climate, are sold here, he said.

HER WAY OUT

LEEDS, England (CP) — Jean Deighton, 27, was so appalled by her damp, rat-infested home she set fire to it, causing $4,625 damage. So the council re-housed her and her three children—next to a fire station. She received a suspended sentence of six months and a day for arson.

Economic Research Institute Set Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Antony George Fisher—educated at Eton and Cambridge, former owner of a $51-million chicken farming company, and founder of the Institute of Economic Analysis (IEA) in the United Kingdom—doesn't care about the rumors surrounding his newest project, the Fraser Institute.

"I've lived with rumors," said Mr. Fisher, acting director of the Vancouver-based institute.

Members of the institute, an economic research organization established in February, readily say it is biased toward the private enterprise economic system, but they dispute rumors saying its purpose is to provide a rallying point for the forces of private enterprise in British Columbia, attempting to oust the NDP from power.

"The institute is not concerned with who puts policy into effect because then we'd be political," Mr. Fisher said in an interview.

"I can point to documents over a 200-year period that have had an tconomic effect. Adam Smith (the Scottish economist) had an effect, and he wasn't a politician, he was a thinker."

And it is the role of the thinker that Mr. Fisher visualizes for the institute.

"I'm a pusinessman hoping to produce intelligent, reasoned research," said Mr. Fisher.

For its credibility, the institute is leaning htavily on academics, both on the advisory board and as freelance researchers. It has an impressive, if somewhat politically one-sided, list of founding members, as well.

Among the founders is Vancouver lawyer Alan Campney, a former president of the Vancouver Board of Trade, a non-politically aligned organization solidly in the private enterprise camp.

J. Anthony Boeckh, an economist, and F. William Fitzpatrick, a mining executive, both described as strong private enterprise supporters, also are founders.

Mr. Fisher acknowledged the bias, but said he hopes the quality of the institute's research eventually will establish its public reputation.

"We found in England (with the IEA) there were people who disagreed with the institute but they had to admit the argument was very good, and therefore they began to respect it."

However, Mr. Fisher's push for cross-political respectability wasn't helped by the Institute's first selection for in-depth study—provincial rent controls.

David Walker, a former consultant to the federal finance department, and now one of the institute's six employees, said:

"I realize what the dangers are in picking rent controls, no question about it. The people who want to brand the institute as the lackeys of the capitalist dogs or whatever will have their suspicions confirmed."

"(But) the fact is it's (rent controls) an outrageous example of interference with the market."

Mr. Fisher has not revealed the funding sources for the institute, but he said that one of the patrons is MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., which has contributed close to $40,000, of a projected annual budget of $500,000.

Mr. Fisher said he has not personally helped finance the institution and does not collect a salary, but his expenses are covered.

Bancroft Pyramid Greenhouse Seen Key to Feeding World

BANCROFT, Ont. (CP) — If Les Brown is right, pyramid-shaped greenhouses may become the solution to the world food crisis.

Mr. Brown says he believes a three-floor pyramid-shaped greenhouse on his 100-acre farm 16 miles northeast of here, will cause a revolution in vegetable growing.

He predicted the greenhouse will yield 36 times the crop a farmer can grow on a similar 50-foot-square piece of open land.

Mr. Brown's belief arises from a theory called "pyramid energy" which holds that the pyramid shape has a magnetic force which can accomplish such unique things as mummifying food and improving the taste of wine. Another claim of the theory is that plants kept under a pyramid grow larger and are tastier.

After completion of his 30-foot high pyramid, with its plastic covering and seedlings inside, he will start building a 64-foot high, 100-foot-square one to be finished before winter.

Mr. Brown said he believes his crop can be produced for half the cost as the multiplication of floors allows for more growing room, but wages are kept the same, keeping food costs down. Also he sees another advantage in a year-round growing season which he hopes will allow him to harvest six crops a year.

Mr. Brown envisages a half-million-dollar complex with 40 pyramid greenhouses using windmills for water in five years, but he admits it's an ambitious plan.

Mr. Brown, who retired last October from the interior decoration and design field, said he has been a gardener since he was a boy and had "a lifelong wish to get back to the land."

"But when I realized how much trouble the farmers had making a living, depending on the weather conditions and what not, I decided to cover the whole acreage in glass—make it a greenhouse in other words."

Mr. Brown said the pyramid makes a better greenhouse because the sloping walls let light into every area of the multi-storey structure and it takes less heat as the space is smaller than the common rectangle shape.

True to the pyramidology theory, Mr. Brown's pyramid greenhouse has the same proportions as the Great Cheops pyramid in Egypt and is aligned to the magnetic north pole. He said it took painstaking work to get the structure exact, but the experience will make building the next one much easier.

Mr. Brown said practicality is called for in selecting the crops to be grown and vegetables with high nutritional value will be planted. For the first crop, he plans to stake tomatoes in the centre of the floor with the lower leaves removed. This will allow him to plant lettuce between the tomato plants, and near the edges, where space is tight, he can plant radishes and beets.

The first pyramid will be heated by a wood-burning furnace with a water jacket and two immersion heaters. For the future, Mr. Brown is researching solar energy as a source of heat for his pyramid farm.

Mr. Brown foresees reaping the fruits of his first crop by February and is enthusiastic about growing the vegetables without fertilizer.

He also said herbicides and pesticides will not be needed as the greenhouse will not allow insects in and the absence of dust will mean a clean plant that can breathe.

Mr. Brown's main concern still lies with productivity: "If you can even grow 10 times the food in pyramid greenhouses, you can multiply the world's population by 10 and feed it at the same level."

Lightning Hits More People

OTTAWA (CP) — Lightning is not becoming more intense, but many more people are getting in its way, says an Ottawa researcher.

Dr. Frank Creed, principal research officer with the National Research Council's section, has been working on lightning research for the last 30 years and says it should be treated "with the very greatest of respect."

"Lightning can do little or no harm if it hits uninhabited areas," he said in an interview. "Maybe it will knock down a few trees or scorch some grass, but that's about all. But when it hits communities, people start becoming affected."

Last year 15 people died in Canada from lightning, up from five in 1973. In the United States about 150 people were killed by lightning last year and $100-million damage caused by thunder bolts.

Lightning comes in many forms, including forked, heat, ribbon, bead and streak lightning.

The core of a strip of lightning is as small as a half-inch in diameter, though its field of discharge can be as wide as 20 to 30 feet.

Its speed varies from 100 to 1,000 miles a second and it carries thousands of volts. Some lightning, called "positive giant" strikes, which occur every million or so flashes, are as hot as 30,000 degrees Celsius, more than five times hotter than the surface of the sun.

In the face of all this destructive power, where are you safe? Well, said Dr. Creed, if your house is protected by lightning rods or lightning arresters, it's pretty safe, but the best place of all to be is inside your car.

The metal body of the car screens the occupant from electrical effects. Likewise, is safe inside but leaning on the outside may be fatal.

There are several areas it is wise to avoid. Stay away from water because it is an excellent electrical conductor and one of the most treacherous places to be when a storm hits.

Isolated tall trees are also bad news during a thunderstorm. Try to stay indoors and away from electrical wiring, metal pipes, sinks, fireplaces and plug-in appliances. Sit in the middle of the room.

Don't use the telephone during a storm because lightning often strikes telephone poles.

Old wives' tales about pregnant women, sleeping people, innocent babies and old women being immune to lightning are pure fantasy.

However, one piece of folklore is true, namely that you can find how far from danger you are by counting the seconds between a flash of lightning and a clap of thunder.

"They occur at essentially the same time but light travels faster than sound. So if you see a lightning flash and don't hear the thunder for about five seconds, you can figure the storm's about a mile away, working on the principle of sound travelling a thousand feet a second," Dr. Creed said.

Students Get Paid For Testing Water

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of nine University of Ottawa engineering students have been travelling up and down a 20-mile stretch of the Rideau River this summer taking samples of river water.

Purpose of the project, financed in part by a $12,000 Ontario government grant, is to get an integrated "picture" of water in the section of the river from Kars to Mooney's Bay, just south of the capital.

The data on river quality—the amount of sediment, nutrients, bacteria and oxygen in the water, plus temperature and flow—are used to verify a mathematical model of the river. The model was developed by Dr. Kazimirz Adamowski and Dr. Andrew Middleton of the university's civil engineering department.

Using the model, it is possible to hypothesize what will happen to the quality of river water when new factors become involved, Dr. Adamowski, a hydrologist, said in an interview.

The advantage of a mathematical model is that it can be used to predict what will happen in the river below the point where a new development is located, he said. Dr. Middleton, a sanitary engineer, said the model can have a general application.

"Upstream from Ottawa, let's say a city of 50,000 population is planned," he said. In response to a planner's request, a study could be made of the estimated runoff—storm sewage and sanitary sewage—from the new community. The model could predict what will happen to water quality if the sewage were partially or almost completely treated.

"We would be trying to solve the problem on paper before funds are committed," Dr. Middleton said.

"After two weeks of learning the techniques of testing in the university laboratory, the students divide their time between

Racist Views Quietened, Wallace Seeks Presidency

WASHINGTON (CP — It was an unusually cold January afternoon in Montgomery, Ala., when the state's newly-elected governor climbed the state Capitol steps to deliver an inaugural address that would make him a household name in America.

The temperature had dropped to 22 degrees but George Corley Wallace, in top hat and overcoat, quickly warmed to his theme.

"In the name of the greatest people who ever trod this earth," he shouted, "I draw the line in the dust and toss the gauntlet before the feet of tyranny . . . and I say . . . tomorrow, segregation forever."

But that was 1963, a long time ago in politics. Both Alabama and George Wallace have changed. Desegregation, on the surface at least, is a fact in the state and Wallace is less strident about his racist views. Now in his third term as governor, the crippled political veteran is one of the leaders in a pack of Democratic hopefuls hunting for the party's 1976 presidential nomination.

The pundits are virtually unanimous in predicting 55-year-old Wallace will not get the nomination even though he has already raised well over $1 million in campaign funds, more than any other contender has managed so far.

But nobody is ruling him out as a serious candidate and Senator Henry Jackson, a Democrat from Washington, possibly the front-runner, says he considers the Alabama governor his main threat.

Wallace has proven his strength in the past, carrying five states as a third-party candidate in the 1968 presidential elections and running strong in the primaries of 1972 until he was gunned down by a would-be assassin at a packed political rally in Laurel, Md.

The shooting left him permanently paralysed from the waist down, in constant pain and restricted to moving about only when he is strapped into a glittering blue, chrome-plated wheelchair.

Bu to those who contend it would be a national disaster if Wallace ever became president because his health is so precarious, the boisterous, cigar-smoking governor replies: "Just 'cause a feller can't walk, don't mean a feller can't run, now does it?"

When the real battle for the nomination opens with the New Hampshire primary next March—the first of 30—both Wallace and Jackson will be fighting for the support of much the same constituency:

The basically-conservative voters, the wage earners worried about inflation and about keeping their jobs, middle-class parents worried about rising crime rates and deteriorating educational standards and right-wingers who fear detente with Russia is a threat to U.S. national security.

Jackson, 62, lacks Wallace's fire-and-brimstone appeal in his public speeches but he has been campaigning almost non-stop since 1972, going for a prize he believes will be denied him because of his age unless he snatches it this time.

Nicknamed Scoop by his sister, Gertrude, because she thought he resembled an aggressive comic strip cub reporter of that name, Jackson has gained tremendous public exposure from his successful congressional fight to tie trade concessions to Russia with freer Jewish emigration from the Soviet state.

He has also been a constant critic of President Ford's energy policies and detente, as well as a staunch supporter of stronger law-and-order measures.

Jackson also lacks Wallace's image of a winner. He still has to overcome memories of the 1972 primaries when he finished third in Florida, fifth in Wisconsin and a weak third in Ohio.

His candidacy, unlike that of Wallace, came as no surprise to anybody.

But close associates of the Alabama governor say that in the year or so after he was shot, they seriously doubted he would stay in politics. He used to lock himself, they relate, in a shuttered, darkened study for hours at a time, talking to nobody and staring into space.

Then suddenly, in mid-summer, 1973, Wallace decided he'd run again for the presidency and his old high spirits returned. Says Oscar Harper, one of Wallace's oldest and fiestiest friends:

"I don't recollect exactly when it was . . . but I was over there (at the governor's mansion) one day and he was lower than a well-digger's butt, chewin' on his bottom lip and starin' at the wall like he didn't have a friend in the world.

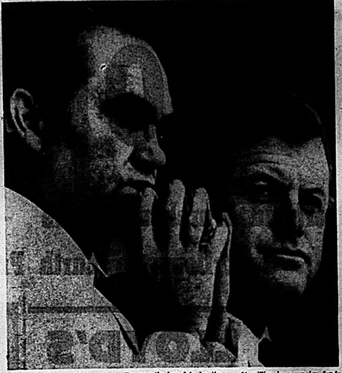
"And then the very next day I went back to the mansion and there he was, sittin' up straight and tall in that wheelchair like it was some kinda goddamn throne."

Those who know Wallace well say his racist views are more muted now but probably just as strong as in the days in 1963 when he stood in a schoolhouse door in Montgomery, defying U.S. marshals trying to enforce desegregation.

Jackson, more noted for his liberalism on race issues and for his humanitarian approach to most problems, makes bias a constant theme of his relatively-rare attacks on Wallace.

But the governor, usually accompanied in public appearances by his beautiful, raven-haired wife, Cornelia, 36, takes little notice of such references and concentrates instead on trying to dispel doubts about his health.

"I'm as good as I'm going to be," he says. "I'm paralysed and I want you to know that's a hell of a shape to be in. But it's not an impossible shape. I can do everything I did before. It just takes me longer, that's all."



Now in his third term as Alabama governor, crippled George Wallace is one of the leaders in the pack of Democratic hopefuls hunting for the party's 1976 presidential nomination. Wallace (left) has raised well over $1 million in campaign funds and is shown with another possible contender, Sen. Edward Kennedy. (CP Photo)

Motivation Main Barrier To Writing

FORT QU'APPELLE, Sask. (CP) — The biggest deterrent to people with writing talent is self-motivation, says one established Canadian writer.

Rudy Wiebe, guest writer at the Saskatchewan School of the Arts in Fort San, Sask., says writing courses put students in contact with published writers "so they can see that perfectly ordinary people can be writers . . . that it doesn't take some unusual type living in New York. . . ."

He said many young people have imagination and ability and can write.

"They're just not willing to work and discipline themselves the way an athlete could who wanted to be really good."

Constructive criticism from instructors is one source of encouragement, Mr. Wiebe said.

Describing his role at the school, he said an instructor is a kind of ideal reader "who tells the student frankly what's weak and good—like a football or hockey coach—who never does it himself, but says what should be done and tells them (the players) to practise it."

Young New Zealander Runs Mile in 3:49.4

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — John Walker runs in nobody's shadow anymore.

After two years of chasing Filbert Bayi, Walker put it all together in what he described as "a perfect race" and shattered one of sport's most revered records, running the mile in three minutes, 49.4 seconds at the Goteborg Games international track and field meet Tuesday night.

"I feel extremely happy—I still can't believe I've broken the record," said Walker, a 23-year-old New Zealander who burst on to the international track scene only two years ago.

"I didn't believe I had a chance. I've been thinking it over and over the last few days—how to run, how to beat it (the record). Now I feel I couldn't have run a more perfect race."

Running under ideal conditions, Walker took the lead on the third lap and sped away from the field to become the first man in history to break 3:50 for the mile. He shaved 1.6 seconds off the world record of 3:51.0, set by Bayi in Kingston, Jamaica May 17. The record came before a crowd estimated at 9,000 at Slottskogsvallen Stadium.

Walker, the only truly top-flight miler in the field, finished nearly six seconds ahead of Ken Hall of Australia, who was clocked in 3:55.2. Graeme Crouch of Australia placed third in 3:56.4. Paul Craig of Toronto was sixth.

Walker credited Swedish runner Goran Savemark with helping to set up the record run. "He kept exactly the speed I wanted the first 800 metres".

Walker was timed in 56.3 seconds for 440 yards and 1:55.5 for 880 as he bided his time behind Savemark. He surged to the front in the third lap, followed by Hall and Crouch, and increased his lead steadily. On the fourth lap he let it all out.

It has taken some 83 years for the record for the mile to be lowered by just 30 seconds—from 4:19.4 by Walter George of Great Britain, June 3, 1882, to 3:49.4 by Walker.

And it has been more than 21 years since the four-minute barrier was broken by Roger Bannister, whose 3:59.4 run on May 6, 1954 captured the imagination of sports fans like few achievements before or since.

Since Bannister, the mile record has been broken 10 times by eight runners: John Landy, Derek Ibbotson, Herb Elliott, Peter Snell, Snell again, Michel Jazy, Jim Ryun, Ryun again, Bayi and now Walker.

Trade Works Wonders

Murcer Some Giant

MONTREAL (CP) — Bobby Murcer's showing this season in San Francisco Giants' colors is perhaps baseball's best evidence that a change really is as good as a rest.

Murcer suffered a statistical tailing-off in 1974 with New York Yankees of the American League, batting .274 and hitting 10 home runs, before being dispatched to the Giants in an off-season trade for Bobby Bonds.

He entered the Giants' game against Montreal Expos Tuesday night with a .311 average and 11 homers and came out of it with a two-for-five performance and a game-winning double as the Giants took a 5-2 decision in 11 innings.

In the process, he won confrontations with pitchers Woodie Fryman and Fred Scherman, two old foes from his New York days.

"Scherman and Fryman both have beat me a lot," Murcer said.

BOBBY MURCER

Murcer worked Fryman for a walk that set up a game-tying single by Gary Matthews in the ninth inning and then rapped Scherman for a two-run double in the 11th.

Gary Thomasson doubled off loser Dale Murray, and Derrel Thomas greeted Scherman with a single before Murcer connected with a fast ball down and away.

Matthews then walked before Willie Montanez drilled a double that drove in the final run.

The Expos were blanked after taking a 2-0 lead in the first on Larry Parrish's bases-loaded single.

Mike Caldwell, the Giants' fifth pitcher, piked up the win, his sixth in 18 decisions this year. He threw the final two innings and survived a two-out, bases-loaded Expos threat in the 10th.

Belloir Firsts Sink Slumping Bucs 3-2

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Belloir family stayed home Tuesday night—all except young Rob Belloir.

He showed up at Atlanta Stadium to play shortstop for the Braves—his fifth National League baseball game—and collected his first extra-base hit and first runs batted in with a tie-breaking two-out two-run double in the seventh inning that enabled the Braves to defeat the slumping Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2.

The native Atlantan's clutch blow off Bruce Kison, his second hit of the game and third of his big league career, followed an intentional walk to Ralph Garr and gave the Braves a 3-1 lead.

The loss was the 10th in the last 14 games for the Pirates but they remained three games ahead of Philadelphia in the National League's East Division when Los Angeles Dodgers edged the Phillies 7-6 on Steve Yeager's three-run homer in the 10th inning.

Elsewhere, St. Louis Cardinals climbed to within 5½ games of the top with a 5-4 victory over Houston Astros, New York Mets are 6½ games back after trouncing San Diego Padres 9-4, Cincinnati Reds outslugged Chicago Cubs 12-8 and San Francisco Giants downed Montreal Expos 5-2 in 11 innings.

Kison had retired 11 Atlanta batters in a row when Biff Pocoroba hit a one-out double in the seventh. With two away, Pittsburgh manager Danny Murtaugh ordered an intentional pass to Garr, setting the stage for Belloir's double to left-centre.

In the Dodgers game, Jimmy Wynn opened the Los Angeles 10th with a single off Gene Garber, who had allowed only one hit and struck out six since coming on in the sixth. Steve Garvey sacrificed and, after an intentional walk to Ron Cey, Yeager, who singled a run home in the Dodgers' three-run first, walloped his seventh home run of the season. Philadelphia's Jay Johnstone hit a two-run homer off Mike Marshall in the bottom of the 10th.

Ted Simmons hit a two-run homer, Lou Brock delivered a two-run single and rookie John Denny singled home what turned out to be the winning run while notching his seventh pitching triumph as St. Louis beat Houston.

Tom Seaver became the NL's second 16-game winner and Ed Kranepool ignited a four-run rally in the third inning with a run-scoring double to give the Mets their win over San Diego.

Canadians Defeated

HAMILTON (CP) — The Yugoslavian national basketball team came from behind in overtime Tuesday night to score an 87-81 win over Canada's national team in an Intercontinental Cup match.

A crowd of 3,200 watched the Canadians, who trailed for most of the game, pull even on a 14-foot jump shot by Phil Tollestrup of Raymond, Alta., with 15 seconds left in regulation time. Tollestrup later had a chance to win the game but his 20-footer at the final buzzer missed the basket.

The Canadians, fresh from a win over Greece in Halifax, scored the first points in overtime on a foul shot by Jamie Russell of Burlington, Ont.

Tigers Close But That's All

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The American League's Detroit Tigers, down so long they can't remember up, have not lost heart.

"They're playing hard," said Texas manager Frank Lucchesi. "They're playing like they're going down the stretch for a pennant. They're not going through the motions. They're hustling."

The Tigers lost their 17th consecutive game Tuesday night, bowing to the Rangers 4-3. Texas scored four times in the first inning and the Tigers spent the rest of the night trying to catch up.

They never made it but it wasn't from a lack of effort. While Detroit fans frantically waved pennants, cheered and chanted "Go, go, go," the Tigers ran full tilt on the base paths, desperatly chased down Ranger hits and played as if their lives depended on it, which, luckily, they didn't.

ROYALS WIN

Elsewhere in the American League, Kansas City beat Baltimore 4-2 in 10 innings, Boston whipped California 8-2, New York downed Oakland 7-2, Cleveland trimmed Chicago 6-3 and Milwaukee beat Minnesota 7-4.

The Tigers' latest loss brings them within three games of tying the American League record for futility and within seven of the major league mark. They did get on the scoreboard Tuesday night, however, snapping a 31-inning drought in the third inning when Aurelio Rodriguez tripled and came in on Tom Veryzer's single. Rodriguez leaped on the plate as the crowd cheered wildly.

Ron LeFlore and Dan Meyer drove in runs with sacrifice flies in the seventh for the other Detroit runs. Vern Ruhle, 9-9, survived Texas' four-run first inning to finish with a five-hitter. Toby Harrah's two-run double was the big blow for the Rangers in the rally.

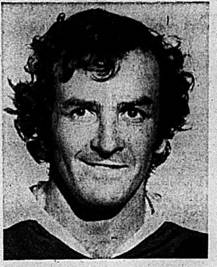
Amos Otis singled, his fourth hit of the night, stole second and scored on George Brett's two-out double in the 10th for Kansas City. Harmon Killebrew singled in an insurance run as the Royals closed to within 5½ games of first-place Oakland in the American League West.

Rick Wise, 16-6, won his ninth game in a row as Boston increased its lead in the American League East to seven games. Wise, who hasn't lost since June 22, tossed a seven-hitter in beating rookie Chuck Hockenberry, 0-2. Carlton Fisk had two singles and a double and drove in three runs for the Red Sox.

Doc Medich, 11-12, limited Oakland to six hits and Chris Chambliss collected a single, double and triple and drove in two runs for New York. Walt Williams hit a solo homer for the Yanks. Ken Holtzman, 14-11, took the loss.

George Hendrick drove in three runs for Cleveland, two of them with his 17th home run of the season. Fritz Peterson won his third consecutive to even his record at 7-7 and Wilbur Wood, 12-15, took the loss. Bill Stein doubled home two runs for the White Sox.

Milwaukee scored four times in the first inning to chase Jim Hughes, 10-10, and help Bill Travers, 5-7, win for the first time in six weeks. Robin Yount and Bill Sharp contributed doubles, and Hank Aaron and Jim Hegan had run-scoring singles in the Brewer first. Eric Soderholm homered for Minnesota.



Keon to Minnesota

Minnesota Fighting Saints of the World Hockey Association announced Tuesday the signing of Dave Keon who has played the last 15 seasons for Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League. The 35-year-old centre is reported to have signed a multi-year contract.

Bobby Orr Next On Want List

TORONTO (CP) — Minnesota Fighting Saints president Wayne Belisle said Tuesday that he is confident the World Hockey Association team will win the services of superstar defenceman Bobby Orr.

Both the Saints and Orr's present club, the National Hockey League's Boston Bruins, have been told by Orr's lawyer Alan Eagleson that it will take between $1.5 and $2 million in the bank to satisfy his demands for his client.

"I met with Eagleson last Monday to discuss Orr," Belisle said. "The talks are very sincere and I've got to believe they'll continue in that vein. After all, Eagleson and the Saints have a good relationship. Nine Eagleson clients are on this club."

Belisle said he will reopen talks with Eagleson via telephone on Thursday.

Players' Association Challenges Contract

TORONTO (CP) — A universal player contract as proposed by the newly-formed Canadian Major Junior Hockey League will be challenged by the National Hockey League Players Association, says its executive-director, Alan Eagleson.

The new league, which incorporates the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series, Quebec Major Junior Hockey League and Western Canada Hockey League, has set up stiff fees for pro clubs that wish to sign under-age juniors.

NHL and World Hockey ssociation teams would be assessed an $80,000 fee for signing an 18-year-old, $40,000 for a 19-year-old and $20,000 for a player of draft age.

"The NHLPA will challenge this," said Eagleson. "There's no way amateur hockey is going to govern professional hockey.

It's Familiar Script For Riders and Fans

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa fans may have thought they were watching an instant replay Tuesday night as Montreal Alouettes defeated the Rough Riders 34-31 on a field goal with no time remaining.

Last week, the Riders lost 16-14 to Toronto Argonauts as Zenon Andrusyshyn booted a 12-yard field goal with the clock run out.

Tuesday it was Don Sweet's turn to cap off a late fourth-quarter rally that saw Montreal come back from a 31-23 deficit for their second Eastern Football Conference win.

Halfback Larry Smith fought off several Ottawa defenders to take a pass from quarterback Sonny Wade for a touchdown from the five-yard line. Wade passed to tight end Peter Dalla Riva for a two-point conversion and a 31-31 tie with about two minutes to play.

The Alouettes then hemmed in the Riders and Dick Adams got off a short punt from the end zone, giving Montreal possession on the 16-yard line.

Three plays later Sweet sent his second field goal of the night arching through the uprights and the game was over.

The Alouettes' win was aided by a rare bad night for Sweet's opposite number with the Riders, Gerry Organ. Ottawa coach George Brancato, dismayed as most of the 31,688 fans in Lansdowne Park, repeated several times in the dressing room: "Gerry missed three field goals."

DON SWEET

They were all in the second quarter. One resulted in a safety when Ottawa halfback Art Green tackled cornerback Lewis Cook in the end zone.

And it was Cook, an Ottawa castoff, who contributed to the Riders' loss. He returned a kickoff 86 yards in the first quarter to set up Sweet's first field goal and moments later hauled in a Dick Adams punt, avoided several Riders, wheeled in behind Montreal blocking and sped 97 yards down the sideline for a touchdown.

Montreal's other majors were scored by fullback Steve Ferrughelli on a one-yard plunge and Dalla Riva on a diving catch of a 14-yard pass from Wade. Sweet added two converts.

Flanker Rhome Nixon scored two touchdowns for Ottawa, on a 32-yard pass from slotback Jim Foley on a rollout and a 39-yard pass from quarterback Condredge Holloway.

Green scampered through several Montreal defenders for a 47-yard major and fullback John Bledsoe cracked over from the one-yard line. Organ kicked a 47-yard field goal in the first quarter and converted three of the touchdowns.

RECORDS EVEN

The win lifted Montreal into a first-place tie with Ottawa in the EFC. Both teams have 2-2 won-lost records.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Toronto get a chance to end their second-place deadlock toni t when the Tabbies move into Toronto. Both teams are 1-2.

Ottawa gained 24 first downs and a total of 453 yards to the Alouettes 12 first downs and 229 yards.

Montreal's all-star Johnny Rodgers sat out the game because of continuing back problems while wide-receiver Joe Petty stayed on the sidelines after suffering a mild concussion in the third quarter.

Taylor Scores Victory

TORONTO (CP) — Art Taylor of Kitchener, Ont., picked up Canada's first victory Tuesday in the World Masters track meet with a win in the 10,000-metre cross-country.

Taylor, running in the 45-49 age category, edged Bob Jeanhester of Sweden.

Cross country and pentathlon events were held Tuesday. Today, competition begins in the shorter dash distances for the 1,400 athletes over the age of 40.

The Canadian Masters Association, organizers of the event, decided Monday to allow 13 South Africans and Rhodesians to participate. The Canadian government originally asked the group not to allow the South Africans and Rhodesians to compete, because of their countries' apartheid policies.

The decision by the association to allow the South Africans and Rhodesians to compete followed pressure from athletes who threatened to withdraw if the athletes were not admitted.

The federal government has now asked for the return a $32,000 grant it gave the association to run the meet. Of the $32,000, $24,000 has already been spent on meet equipment.

On Tuesday, World Masters Association representatives guaranteed Don Farquharson, president of the Canadian Masters Association, $8,000.

In addition, a South African businessman, Louis Light, has offered to underwrite the entire $32,000 if the government follows through and asks the association to return the grant money.

In Ottawa, an official of the federal health and welfare department, the source of the grant, said: "They (the association) will have to pay the money back. If they do refund it, the issue is closed."

Bomber Rookie Comes Through

CALGARY (CP) — A rookie placekicker appearing in his first Western Football Conference game and a pair of costly Calgary Stampeder penalties helped Winnipeg Blue Bombers post their first win Tuesday night since 1965 at McMahon Stadium.

Three long field goals by Bernie Ruoff, a native of Germany who grew up in Kitchener, Ont., and a late fourth-quarter touchdown drive kept alive by two key Calgary penalties enabled the Blue Bombers to eke out an 18-15 victory.

Ruoff disappointed the 27,187 Calgary partisans by hitting three-pointers from 58, 53 and 44 yards. He barely missed breaking the Canadian Football League record of 59 yards when his 62-yard attempt fell short.

Ralph Brock, a back-up quarterback who earned the starting assignment by directing a last-second win over Edmonton Eskimos last week, couldn't do a thing for three quarters.

But he came alive on the final scoring drive to give Winnipeg its third win in four outings and a share of first place with Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Brock, who completed only eight of 23 passes for 173 yards, threw passes of 42 yards to Richard Crump and 38 yards to Gord Paterson to move the Blue Bombers into scoring range.

But the drive appeared to be stalled when Brock was stopped at the Calgary 20. However, defensive lineman John Helton was called for roughing and Winnipeg had a first down at the Calgary 10.

Calgary's defence held and when Crump was stopped at the one-yard line on third down, it appeared the Stampeders would take over. But an offside penalty gave the Bombers a first down and Steve Beaird knifed over at 13:02 for the winning score.

Brock completed the scoring with a two-point convert pass to Bob Larose. Winnipeg's other point came when a Calagry punt was blocked and a Stampeder fell on the ball in the end zone to concede a single.

The Stampeders, in third place with a 2-2 record, took a 1-0 first-quarter lead on punter Gerry Kunyk's 71-yard single.

BURDEN SCORES

A 52-yard screen pass from quarterback Joe Pisarcik to Willie Burden, a swift halfback who picked up 130 yards on the ground, and Cyril McFall's convert gave the Stampeders an 8-0 edge midway through the second quarter.

Ruoff, who was cut by New England Patriots of the National Football League and grabbed a spot on the roster when Bob Macoritti suddenly retired to continue his education, kicked two field goals before the half ended.

Pisarcik hooked up with Tom Forzani for a 49-yard scoring pass in the third quarter that was converted by McFall.

Winnipeg lost three key players with injuries. Defensive back Paul Williams, defensive lineman Jim Duke and Tom Scott, whose 115-yard return of a missed field goal was nullifed because of a penalty, all left the game after being shaken up. Extent of their injuries was not known.

Calgary Upsets Thunder Bay 5-4

CALGARY (CP) — The underdog Calgary Centennial All-Stars edged Thunder Bay Centennials 5-4 Tuesday for their second win in two starts and the third-day lead in Canadian little league baseball championship play.

In another game Tuesday, Chateauguay, Que., joined the rest of the crowd in second place by overpowering Vancouver Dunbar 6-4.

Alberta, British Columbia, Quebec and Ontario remain tied in second place with one win each. B.C. is the only club to have lost two games.

Ranked as a strong defensive club with very little hitting power, the Centennials collected a clutch of hits to overcome a 4-0 Ontario lead after four hitless innings.

"Before this tournament started, a lot of people said we shouldn't even be here," said Calgary coach Jack Clark, "but we proved differently. We don't have power at the plate, but these kids played their hearts out to make up for it tonight."

Ontario got two runs in the third inning on an error and a fielders' choice play and two more in the fourth on hits by Barry Niemi and Jeff Beitz.

Calgary launched its rally in the fifth on a walked Bill Leesman with two men down. Shane Bower caught one in front of catcher Steve Dick, who threw wild to first, moving Leesman to third and Bower to second. Both runners scored after Brian Simpson hit a single to right field.

The next two batters were walked and pinch-hitter Doug Hughes sent a fly into left that was dropped, allowing two more runners to score.

In the top of the sixth, Norm Kneeshaw bunted a single down the first base line for Calgary, took second on a pass ball and scored the winning run on a double to right field by Bower.

The Chateauguay - Vancouver game had some unusual moments, including a time after five innings when the Quebec club led 3-2 without collecting a hit.

Vancouver opened scoring in the first frame with two runs on one hit, two stolen bases and a pair of passed balls. Chateauguay responded with three runs in their third, all set up by four walks.

In the top of the sixth however, the Quebec team finally put wood on the ball, sending 11 batters to the plate and scoring six runs.

Chiefs Dump Excelsiors 17-8

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Mississauga Chiefs defeated Bramalea Excelsiors 17-8 in an Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A semi-final playoff game Tuesday.

The victory evened the best-of-seven series at one game apiece, with the third scheduled for Friday night at Mississauga.

Dave Purgot led Mississauga with four goals, while John Campbell added three. Greg MacDonald, Rob Gemmell and Tom Dovaglev scored two goals each. Single goals were scored by George Chandler, Stu Aird, Kim Crossman and Graham Patterson.

Bob Burke topped the Bramalea scoring with three goals. Terry Mastine and Ken Webster scored two apiece and Ken Archdeakin had one.

Mississauga led 6-2 at the end of the first period and 15-5 at the end of the second.

Juniors Hang Tough in Race

The Quinte Fastball League featured a triple header at Alemite Park Tuesday night. The results made the tight race for playoff spots even tighter.

In the opening game, Devolin dumped Howard and Robert Printing 7-2. Then Jamie Hunter fired his second no-hitter of the season as Auger blanked Rorabeck 5-0 and Howard and Robert's loss combined with the Ellis Junior 12-1 upset of Bardon Supplies gave the Juniors a 24-point tie with the Printers for the fourth and final playoff berth.

Don Holoway was the winner in the opening contest as he gave up just two hits. He fanned seven and issued three free bases. Bob Richardson took the loss, walking five and striking out four.

Ralph Plane and Dave Horwood were tops for the Motormen with a pair of singles. Rick Wait added a triple.

Rick Graham and Rusty Garvin replied for Howard and Robert with a single apiece.

Hunter gave up just three walks and fanned three in earning his no-hit shutout. Wayne Casselman was the loser even though he gave up just five hits. He allowed four batters to reach base on free passes.

Joe Theriault extended his hitting streak to 14 consecutive games with a single in Auger's three run third inning. Hunter added a double to the cause.

Brooke Bond Takes Opener

Though the Belleville Indsutrial Softball League isn't noted for its tight defensive contest, it was defence that keyed Brooke Bond to a 3-2 victory over The Intelligencer Monday night. Actually it was The Intell's defensive mistakes that keyed Brook Bond's win in the opening game of their semi-final series.

Brooke Bond jumped off to a 3-0 lead after three innings, but two of their three tallies were unearned. The two-run third developed when a ball was overthrown to the right field fence on a putout to first base.

Tom St. Jules, the winning pitcher, was credited with both RBI's when he laid down a bunt and the ball was thrown away. St. Jules allowed three hits and struck out six.

Joey Edwards, with relief help from Ron Culloden, gave up just four hits in the loss. They walked three and fanned three.

Bob Pozo had a pair of singles for the winners and Lou Rivers and Al Colden added one each.

Forfeit Keeps BYBF in Front

Madoc Purinaettes have had an uphill battle all year trying to catch Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund in first place in the Belleville and District Ladies Softball League. Tuesday night, just when it appeared they had finally pulled even with the league leaders, after beating them 5-3, the Yardmen jumped right back in front.

With Tuesday's victory, the two clubs were tied with 37 points and each had two games left to play. However, this morning, it was announced that Lakeside Oxygen, the league's cellar-dwellars, had forfeited their final two games of the season. That gave Ellis Construction and the Yardmen an extra two points.

Now the BYBF squad is back in sole possession of first place with 39 points. They have one game remaining, tonight against Belleville Broadloom, and the Purinaettes have two — back to back games against Ellis.

Tuesday, the Madoc club was outhit 11-15, but bunched their safeties together to score four times in the second inning and put the game away.

Sandra Fleming was the winner, fanning three and Shirley Gulliver struck out three from the losers' mound.

Bonnie Jones keyed the winners' attack with a triple, a double and a single. Teammate Penny Graham had a double and a single and Joan and Jane Bailey each singled once.

Donna Preston had a double and a single for the Yardmen and Carol and Joyce MacFarlane singled three times apiece.

Open Set in Trenton

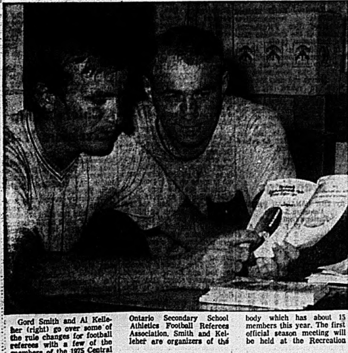
Kemptville and Belleville Ellis Junior will open a best of three Ontario Amateur Softball Association series Thursday but neither team will enjoy home team advantage.

Jim Tebworth, OASA executive member, said today the series will open in Trenton with the teams returning to Kemptville Friday for Game 2.

"We couldn't get a diamond in Belleville," said Tebworth, "so arrangements were made to take the series opener to Trenton's Bay Shore Park."

Game time Thursday in Trenton is 8:30 p.m.

The winner of the series will take the Eastern Ontario championship.



Gord Smith and Al Kelleher (right) go over some of the rule changes for football referees with a few of the members of the 1975 Central Ontario Secondary School Athletics Football Referees Association. Latta Putting It Together

It was a close season in the South Hastings Baseball League, but Latta, after coming on strong in the second half to wrap up their second consecutive league pennant, aren't having much problem in the playoffs.

The league's first place unit rolled to a 9-3 victory over [illegible] Tuesday night to take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five quarter-final. In two games now the Latta squad has outscored their opponents 25-4.

Dale Bamber went the distance on a four-hitter. He issued four free bases and struck out five. Mike Walsh was tagged for nine hits in the loss.

Ron Harrison had a double and a single for the winners and Bob Smith punched a pair of singles. Damen Richardson, Bamber and Rob Allison each doubled.

While offence, or generating one, seems to be a problem for the Read crew, their defence appears to be lacking even more. With their seven errors Tuesday, Read has counted 16 miscues in the series.

Justin Farrell and Bert Sherry doubled once each to top the losers at the plate

Ling Happy to Be with Macs

The Belleville McDonalds have had their problems in their first year of Ontario Fastball League (OFL) play, but one of the bright spots on the Macs horizon has been the play of Steve Ling.

Ling is not a superstar, nor does he feel he ever will be. He is a steady player who can be counted on for a hit a game and that's exactly the pace he's been setting almost all year.

The Macs regular right fielder, Ling just started playing in the outer reaches a year ago.

"Originally I was a second baseman — shortstop," he commented.

Last year he played shortstop for Domville, a Senior "A" team which played in the Ontario Championships.

Ling is presently batting about .250, a good average for the OFL.

Just like everyone else affiliated with the Belleville club he doesn't like to see the Macs losing so many games, but his attitude is still an optimistic one.

"Next year we'll be that much more experienced and should have more consistency in our batting," he commented.

"I think we owe it to the fans to produce a winner," he added.

Although he lives in Kingston, Steve played quite a bit of softball here in his earlier days.

In the Commercial League (now the Quinte Fastball League) he played for Rollins for two years. Before that for the Ellis Juniors. It was with these teams that he met and played with Dale Duval, Scott Reid, Paul Goodfellow, Wayne McTaggart and Ted Waite, all present Macs.

Two other Macs have been teammates of Ling's — Jim Chase and Pete Harrison. Two years ago in Cobourg, they were on the same club.

"We had a heck of a good team in Cobourg then. We went to the semi-finals in OASA Intermediate 'B' and almost went all the way," he said.

"I played with Ted Hoy also. He's a great guy and has held the team in Cardinal together for quite a while," Ling added.

Ling is only 25 years old and has plenty of softball left ahead of him. He's already got 10 years playing experience and right now is overjoyed to be playing in the "best" league.

STEVE LING

"The thing that impresses me the most is pitching, you just don't know what to expect. They know all of your weaknesses and all use the tricks of the trade."

Living in Kingston Ling has to drive 50 miles to play home games, not to mention returning from road trips at late hours.

"My wife, Marg, helps a lot. She comes on the road trips and she's a softball fan," Ling said.

"Next year I want Belleville to be a winning team, and I'm sure we will be if we put it all together. We must capitalize on other clubs mistakes instead of vice versa."

"Right now I just want to help the team finish well and keep hitting," he added.

Next year will be an important one for all of the Macs, and with Steve Ling's outlook you can be he'll play an important part in the success of the club.

Ingram In Lead

WOODSTOCK, Ont. — Betty Ingram of Belleville, fired an 81 Tuesday to take the lead after the first round of the Ontario senior womens' amateur golf championship at Craigowen Golf and Country Club.

Two Toronto golfers, Mary Marvin and Iris Quartermaine, were tied for second at three strokes off the pace.

Jean Cameron of London and Dorothy Lockwood of Toronto were five strokes back of the leader with identical scores of 86.

Minor Softball Roundup

Kinsmen Are Peewee Champs

Nosing past Richard Ellis Printing 11-9, Belleville Kinsmen Squirts captured the pennant in the Peewee division of the Belleville Minor Softball Association recently.

Allan Thompson was the winning pitcher, striking out 12 and walking four. Rusty Downey and Ken Pericak shared the losers' pitching.

Stephen Smith and Warren Cavalier each stroked two singles for Kinsmen who got a double each from David Phillips and Angelo Lentini. Downey was tops for the Printers, slamming a home run, triple and single. Stephen Burley and Russell Plummer each banged a homer.

In a Tyke playoff match, Todd Cook pitched AOCO past Richard Ellis Printing in a close one, 11-10. Cook fanned five while loser Jeff Shields struck out six.

Cook was also strong at the plate, hammering a homer and two singles for the winners. Jeff Plane supplied a homer while Kevin Newell checked in with a double and a single.

Mike Sampson slugged a homer and a single in defeat. Shields whacked a circuit blast and Paul St. Pierre was good for three singles.

In Squirt action, Ernie Tuck Appliances defeated William Belch 27-10 and Sidney Inn tripped Belleville Plaza 4-11.

The Appliances team got the league championship for its efforts, finishing the season with 10 straight wins and posting a 12-2 record. Winning pitcher Jody Millar struck out seven. Joey Teiszler and Scott Hannah each homered in the winning cause.

Loser was Larry Moon. Tim Lott, Chris Chapelle and Darren Steele looked after the bulk of the Belch hitting attack.

Four hits each by Allan Bunnett and David Wright, and three from Allan MacKenzie sparked the Sidney Inn offensive. Ron Gee sparked Plaza.

At the Bantam level, Randy Smith and Ray Ellis combined pitching talents to lead Red Shark past the SACO Peewees 14-5. Eight errors by his mates kept loser John Munkittrick in hot water.

Thurlow Peewees Win 9-5

The Thurlow Plane's Concrete Peewees kept their playoff hopes alive Tuesday night when they evened the best-of-three Eastern Ontario Baseball Association playoff series at 1-1. Thurlow defeated Port Hope 9-5.

Dale Forestell not only picked up the win, fanning seven Port Hope batters, he led his team at the plate with a pair of singles. Forestell scattered five singles in earning the win.

The deciding game of the match will be played Thursday, 6.30 p.m. in Port Hope.

Same Old Nastase—a Winner

Ilie Nastase

TORONTO (CP) — Ilie Nastase was his usual self Tuesday—complaining, joking and winning tennis matches.

The colorful Romanian had little difficulty defeating clay-court specialist Patrice Dominguez of France, 6-1, 6-4, to advance to the second round of the $130,000 Canadian Open tennis championships.

Before the match, Nastase complained to tournament officials that Dominguez was a tough player to face in the first round. During the match, Nastase was relatively well-behaved—joking about foot-faulting on his service and carrying on conversations with spectators, linesmen and the umpire.

Manuel Orantes of Spain, the No.3 seed in the tournament, beat Marcelo Lara of Mexico, 6-2, 6-4. The victory by Orantes comes on the heels of his Monday night consecutive-set win over Wimbledon champion Arthur Ashe at the United States clay-court championships.

In another men's singles match, Sweden's Bjorn Borg defeated David Brown of Toronto in 34 minutes with 6-0, 6-1 set victories. Borg, the tournament's No. 2 seed, needed a police escort to keep him from over-anxious fans—most of them female teen-agers.

Rod Laver of Australia, the No. 5 seed, beat Mexico's Joachin Loyo-Mayo, 6-3, 6-3 and No. 7 seed Harold Solomon of the U.S., beat Canada's No. 2 player, Rejean Genois of Quebec City, 6-0, 6-1.

Canadian men's champion Tony Bardsley of Vancouver lost to Paul Kronk of Australia, 6-4, 6-2, and Dale Power of Toronto was defeated by Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia, 6-3, 6-3.

In women's play, top-seeded Margaret Court of Australia downed Jane O'Hara of Toronto, 6-0, 6-2; Julie Heldman of the U.S., seeded second, defeated Flynis Coles of Britain, 6-3, 6-4; and No. 8 seed Diane Fromholtz of Australia beat Patty Hogan of the U.S., 6-2, 6-1.

Canadian women's champion Susan Stone of Vancouver was defeated by Donna Ganz of the U.S., and France's Gail Chanfreau upset No. 5 seed Janet Newberry of the U.S., 6-4, 6-2.

None of the nine Canadians entered in the tournament won first-round singles matches.

Canada's Pan American Swim Team Named

CALGARY (CP) — Graham Smith of Edmonton and Joann Baker of Thunder Bay, Ont., captured their second breaststroke medals of the 1975 Canadian swimming championships Monday night, winning easily over 200 metres about 48 hours after they set national records in 100-metre tests.

Both were named to the team which will represent Canada in the 1975 Pan-American Games at Mexico City in October.

Smith, who first said he would not join the team because of sore knees, won by almost five seconds over Dave Heinbach of Vancouver but did not threaten his own Canadian record for 200 metres. .

In a tougher contest, Baker nipped Marian Stuart of Montreal by less than one-half second with Melanie Mackay of Oakville, Ont., a fast-closing third in 2:44.55. Baker's winning time was 2:41.78.

Michael Ker of Vancouver, who refused a bid for a berth on the team, defended his men's 1,500-metre freestyle by edging team-mate Doug Martin in a close race.

In the longest women's race of the event, which concluded with selection of the Pan-Am team and a second team to go to the British championships in Smith of New Westminster, B.C., won the 800-metre freestyle.

She also withdrew from consideration for a spot on the Pan-Am team.

Steve Pickell of Vancouver and Nancy Garapick, 13, of Halifax, the world's second-best backstrokers, were the most prominent Canadian swimmers who chose not to go to Mexico.

Coach Nigel Kent, whose special project is to have Garapick ready for the Olympics, said he expects little competition for her in the backstroke in Mexico.

The women's Pan-Am team includes:

Gail Amundrud, 18, Vancouver; Baker, 14, Thunder Bay.; Lyne Chenard, 18, Laval, Que.; Leslie Cliff, 20, Vancouver; Cheryl Gibson, 16, Edmonton; Ann Jardin, 16, Montreal; Mitch Oliver, 18, Toronto; Jill Quirk, 20; Montreal; Wendy Quirk, 16, Montreal; Becky Smith, 16, Edmonton; Debbie Sojnocki, 15, Thunder Bay; Jan Stenhouse, 16, Surrey, B.C., and Marion Stuart, 20, Montreal.

The men's team:

Tom Alexander, 17, Thunder Bay; Blondal, 17, Montreal; Derek Calhro, 19, Edmonton; Rick Frame, 18, Oakville, Ont.; Dave Heinback, 16, Vancouver; Bruce Rogers, 18, Toronto; Bill Sawchuk, 16, Thunder Bay; Michael Scarth, 16, Edmonton; Dary Skilling, 15, Thunder Bay; Graham Smith, 17, Edmonton; Larry Steele, 20, Vancouver, and Mel Zajac, 20, Vancouver.

Women named to the British tour were:

Pre Olympics Deficit Held Below Estimate

MONTREAL (CP) — Despite rows of empty seats at some of this summer's pre-Olympic competitions, the organizing committee for the 1976 Summer Games expects to hold its deficit for the events to about $18,000.

With completion of the junior world rowing championships and the soccer events last weekend, International Competitions Montreal 1975—set up as a test for next year's Games—had drawn 173,000 spectators as it passed the half-way mark.

"We had budgeted for a deficit of around $40,000 for the events completed so far but the running deficit now is about $18,000," said Jean Lafleur, assistant to Simon St. Pierre, vice-president of the 1976 Games' committee.

The six-match international soccer series, which pitted the Canadian Olympic team against Poland, East Germany and Hungary, has been the biggest attraction of the 12 of 21 competitions completed so far, drawing 54,000 paying spectators and a profit of $20,000.

However, the eight-day international field hockey tournament was a bomb, winning a total attendance of 10,000 of which fewer than 50 per cent were paying customers and losing an estimated $8,000 to $10,000.

Other profit-makers were the three-day track and field meet which drew 13,000 spectators and had 80-per-cent paid attendance, and the three-day gymnastics competition. The gymnasts drew 20,000.

Other events such as the archery at Joliette, Que., equestrian jumping, and yachting at Kingston, Ont., carried no admission charge.

The Games organizing committee did not officially organize or finance the 1975 competitions—that is left to each sports federation. But the committee is co-ordinating the whole 21-event effort and has budgeted up to $3.5 million to cover deficits and provide services.

"But the way things look now, we probably won't have to pay out any more than about $2.5 million," Lafleur said. "We accepted to cover deficits in each sport, but it seems we'll be covering less than we thought."

Rhora in Form

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ken Rhora allowed only two hits and struck out seven batters to lead St. Catharines Mr. Jackets to a 7-0 victory over Oshawa Tonys in Ontario Fastball League action Tuesday.

In the only other game played, London Dukes edged Woodstock Warriors 2-1.

At Oshawa, Bill Gerg knocked in three St. Catharines runs, including one off a sacrifice fly to centre field in the sixth inning that broke a scoreless deadlock.

St. Catharines exploded for four more runs in the seventh inning and two in the ninth.

Oshawa pitcher Paul Wannamaker, relieved in the seventh inning by Wayne Colley, was tagged with the loss.

Art Paquette hit his sixth home run of the year—leading off the bottom of the 11th inning—to give the Dukes their victory over the visiting Woodstock club.

The home run broke up a pitching duel between London's Metro Szeryk and Woodstock's Bill Fidlin.

Szeryk had a no-hitter after nine innings, but allowed three hits and one run in the 10th. He struck out 21 batters and walked only one, improving his record to 8-8.

B. C. Marksman Captures Top Award

SOUTH MARCH, Ont. (CP) — Robert Pitcairn of Delta, B.C., scored 97 out of a possible 100 points Tuesday to win the City of Ottawa award for marksmanship at the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association (DCRA) meet.

Pitcairn scored 48 points in the first stage of the competition and 49 points in the second in a match calling for 10 rounds each at 200 and 900 yards. Under DCRA rules, a bull's eye counts five points and three outer rings are worth four, three and two points, respectively.

Fred Wallace of Toronto placed second with a total score of 96 points.

Two tie-breaking matches to decide winners of the Macdougall and Gibson marksmenship trophies were scheduled for Tuesday evening but officials said results would not be available until today.

Regular competition for the Macdougall trophy ended Monday in a four-way tie between Colin Ambrose of Lions Bay, B.C.; William Cox of Toronto; Chris Fitzpatrick, Oxford, England and Andrew Tucker, Surrey, England. All four competitors scored 99 out of a possible 100 points.

Rain Monday postponed the tie breaking match for the Macdougall which calls for 10 rounds each at 200 and 500 yards.

Tuesday, Charles Holt, Colchester, England, and Alan Mead, Dartford, Kent, England, tied for first place in regular competition for the Gibson trophy in a match calling for 10 rounds each at 300 and 600 yards.

About 100 army cadets are competing for 18 positions on the 1976 Royal Canadian Army cadet team which will attend the Bisley rifle matches in England next summer. As well, about 350 civilians are competing for the trophies and prizes to be distributed Saturday when the meet ends.

Derby County Is Favored

lish League soccer program opens Saturday with a big question mark—who can stop Derby County?

The league champions have been strengthened since the end of last season by the transfer of midfield star Charlie George from Arsenal.

The bookies make Derby favorites to win the league title again at odds of 9 to 2. Liverpool is second favorite at 5 to 1, with Ipswich and Leeds at 7 to 1.

Derby has built up a dynasty, with emphasis on its defence, rated the best in the English League. The process was begun by manager Brian Clough and carried on by his successor, Dave MacKay.

Roy McFarland, kingpin of the defence, missed almost all of last season with a leg injury. Now he is fit and playing beside Colin Todd and David Nish in the back line.

George is one of the best ball players in the country, but has been in trouble with game officials. If he can settle down, Derby should be a better team than last season, when it finished two points ahead of Liverpool and three points ahead of Ipswich and Everton.

MacKay, once a star for Tottenham Hotspur in European Cup tournaments, has pledged Derby to attacking football. The club begins with a difficult game—away to Sheffield United, who lost only twice at home last season—without striker Kevin Hector, suspended in a disciplinary measure from last year. But Sheffield also has players under suspension—and forward Tony Currie.

Manchester United is back in the First Division after a season in the Second. Scottish international defender Martin Buchan, who resigned as captain last season, returns to the job.

Stacey West Set To Defend Title

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — Competitors at the Canadian junior women's golf championships starting here today will need a good short game if they're to score well over the 5,437-yard Brightwood golf course.

The course layout is a rolling cluster of narrow fairways lined by trees and small greens fortified by strategic sand traps several of which are surrounded on three sides by trees.

The entry list includes defending champion Stacey West of Thornhill, Ont., who won the title a year ago at Edmonton, and Debbie Stewart of Long Beach, Calif., runner-up last year and the 1975 California junior champion.

Other prime challengers to Miss West's title include Dawne Kortgaard of Calgary, and four juniors who survived two cuts at the Canadian women's amateur in Oakfield, N.S., last week and finished the 72-hole event.

Ontario is favored to retain its interprovincial teams' title against nine other provincial squads.

The defending champions will be led again by Miss West, a four-handicap golfer. Teammates, Liz Ruttan of Unionville and Judy Ellis of Kitchener, have handicaps of five and six respectively.

Gary Cowan Rates Golf Just a Hobby

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Gary Cowan puts his family and business ahead of golf.

The 36-year-old Kitchener, Ont., insurance man goes after his second Canadian amateur golf title today and ranks as one of the favorites in a field of 113.

"Golf is not No. 1 in my life," said Cowan, who has finished second five times in the 72-hole national tournament. "Golf to me is a hobby and I want to play it when I feel like it."

The two-time United States amateur champion, who won the Ontario amateur title earlier this year and was the low amateur in the 1975 Canadian Open, was runner-up in this tournament last year to Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver.

This is Cowan's third major tournament—the same as last year—and he said he'll wind up the season in the "Brookfield even which is a member-guest tournament in Buffalo" later this year.

Cowan, who has won the Ontario amateur two years in a row and five times over-all, tested the 6,244-yard, par-71 Riverside Country Club course, site of the 71st Canadian amateur and Willingdon Cup interprovincial team matches, on Tuesday under hot, sunny skies.

Cowan refused to say what he shot during practice, but in discussing the course, he said:

"It's hard to really tell the first time you go out and play a golf course again. It's difficult to say what it's like. I haven't played it for about 10 years."

Don Sinclair, Riverside's veteran club pro, says "it all depends on the weather."

"If the course is windy and dry, it'll play its toughest."

He said the course has changed little since the national event was last held at Riverside in 1963, the year Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont., won his second of four amateur titles.

The top contenders for the amateur title are Dick Siderowf of Westport, Conn., winner in 1971, Cowan and Roxburgh.

Weslock, four-time champion when the amateur tournament was match play instead of medal competition, and Kelly Roberts of London, Ont., are also rated highly.

Also in the tournament, which has attracted only four Americans, are Robbie Jackson of Ile Bizard, Que., Ted Homenuik of Winnipeg, Jim Doyle of Winnipeg, winner in 1961, and Jim Nelford of Vancouver, who took the British Columbia amateur crown this year.

The field includes 40 golfers who will also take part in Willingdon Cup play, scheduled as a 36-hole interprovincial team competition today and Thursday.

Manitoba won last year's cup with 438 strokes followed by B.C. with 442, Ontario 444 and Nova Scotia 448.

WINS FORMULA 5000

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Brian Redman of England won the Buckeye Cup F-5000 championship road race Sunday at the Mid-Ohio sports car course Sunday, edging Al Unser by 27 seconds. Unser set a course record of 105 miles per hour on the final lap. Redman, whose average speed in the 100-mile race was 93.24 m.p.h., pocketed $17,250 first prize money. England's David Hobbs, 1971 Ford 5000 series champion, finished third.

Cairo Being Buried By Flood of People

CAIRO (Reuter) — Public services in Cairo, one of the world's largest capital cities, are nearing complete collapse under the steady pressure of a massive population explosion.

The 1,000-year-old city is plagued by an incessant human flood. It now has eight million people, according to latest statistics.

City planners attribute Cairo's ills to the mounting drift of peasants from the countryside—about 200 a day—who are lured by higher wages and looking for jobs.

In Cairo a skilled manual worker can earn as much as $9 a day, while the minimum wage is just over $2 a day.

The planners now are trying to find solutions to three major problems in Cairo: Housing, transport and supply.

Despite the city's expansion into the desert, housing is [illegible] inadequate. Finding accommodation at a reasonable rate is almost impossible for middle-class workers.

The reasons are spiralling rents and the demand for large payments of "key money"—fees demanded by a landlord or outgoing tenants before a new tenant is given the apartment key and permission to move in.

Renting an apartment in the centre of Cairo is like trying to reach the moon for an ordinary Egyptian. Living in such areas is only within the means of visiting millionaires or Arab oil tycoons who can afford to pay as much as $220,000 in key money for a luxury flat.

Key money is banned by law, but there are many loopholes. The most common method used by landlords is to put a few pieces of old furniture in the apartment and then name the price.

Some owners prefer to rent apartments completely furnished, as they can then fix their own price without any interference from the authorities.

Renting furnished apartments is a more profitable trade now that Cairo regularly receives thousands of tourists businessmen and other visitors.

Strip Mining Region Has Beauty Restored

BROOKS, Alta. (CP) — You load 16 tons and what do you get? Ninety-four Southern Alberta Institute of Technology (SAIT) graduate heavy-duty equipment operators and an environment eyesore turned beauty spot.

In the southeast corner of Alberta, about 30 miles from here, the silence of the Bow River was shattered this summer by the sounds of giant earth-moving equipment as three provincial departments joined forces to restore an unsightly parcel of 140 acres of land to its original setting.

The area is prt of a strip-mining operation which mined coal from 1943 to 1962 and now has been designated a game sanctuary and the possible site of a future provincial or regional park.

Financed by the department of advanced education, the continuing education division of Calgary's SAIT conducted a five-week heavy-duty equipment operator training course in which students spent part of their time operating machinery at the Bow River site.

Ray Jewison, director of continuing education at SAIT, said it was originally thought that the site would sustain such courses for three years before restoration was completed. However, the trainees finished the mammoth task in a little more than six weeks.

The equipment, including graders, backhoe, motor scrapers and front-end loaders, was leased from a Drumheller construction firm. The firm also provided camp facilities and a cook.

Future plans for the site include creation of geese-nesting islands, stocking of ponds and reforestation. Meanwhile, Mr. Jewison is searching for a suitable site for next year's class of earth movers.

Athabasca University Teaches Folk at Home

EDMONTON (CP) — Tim Byrne spends much of his time feeling his way as president of Alberta's Athabasca University—an institution without a campus.

The 68-yearold former provincial deputy minister of education heads a two-year-old open university which aims at providing higher education to people in their own homes. While all the mechanical problems of preparing print, audio and visual course material are far from solved, Athabasca has reached the point where it now must solve some of its students' problems.

Mr. Byrne said he is more worried about finding ways to give the students the necessary self-discipline to complete courses than anything else, and the university's staff of about 35 during the next few months will devote much of its energy to monitoring progress and seeking ways of motivating people.

"We know that we have to, in some way, find a new set of circumstances that provide external pressures for internal achievement," he said in an interview.

The university has been forced to feel its way, he said. Its existence depends on being innovative and developing new ways of teaching effectively.

One suggestion involves getting students to sign a contract when they start a course which will give the university's tutors, who do much of their work by telephone, the right to remind students of the goals they are supposed to meet. In effect, they will agree to be monitored.

The university had hoped to be completely free, with students starting and finishing courses whenever they wished, but it now appears as though deadlines will be necessary, he said.

Athabasca, he said, offers its 500 students courses in ecology, social science and humanities. It's long-range purpose is to develop degree courses but for now it is offering general courses that will lead students to applied training.

The students, mostly in the 35-to-40 age group, can upgrade their education, complete a degree course they left unfinished or pursue an interest without having to leave their jobs and move to a conventional university campus. There are no academic requirements for admission.

They do it via what is, in effect, a correspondence course but one which is painstakingly put together, combining work books, texts, audio tapes and telephone tutors. Audio-visual lessons have not worked well, as much because technology can not yet put television cassettes into the hands of the students as anything else.

The students, about half of whom live in Edmonton and the rest in towns in Alberta, also get occasional group meetings and the odd general assembly. Transferring students is a problem for all Alberta universities, he said, but generally Athabasca's courses will be accepted as first-year credits, although no students so far have decided to switch to a conventional campus.

The university operates on a yearly budget of about $1 million and the provincial government is assessing its success to see whether to continue the experiment. Mr. Byrne plans to retire next May, providing the future of Athabasca is settled and a successor can be found.

Athabasca is also thinking in terms of co-operating with other open universities, selling and buying courses that are already developed.

Mr. Byrne said the concept of open learning has blossomed since it began in arnest in Britain in 1968, and now similar institutions can be found in such places as Japan and Iran. Quebec offers Canada's other such university.

In 1976 Athabasca plans to offer between 10 and 12 courses so that the almost one-third of its current crop of students who have partially completed degrees at other universities can finish and graduate in the next three to four years. A full bachelor of arts course from start to finish won't be available until about 1980.

Students must pay a tuition fee of $75 a course, which includes all of the learning materials they need, and write an exam, either in Edmonton or in their own communities under supervision.

Education for Seniors Available in Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) The biggest hurdle facing education for seniors in Alberta are lack of communication and initiative from both institutions and concerned community groups.

"The facilities aren't lacking, they just aren't geared to bring in the seniors." Bill Harper, 71-year-old public relations officer for the Alberta Council on Aging, said in an interview.

His wife Effie, 67, president of the council, agreed with him to a certain extent.

"But it goes deeper than lack of communication," she said.

"Nobody has really given it any thought before. Senior citizens have been an invisible part of society for a long time."

It is this "invisible" role the council is urging the province's 400 senior citizens' group to abandon.

"The groups themselves have to look for the opportunity to use the educational facilities available," Mr. Harper said.

Education is only one area of life for the elderly that the council is concerned with, but it has been receiving increated attention in recent months.

A special committee on continuing education was set up by the council in the fall of 1974 and is conducting a survey of secondary and post-secondary institutions in Alberta to determine what is available for seniors and to bring it to their attention.

"Many people of our age had very little background and narrow interests during their life," Mr. Harper said. "When work stopped, life often stopped, because there was no interest left."

The council is trying to show, he said, that "when you retire, you don't retire from anything; you retire to something."

Many of the universities, technical school and colleges in Alberta offer free or reduced tuition to people over 65 who wish to enrol in courses.

However, the response has not been overwhelming. In 1974, only 16 seniors registered and received remission on fees for winter session courses taken at University of Alberta, which offers all seniors tuition-free studies.

Dr. Stan Clarke, director of special sessions at the university, said in an interview that the main problem seemed to be "people just don't know about it."

Dr. Clarke and the Harpers agree that it is not a lack of interest on the part of the elderly that accounts for low attendance.

In May, the university's department of extension and special session office, in collaboration with the council, was host at a three-week spring session for seniors.

The course, funded by a 20,000 grant from the department of advanced eduation were offered free to Alberta residents over 65, including transportation and room and board.

More than 500 sent in applications, although only 220 could be accommodated. Participants came from as far south as Pincher Creek and as far north as Peace River.

Course subjects were suggested by appliants themselves in a pre-session survey, and included creative writing; gardening; contemporary Canadian issues; the psychology of aging; wills, estates and other financial subjects; living on a reduced income; rocks and minerals; music appreciation and literature.

"The reaction of the senior citizens was most enthusiastic," Dr. Clarke said. The university is planning another session next year.

He suggested the lack of interest shown in regular undergraduate courses might be due to the fact that they are full of academic background and theory, while seniors want practical answers to the questions they have.

Mr. Harper has his own ideas.

"After 60 years or so of working and responsibility, we want to get away from a steady pressure, but not from living."

Explorer Found Spa

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Spanish explorer Hernanda De Sota gave Hot Springs its start as the so-called "spa to the world" according to the state parks, recreation and tourism department. De Sota and his party were the first visitors to bathe in Hot Springs' thermal waters — 49 years after Columbus discovered America.

Plan Ocean Voyage In Leather Boat

LONDON (Reuter) — Next year five men will leave Ireland in a banana-shaped leather boat with leather sails looking for evidence that Irish monks discovered America 950 years before Columbus and 450 years before the Vikings.

Timothy Severin, leader of the venture and an author-adventurer who used motorcycles to trace Marco Polo's route up to the Chinese border, told reporters that St. Brendan of Ireland had the equipment to cross the Atlantic in the middle of the sixth century.

Severin argued that St. Brendan's Navigation, a long medieval text describing a voyage to a promised land in the west, was based on geographical fact, containing vivid descriptions of the Faroe Islands, Iceland, Greenland and what might be the St. Lawrence River.

So Severin, 34, is having built in Ireland a 36-foot leather boat, stretched over a wood frame and based on traditional designs of the Irish currach.

The ship, to be named Brendan, will weigh only 2,000 pounds and draw only one foot of water.

Twenty-five ox hides will cover the hull and the two square sails will be of goatskin. It will have oars but no engine.

Severin, who has also navigated the Mississippi River in a canoe, has enlisted the aid of the British Leather Institute, whose scienists found that leather tanned in oak, and dressed in butter as St. Brendan recommended, was in fact best for the hull.

The Brendan is to leave Brandan Creek in Western Ireland on St. Brendan's Day, May 16, 1976, arriving in Labrador or Newfoundland between August and mid-September, after passing through the notorious fogs of the Grand Banks described in St. Brendan's Navigation.

While the boat will be of medieval design, the crew—volunteers still are being sought—will wear the latest in cold-weather gear, eat the latest in high-protein survival food and carry modern radio equipment.

Severin, who got the idea for the voyage during an argument with his wife, a lecturer in medieval history, said his reasons for the voyage include building the boat, retracing the voyage described by St. Brendan and proving that materials available in sixth-century Ireland could have made it.

Bottles Buried in '16 Provide Good Profit

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — The liquor is gone but the bottle value lingers on.

Henry G. Zuber is making money selling old, empty liquor bottles to antique dealers and collectors. He and his brother, Carl, buried scores of the bottles in their backyard 59 years ago because garbage collection was infrequent and unreliable.

Until last fall, Mr. Zuber said he "more or less forgot all about the bottle burial," but on learning the value of old whisky bottles, he and Edgar Currie started digging.

They discovere nine-ounce flasks of one bran which had sold for 25 cents each during prohibition days. Now the empty bottles are selling for $3 and $5.

"I'm getting at least 12 without the liquor," said Mr. Zuber.

In 1916. a dozen 26-ounce bottles of liquor sold for $5.30, about 44 cents a bottle.

Henry's father, Charles Zuber, was manager of the Grand Central Hotel in 1916 and provided the bottles for burial. He had to get rid of all liquor and beer at the hotel because the Ontario Temperance Act (OTA) was in effect. He had until midnight, Sept.16, 1916, to follow order.

"I remember helping to load about 20 cases of liquor and about 15 cases of beer in a big brewery dray and bringing them home,"said Henry Zuber, who was 13 at the time.

Each case contained 12 bottles of liquor. The bottles were skilfully poured into plain gallon jugs, returned to the hotel and sold for 10 cents a shot "under the counter." The price climbed to 15 cents a shot or two shots for 25 cents as prohibition lengthened to 1927.

Mr. Zuber recalled Kitchener hotels facing little trouble in obtaining liquor, selling it, or running into the law.

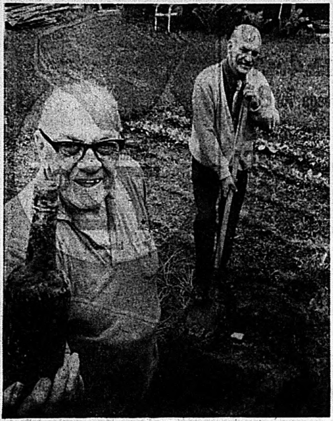
Joe Winterhalt, "a cranky old man who ran a cigar factory, went to bed at 9 p.m., and had no telephone," was the only liuqor inspector. I could spot him three blocks away.

"The booze would be hidden in a hollowed-out part of the wall behind the bar under a stuffed deer when they saw the inspector coming. I think the inspector knew all along what was going on."

The chief of police also happened to be Mr. Zuber's godfather and uncle. He and his only employee, a night constable, couldn't control all of Kitchener alone in 1916.

Liquor for local hotels was shipped in by rail from Montreal.

"The liquor came in carloads marked apples, flour, or something else. It would be shoved off on a siding and unloaded when nobody was looking. The liquor people had things worked out with the railway people."



Buried Treasure

Henry G. Zuber is making money selling old empty liquor bottles to antique dealers and cillectors. He and brother, Carl (background), buried scores of the bottles in their backyard in Kitchener, Ont., 59 years ago because garbage collection was infrequent and unreliable. They discovered nine-ounce flasks of one brand which had sold for 25 cents during prohibition days. Now the empty bottles are selling for $3 and $5. (CP Photo)

Cox's Bazaar Picturesque

BOMBAY (CP) — Miles and miles of thundering white beaches. The gentle Naaf River with a backdrop of lush hills. Ancient Buddhist monasteries and picturesque tribals.

This is the Cox's Bazaar area, Bangladesh's international tourist window.

The populous Asian nation is the world's newest competitor for Western tourists. Now that law and order has been firmly established after more than three years of post-liberation turmoil, the angladesh government is developing the southernmost part of the country as a tourist attraction.

A state-run corporation has been set up to build hotels, motels, tourist cottages and other amenities. A biweekly air service links Cox's Bazaar with the port of Chittagong which already is well-connected with Dacca, the national capital.

Since Burma adjoins southern Bangladesh, Burmese cultural influence is strong in the area. The Bangladesh government has earmarked sizable funds for renovating the kiangs, as the monasteries are known.

The morning and evening prayer services at the kiangs are unforgettable, says a recent visitor. "It was like travelling a dozen centuries back into man's history."

At a place called Teknaf in the Cox's Bazaar area the Naaf River emerges from the hills to form a natural lake before flowing into the sea. The Bangladesh government hopes to start a boating and swimming club for tourists, with a 900-year-old pagoda or Burmese-style temple, serving as a meditation centre.

The Buddhist monks in the area are particularly happy about the Bangladesh government's efforts to attract foreign tourists.

"With more funds flowing in, our temples will get a new lease of life," one aged monk is quoted as saying. "We might then be able to teach Western tourists the Buddhist way of meditation on a systematic basis."

New Parkland

Ted Osborn climbs a slope on land he has wandered all his life, as a boy and later manager of the Coldstream Ranch near Vernon, B.C. The British Columbia parks branch acquired 2,274 acres of the ranch which will be developed as a new provincial park. The entire ranch covering more than 8,200 acres, supports 2,000 head of cattle and 100 acres of fruit trees. (CP Photo)

Ranch Becomes B.C. Public Park

VERNON, B.C. (CP) — The beach where Ted Osborn went skinny-dipping as a boy and the rolling ranchland he protected from tire-spinning recreational vehicles have gone public.

The British Columbia parks branch, which acquired 2,274 acres of Coldstream Ranch land on Kalamalka Lake in a government purchase this year, plans to continue keeping vehicles off the tender, grassy hillsides.

The new parkland around Cosens Bay is almost unspoiled, abounding with wildlife and birds, and an ideal spot for hikers, campers and fishermen.

But it's not ideal for all outdoor recreation, says Mr. Osborn, manager of the Coldstream Ranch, with which his family has been associated with since 1911.

"We've had the area locked up for three years with only hikers and horseback riders allowed in, because four-wheel drive vehicles and trail bikes have been such a problem," he said in an interview.

He pointed out deep ruts left by the spinning wheels of joy riders who chose to drive the grassland rather than the gravel road to the beach.

"The problem is that the land is so dry, we get so little rain, and tracks like this stay for years without growing over," Mr. Osborn said.

The entire ranch, covering more than 8,200 acres, has been closed to hunting for several years because hunters were leaving gates open and shooting carelessly.

"It's the same with everything from four-wheel drives to hunters," said Mr. Osborn. "The minority spoils things for the majority."

He forsees other problems for the parks branch in trying to satisfy all outdoor interests.

"For instance, water skiing and canoeing just won't go together in this bay—some priorities will have to be decided, and I personally hope the peace and naturalness will be kept intact as much as possible."

HELD OFF DEVELOPER

The provincial government bought the Cosens Bay land from British owners for $1.97 million and the land has a market value of $2.2 million. Housing development plans for 1,500 acres of Cosens Bay had been ruled out by Resources Minister Bob Williams in 1973 at the insistence of local residents.

The wide sweep of the beach features a fringe of gravel and then sandy shoreline and gentle shelving for perfect swimming.

"We used to go skinny-dipping here and ride our horses out into the water when I was a boy," said Mr. Osborn, who took over as ranch manager [illegible] when [illegible] tired.

[illegible] lake is fished for trout and carp.

On the rocky headland overlooking the bay visitors can see deer, marmots and sometimes rattlesnakes.

The prospect of a park with rattlesnakes doesn't alarm Mr. Osborn.

"As a boy I used to hunt them and got five to 15 in a day quite easily," he said.

North Sea Providing Much Oil for Britain

LONDON (CP) — By the end of 1975, one car in ever 15 in Britain may be running on gasoline refined from the country's North Sea crude oil.

And, a spokesman for British Petroleum said, one car in every seven will be using North Sea gasoline by November next year, with the ratio rising to one in four by 1977.

However, the British gasoline will be blended with that refined from Middle East oil because the North Sea oil is of such high quality that it will be especially valuable for the petrochemical industry

BP is bringing in oil from its Forties field but is also looking forward to developing further North Sea fields.

The Forties field is expected to be producing up to 400,000 barrel a day by mid-1977, compared with a production target of 30,000 barrels a day by mid-September.

Now the company expects to turn its attention to the neighboring Andrew field, east of the Forties. If oil is found there in commercial quantity, it will be possible to pipe it to shore in Scotland through the Forties system.

LANG — In loving memory of Hilda Bell Lang who passed away August 13th, 1942.
Dear mother, you are not forgotten,
Though on earth you are no more,
Still in memory you are with me,
As you always were before.
—Ever remembered by son Eugene.

ETHIER (Shud) — In loving memory of my dear dad and grandfather who passed away three years ago today, August 13, 1972.
Three lonely years have drifted by,
To speak my thoughts I will not try,
One treasured gift I do retain,
Your smiling eyes in a photo frame.
God took your hand, we had to part,
He eased your pain and broke my heart.
You are beside me in all I do,
Your love will guide and see me through.
—Forever loved and remembered by daughter Barbara, son-in-law Bill and grandchildren.

ETHIER — In loving memory of a dear husband, Gerald (Shud) who passed away 3 years ago today, August 13, 1972.
There's someone who misses you sadly,
In the house where you used to be,
There's someone who wanted to keep you,
But God willed it not to be.
You left some beautiful memories,
And sorrow too great to be told,
But to me, who loved and lost you,
Your memory will never grow old.
—So dearly loved and sadly missed, wife Dolly.

ETHIER — In loving memory of a dear father, Gerald (Shud) Ethier who passed away August 13, 1972.
Three years have passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away,
God took him home — it was His will,
Within our hearts he liveth still.
—Sadly missed by son Bob, Sharon and grandchildren Tania and Robert.

Drug From Poison

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia Reuter — Doctors here claim to have developed an antithrombosis drug from viper poison. The drug called ecarin, was isolated from the poison of carpet vipers and has already been successfully tested on animals. It appears to act quickly — in about one minute — and to be effective for up to an hour.

Coffee Studied

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Traditionally, coffee has been used to sober up people who had too much to drink. Now, experimental studies indicate it may be possible to use the same remedy to bring down people who are high on marijuana. Researchers at the University of Arizona report that experiments on rabbits show caffeine reverses the depressant effects of marijuana.

Ballet Producer Gets Rave Reviews

NEW YORK (CP) — Erik Bruhn's work as resident producer of the National Ballet of Canada has been well-received by the New York critics, but it was his mime dancing that took them by storm.

The Canadian season in New York is over and a new one starts in Toronto Aug. 19, the beginning of a three-month Canadian tour.

When Bruhn played the witch Madge in his version of La Sylphide, he stole the show, wrote Clive Barnes of The Times. The Danish dancer is rapidly becoming ballet's first mime superstar, Barnes said.

Bruhn's, production of Coppelia, shown for the first time at the Metropolitan Opera House after its North American premiere in Toronto last February, also earned critical acclaim.

"He remains a dancer second to none, and years of timing himself to the musical phrase have created one of the great actors of any time," wrote Bill Zakariasen of The Daily News.

There was ample praise for Rudolf Nureyev's production of the Sleeping Beauty, shown eight times in the three-week Canadian season.

Nureyev was Prince Florimund every time, partnering four leading ladies in the role of Princess Aurora—Karen Kain, Veronica Tennant, Nadia Potts and Vanessa Harwood. There were plenty of nice things said about their performances.

The Russian-born dancer said the season in New York has been fantastic—16 weeks of ballet at the Met starting with the Bolshoi Ballet in late April, and ending with the Canadians.

About 500,000 people were at the Met but because of high costs the opera house probably will lose money.

Nureyev and Miss Kain kicked off the Canadian season July 22 and ended it Sunday night in the same production, Sleeping Beauty.

It was her last performance for the Canadian company until late in November, when she returns from Paris after performing there for Roland Petit.

Nureyev's association was only for the New York season.

He seemed tired, short of breath in the beginning, but always managed to rally his strength to finish the gruelling engagement, dancing in 23 of the 27 programs scheduled.

La Sylphide and John Neumeier's contemporary version of Don Juan, were part of a double bill.

Don Juan might have been such a fascinating ballet, wrote Barnes in The Times, but the choreography itself simply did not match up to the choreographic content.

Barnes said that the more one sees of Nureyev as Don Juan, the more one admires its literary concepts. It is his most telling role.

Bruhn's version of Swan Lake shows the tragic effects of domineering mothers, wrote Frances Herridge of The Post.

It was Bruhn's 1967 version of the classic, also staged at the Met for the first time. Actually, Bruhn's story line makes more sense han when it was first done in 1877, Miss Herridge said.

Rothbart the evil sorcerer now is an evil queen, and the swans doing her bidding drown the prince, danced by Nureyev, in the end.

Nureyev Happy To Be in West

NEW YORK (CP) — Rudolf Nureyev says he is happy working with different ballet companies in the West and would not give it up for anything.

The Russian-born dancer calls vicious and foolish a recent statement by a Canadian writer that he should leave Canada's top ballet company. But he says he would not accept the post of artistic diretor of the National Ballet of Canada if it were offered to him.

"Not right now, because it would interfere too much with my dancing. I wouldn't like to give that up too soon."

The ballet has been without a director since David Haber was fired just before it came to New York. Founder Celia Franca came out of retirement to fill Haber's post temporarily—until th end of September.

Nureyev, 37, says his years in the West have been happy but he would like to see his homeland again and be able to travel freely between it and the West. He doubts that will happen, even in an era of detente.

It was more than 14 years ago that he defected to the West from the Kirov Ballet at Le Bourget airport outside Paris while the company was flying to England for an engagement. At the time, he feared he was being returned to the Soviet Union, never to enjoy foreign travel again.

In a rare interview, Nureyev told The Canadian Press that it would be "idle thinking" on his part to believe Soviet authorities would let him return to the Soviet Union.

'I'm not against it, if they need me," he said. "I don't believe they do. They don't feel that way."

The interview was held after he wound up his guest-artist appearances with the National Ballet at the Metropolitan Opera house Sunday night.

Nureyev was Prince Florimund for the eighth time in his production of the Sleeping Beauty, showpiece of the three-week session at the Met.

After the final curtain, the Canadians gave Nureyev a champagne party. The National Ballet begins a three-month Canadian tour, without Nureyev, starting in Ontario Place, Toronto, Aug. 19.

Nureyev said he feels that his association with the National Ballet, beginning in the 1972-73 season, has worked well and benefitted both the company and himself, and disputed the Canadian critic's assertion that he monopolizes the leading roles in the company's repertoire.

In an article published in New York Times July 27, critic John Fraser of Toronto Globe and Maill said Nureyev had done a lot to improve the company but that Nureyev now should leave the Canadians alone to get on with the task of building their own repertoire.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Friends could tax your patience today if you let them monopolize your time. Evening will find you doing work you neglected.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You feel a family member is responsible for your not achieving something. Don't lick your wounds by splurging on a needless item.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You have a reckless nature today. Try to watch your driving and what you say. Either could cause trouble.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A shopping spree is not in order today. You're still in a cycle where money could easily slip away.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You won't work well with others today. Where possible, try to plan activities you can do better alone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have to guard against being careless at work today. A mental slip could cause a mishap. Its effect could be permanent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) People will continue to turn you off today. Knowing this, avoid saying something you'll later regret.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll feel those at home aren't in your corner today. Keep your nose to the grindstone. All will work out.

PISCES (Fep. 20-March 20) You could speak without thinking today. Think twice before committing yourself. It may not be what you meant.

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Victor Mollo's book is written for rubber bridge players. Therefore, when he asks, "What should declarer play from dummy at trick one?" the answer is obvious.

Declarer should play a low spade. Once this play is made, South can win the trick with his ace and take an immediate club finesse. If the finesse loses, that queen of spades will still be in dummy to stop the suit. South will be sure of four clubs, three hearts, one spade and one diamond for a total of nine tricks.

In match point duplicate there is a real problem facing declarer. He is in a normal contract since almost every one else will open one notrump and play in the notrump game.

The queen of spades play from dummy becomes an attempt to score an overtrick and overtricks are what win matchpoint tournaments.

Of course, if South knows that West never leads from kings (there still are such people playing bridge), he will make the rubber bridge players play of the low spade. If South is a natural pessimist, he will also play safe for his contract.

Ask the Jacobys

A reader from Hawaii wants to know if the rules of bridge allow a player to pass when his partner opens with a forcing two-bid.

This question comes up quite often. The answer is that the rules of bridge allow you to make any legal call when it is your turn to bid and a pass is always a legal call.

At the same time it is seldom advisable to pass when your partner forces. He may have his bid and you may be missing a game or even a slam.

(Do you have a question for the Jacobys? Write "Ask the Jacobys" care of this newspaper. The most interesting questions will be used in this column and writers will receive copies of JACOBY MODERN.)

Many Causes Of Stomatitis

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a very sore mouth and tongue. I've been told I have stomatitis. No cause has been found, and I've been told it is incurable. Can you suggest anything to help? My mouth is very dry and it aches.—Mrs. W. K.

That is a very broad diagnosis.

Stomatitis is an inflammation of the mucous membranes of the mouth. Gingivitis (inflammation of the gums), and glossitis (of the tongue), are just two forms.

Possible causes include a vitamin deficiency (either the B group or C), an infection, or an injury to the inside of the mouth as from chronic cheek-biting, ill-fitting dentures, ragged teth, or a reaction from denture material. Alcohol and spicy food can aggravate the problem.

Local irritations from smoking or chewing tobacco, snuff, even toothpaste and mouthwash must be suepcted. A scraping might identify a specific bacteria as the cause. Use of antibiotics can cause a fungus infection (thrush).

Narrowing down the diagnosis could be difficult.

Vincent's disease, also called trench mouth, is a vicious and contagious form of stomatitis. This is caused by spirochetes.

Pernicious anemia is featured by a sore tongue. Various skin diseases can also involve the mouth—lichen planus or erythema multiforme. Sjogren's disease causes a dryness in the mucous membranes of the mouth.

I would not call your condition incurable. In most of the conditions I mentioned, the underlying cause can be trated effectively once identified.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am three months pregnant and have been having problems with irregular bowel movements. I have taken laxatives on two occasions. Now I have heard that you are not supposed to take any when you are pregnant.

I was wondering if it could have harmed the baby.—Mrs. J.

Harsh laxatives should not be used. A mild one such as milk of magnesia or prune juice can be used safely for this rather common problem associated with pregnancy. Your doctor should prescribe the dosage to suit your needs.

The laxative will not in itself directly affect the baby, but continued use of a harsh laxative can dehydrate you and this could indirectly do harm.

Certainly, your two dosages will not have done anyddamage, so you can stop worrying about that.

Too many pregnant women become sedentary. Inactivity can contribute to constipation. If you were active before becoming pregnant you should probably be doing a mild exercise, during the early months, anyway.

If you have abdominal cramps with your constipation you should report this to your doctor.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 13 years old and I wash my hair every day. Is this too often?—Miss R. K.

It isn't. That doesn't mean I think it is necessary, though.

Wagon Maker Is Doing Well

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — For an Old Order Mennonite, Silas Martin, the age of the automobile has not dawned.

It has been 30 years since he started up as a wagon maker and carriage repairer in the nearby community of Heidelberg. He was told the business would never work—not even in the heart of Mennonite country where the wagon is an accepted way of life.

Not only has his business survived for three decades, but it is gaining popularity in a day when Canada's highways are increasingly crowded with automobiles.

"Once people had buggies rotting in their barns, but now collectors are putting new life into my business," said Mr. Martin.

As antiques have gained in popularity, the spirit of past craftsmanship has lived on in Mr. Martin's business.

Now the world outside the closely-knit Mennonite community has brought new customers. A year ago Mr. Martin and his three sons began building copies of the historic Conestoga wagon which brought early setCtlers to the region from Pennsylvania.

Now Mr. Martin is working on the last of 11 wagons for the Ponderosa Steak House chain.

Aaron Miller, Toronto regional advertising manager for Ponderosa, said the wagons cost $1,000 each but "are worth every cent."

"What began as an experiment for us has received fantastic public response," he said.

Ponderosa has won awards at the Niagara Falls' Blossom Festival and in Regina for the best commercial float. The float used wagons manufactured in Mr. Martin's barn-workshop.

The steak-house chain now has four wagons at Ontario and Eastern Canada and three in Western Canada.

Mr. Martin and his sons buy the undercarriages and install the box and covering. Made of pine, the Conestoga wagons come complete with feed boxes in the back for horses.

Weighing 1,000 to 1,100 pounds, the wagons take the Martin craftsmen two days to make.

Mr. Martin has electricity in his home but prefers to depend on the cheaper diesel-run engine for the tools in his workshop. He makes some of his own spokes and wheels but finds parts difficult to acquire.

"I have to keep between $5,000 and $6,000 of parts in hand at all times for my repair business and most of them come from the United States," he said.

Although there are only a handful of wagon makers in North America, Mr. Martin's main work still consists of repairs and maintenance to the buggies in Mennonite country.

Although he does not own a car, Mr. Martin has no objection to them as long as they do not hit him. He has good reason to feel this way as a motorist recently rammed his buggy frm behind.

Uninjured but shaken, he had to repair his own buggy and still is waiting for a settlement from the insurance company.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Frank Sinatra will be in London this fall for a return engagement, this time in a joint appearance at the London Palladium with Sarah Vaughan and Count Basie and his Orchestra.

An announcement during the weekend said the three musical greats were brought together by impressario Harold Davison for the engagement set for Nov. 13-20.

Sinatra played two sell-out engagements last May 29-30 at the Royal Albert Hall—his first appearance in London in more than five years.

On that occasion the 15,000 available tickets to the two concerts were sold out within a few hours. In all, requests for more than 350,000 tickets were received at the hall.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — The Hollywood Bowl, Los Angeles' 40-year-old open-air music auditorium, marked its 1,500th concert during the weekend with cannon fire, the rattle of musketry, fireworks and Beethoven.

The Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra staged a full-scale battle between British redcoats and French troops as a foreground to a performance of Beethoven's Battle Symphony, which saw the orchestra gradually enveloped in smoke as the battle progressed.

Beethoven wrote the symphony to mark the victory of the British over the French in the battle of Vittoria.

Censorship Not Confined To Authoritarian Countries

LONDON (Reuter) — Political censorship is increasing around the world and its growth sometimes goes unnoticed by the people whose freedoms are being eroded, according to the British quarterly, Index on Censorship.

Commonwealth investigators say the problem of censorship is not confined to those living under authoritarian regimes.

The British organization that publishes Index says even in the economically advanced countries of North America and Western Europe there are pressures on free expression that it would be perilous to ignore.

Britain, France and Australia are some of the countries under scrutiny by the Index.

Founded by a number of leading literary figures, among them the poets W. H. Auden and Stephen Spender, the organization, which is called the Writers and Scholars Educational Trust, examines all forms of political censorship anywhere in the world and helps exiled writers.

It claims to be the only organization of its kind in the world.

The assistant editor of the magazine, George Theiner, says "many people know very little about censorship in their own countries. we try to examine the problems of mass communication, but we're not in the business of attacking."

The trust's findings echo those of the Commonwealth Press Union (CPU) conference, which warned here in June that press freedom throughout the world was diminishing steadily.

The CPU reported that there now are more journalists in prison or under house arrest and more newspapers closed down by government action than ever before.

Much of the trust's practical work is concerned with helping those either in exile or unable to publish freely in their own country.

It cites the case of the former Soviet art historian, Igor Golomshtok, who emigrated as a Jew and applied to the trust for help in obtaining work and accommodation. He now teaches at St. Andrew's University in Scotland.

Theiner admits the trust is searching for an ideal without expectation of finding it.

"Censorship is relative," he says. "You wouldn't say that curbs on free expression in Western Europe were the same as those in the East but they exist all the same."

Index, which began early in 1972, has published a number of manuscripts from authors banned in their own countries.

Last year, it brought out an English version of an open letter by the exiled Russian author Alexander Solzhenitsyn to the Soviet leadership.

Theiner says there is evidence that the publication circulates among the intelligentsia in Communist Eastern Europe, passed around from hand to hand with instructions to keep it around for only a short time.

But direct reaction from readers in Soviet Bloc countries is rare.

The publication has a circulation of around 4,000 and is financed totally from private donations.

Despite its limited circulation, the Index has produced important effects in a number of countries, Theiner says. The work has been cited at the European Commission on Human Rights and in the constitutional court in Sri Lanka during a hearing on the press.

"We're not just a lot of do-gooders crying in the wilderness," he says.

Fredericksburg Old Colonial City

— A century before four major Civil War battles were fought here, Fredericksburg was a bustling colonial city where George Washington grew up and may have tossed a dollar across the Rappahannock.

Ships under the British flag came up the river with goods for this north-central Virginia trading centre and returned with tobacco from neighboring plantations.

On one of the farms, just across the river, George Washington grew from the age of 6 to manhood. Later, his mother moved into a cottage in town. It still stands. Washington called there in 1789 to tell her he had been elected the nation's first president.

Betty Washington Lewis, Washington's only sister, lived on the nearby Kenmore estate. Her home is one of the country's most beautifully preserved and furnished houses, noted for the moulded plaster ornamentation on the ceilings.

Also surviving and open to tourists is the Rising Sun Tavern, built by Washington's brother Charles on the post road halfway between Richmond and Alexandria, now a Washington suburb.

Washington used a room at Hugh Mercer's apothecary shop as an office when he visited Fredericksburg. Mercer, the town physician, became a Revolutionary general and died in the battle of Princeton, N.J. His shop is open to visitors.

Fredericksburg was an important centre of activity during the revolution. There was an iron works here, a hospital, a prisoner-of-war camp and a base camp across the river for organizing and training soldiers.

Fielding Lewis, Washington's brother-in-law, operated an ordnance plant which produced rifles, bayonets and cartridges. It may have saved the revolution, but the expense left him penniless.

John Paul Jones called Fredericksburg his only home in America and he lived in a house down by the river before he left to become one of the new nation's greatest naval heroes.

After the war, James Monroe set up a law practice in Fredericksburg, became member of the town council and launched a political career which led to the White House.

Australian Medicare Hits Snags

SYDNEY (Reuter) — Australia's new national health insurance scheme, Medibank, is proving a troublesome baby.

The scheme was born on July 1 amid a storm of claims and counter-claims from its supporters and opponents.

Modelled on a similar health insurance scheme operating in Canada, Medibank covers all Australians with subsidies for doctors' fees and other health charges.

It is funded by the Australian Labor government out of general taxation revenue.

But the side of the scheme which provides free basic hospital care is at present operating in only two of the six Australian states, Tasmania and South Australia, after running into bitter opposition from non-Labor governments in the other four.

These governments subsequently decided that the scheme, which public opinion polls indicate has the support of a majority of Austr[illegible] is inevitable and have agreed to join the hospital plan.

But negotiations are continuing, and Medibank is not expected to be fully operational throughout the country for another few months.

Meanwhile, the medical care side of Medibank is having the type of teething problems which the Australian government said it expected, but which critics say prove the scheme is a failure.

The most bitter opponents of Medibank are a large number of doctors and the private funds which previously provided health insurance coverage.

Some doctors are insisting on cash on-the-spot payments from patients rather than Medibank cheques from the government.

One of the country's biggest private health funds has begun action in the Australian High Court to challenge the federal legislation which set up the Medibank scheme.

But Medibank officials maintain that despite this opposition, the scheme is off to a good start.

More than 100,000 claims have been received each day throughout the country since Medibank was introduced, and they have been processed efficiently, one official said.

There have been instances of problems such as doctors being paid three times over for the same bill.

"But these minor hitches are only to be expected while things sort themselves out in the early stages," the official said.

Official figures indicate that about a third of Medibank claims are being sent in under a bulk-billing system. Under this system, doctors can volunteer to send their patients' accounts directly to Medibank and be reimbursed with a cheque covering 85 per cent of a scheduled fee for their services, while the patients pay nothing.

The system thus provides for completely free medical care for patients, with the doctors in effect waiving 15 per cent of the fee in return for a system which eliminates bad debts and lessens their accounting and billing costs.

But bulk-billing has been bitterly opposed by the Australian Medical Association which has described it as the beginning of "socialized" medicine, with doctors paid directly by the government.

Alberta Catholics Limited In Their School Choices

EDMONTON (CP — Roman Catholics in Alberta are restricted in the choice of schools their children attend because that's the way most of them want it.

Jean Forest, chairman of the Edmonton separate school board, says this often leads to a situation of individual and group rights working at cross purposes.

A Roman Catholic family in a community where there is a Catholic school district may want to send the children to the public schools, but finds it may have to pay tuition to do so. This infringes on individual choice, but the law is designed to protect the rights of a group—the Catholic minority.

Most Catholics in the district probably want their own school district, and the law of the province guarantees them this right; but in the process, it denies the individual Catholic the right to choose which school his children will attend.

"I personally believe in freedom of choice for the individual, but one also must consider the rights of the group," said Mrs. Forest, a past president of the Alberta Catholic School Trustees' Association (ACSTA.

She said that if individual Catholics had the right to opt out of the separate system at will, and if a number did so, then the system would no longer be viable and in danger of collapsing.

Then, she asked, "What about the wishes of those who want a viable system . . . which has prior rights . . . the individual or the group?"

"You have to be concerned about the rights of the minority group which established the system because most of them want it."

Michael Gyorfi of Bow Island, president of the ACSTA, said the organization, which represents Catholic school boards in the province, has chosen to keep quiet on the issue for the time being.

He was referring to a case in Calgary where a family successfully sued the board of education for charging tuition fees against it. The family is Catholic.

Mr. Gyorfi said that in his area, a region about 35 miles west of Medicine Hat, there is no problem of tuition fees—people send their children to the school of their choice.

Art Bunney of Forestburg, president of the Alberta said his group hasn't taken a stand on the question whether Catholics have free choice as to the schools they attend.

In many boards, "lots of children have been going back and forth (between school systems and everybody knew it."

In most cases, though, there was no sense of urgency about trying to do anything about it.

Mr. Bunney said he doesn't think there was that much of a problem before the Calgary case came up. He personally feels that the choice of school systems "should be the free choice of the parents."

Opposition Leader Robert Clark, education minister in 1970 when the last school act was written, said the Calgary ruling, if it follows through, "could undermine the whole separate school structure in Alberta."

Michael Strembitsky, superintendent of Edmonton public schools, said the board decided a year ago to eliminate tuition fees for Catholic students wishing to attend public schools. There was trouble in enforcing tuition fees and collecting them.

He said the no-tuition policy is "working well."

Talented Scot Can Speak 66 Tongues but Not Gaelic

LONDON (Reuter). — One of the world's most talented linguists is a diffident Highland Scot who has spent a lifetime learning 44 languages but cannot speak the mother tongue of his homeland, Gaelic.

George Campbell, aged 62, can talk freely to peoples from the five continents but when he goes home to the rugged highlands of his native Ross and Cromarty in Scotland he's almost lost for words.

It all started with French and German at university in Edinburgh and later at Leipzig.

"There I started doing things like Turkish, Hungarian and Persian. Then I got a job as assistant librarian in the school of Slavonic studies in the University of London and started doing things like Czech and so on. I also went to the school of Oriental studies and learned Arabic, Sanskrit, Chinese, Tibetan and Mongolian," he says with unaffected modesty. "This was in my 20s and 30s."

"I am now still in the process of learning two American Indian languages: Quechua, which is spoken in Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador, and Guarani which with Spanish is the joint official language of Paraguay."

Much of this study is done on a red London bus as he travels to work each day at Bush House, headquarters of the BBC external services.

Mr. Campbell retired last year after 35 years with the BBC, helping to supervise some of the 557 hours of programs it beams to the world in 39 foreign languages each week. Now he works for the corporation as a free-lance consultant.

"Over the 35 years I've worked with most of these languages," he said. "I'm able to do such tasks as the BBC sets me."

These tasks include comparative studies in the services put out in Russian and Chinese and in Spanish and Portuguese, checking for inaccuracies in translation, content and style, and the correct use of modern idiomatic language.

Mr. Campbell, who supervised broadcasts to Rumania for 10 years until his retirement last August, estimates the easiest language for anyone to learn is Spanish and the most difficult he has encountered so far is the obscure tongue of the Circassians, known as Kabardinian.

The three languages he most values are Chinese, Arabic and Sanskrit "because they offer the most in what there is to read."

Japanese Shunning Industries

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese government's plan to move factories from overcrowded cities to remote areas is facing obstacles because of the economic slowdown and protests by people living in rural areas.

But officials say they remain optimistic that more and more factories will move out of three major overcrowded areas—Tokyo, Nagoya and Osaka—simply because there is no room left there for industry.

So far 93 factories have applied for government financial aid for relocation, and about 80 pen cent of them already have moved since late 1972, the ministry of international trade and industry reports.

Of Japan's nearly 710,000 factories, more than 236,000 are in those three areas. They supply 74 per cent of the nation's total industrial output. Under relocation laws which went into effect 2½ years ago, the government expects to cut that percentage to 50 by 1985.

Massive protests by residents near some proposed industrial sites added to these problems. In one area, voters rejected a pro-industry mayor.

Aside from their fears of pollution, rural people were upset by several recent explosions and a massive oil leak at industrial complexes.

"The climate has changed. It is becoming more and more difficult to build new factories in rural areas," said Noboru Nishifuji.

The 1972 legislation bans industries from expanding or building new factories in the three cities. It encourages industries to move to rural areas by providing loans of up to about three years at annual interest rates as low as 7.5 per cent. Bank rates are nine per cent and more.

It also offers such privileges as discounted taxes on assets and provides funds to build such public facilities as sewage plants or gymnasiums at the new sites.

Relocation efforts received major attention in 1972, when the then prime minister Kakuei Tanaka proposed a plan to "reshape the Japanese archipelago" by building five giant industrial complexes in remote areas. The plan called for building 60 to 80 new cities of about 250,000 population each and linking these areas with a high-speed transportation network.

With his plan, Tanaka said, Japan could ease the burden of over-concentration and maintain an annual economic growth rate of 10 per cent.

One immediate problem was that land prices soared, especially in areas Tanaka had mentioned, as speculators moved in. Then came the 1973 oil crisis and inflation, followed by the economic slowdown. Companies tightened their budgets.

Belfast Bar Hit by Bomb

BELFAST (AP) — Ambulance men say more bodies may be found in the rubble of a bar blown up Wednesday by a bomb. At least four persons died in the terrorist attack on the haunt of militant Protestants.

The dead included a security guard gunned down at the door, and a woman.

More than 40 persons were injured, some of them seriously.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the attack on the Bayardo Bar in the Protestant-dominated Shankill Road area.

Police and witnesses gave the following account:

Just before closing time, a gunman opened fire from a dark-blue car on two security men posted at the door of the bar, killing one and wounding the other.

A companion flung the bomb through the unguarded door. It exploded quickly, almost wrecking the building decorated with the flags of Ulster and of the Ulster Defence Association, one of the largest Protestant paramilitary groups.

A woman customer injured in the blast said: "It was terrible. The bomb went off almost immediately and the building was shaken to its foundations."

The car raced off in the direction of the Crumlin Road, an Irish Republican Army stronghold. The gunmen fired at people waiting at a bus stop, but no one was reported hit.

About the same time, another bomb exploded in the Shankill Road area but no injuries were reported.

The last serious bomb incident in the Shankill Road occurred April 5 when five persons were killed in an explosion at the Mountain View Tavern.

The four latest deaths raised to at least 1,271 the number of persons killed in Northern Ireland's last six years of sectarian feuding between the IRA and militant Protestants.

Camp Chlorinator Line Found Blocked

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The water supply at a camp north of here, identified as the source of a recent typhoid outbreak, was equipped with a new chlorinator after it was found to be contaminated a year ago, a local health inspector said Wednesday.

The camp was open for family camping July 10-20 and for a conference July 24-27. Twenty-eight persons in Ontario have become ill with typhoid so far. Another 13 are in hospital isolation, suspected of having the disease.

Freeman Hutchings said owners of the Light and Life Free Methodist Camp were told last year to install a new chlorinator before the camp opened this year. The unit was installed and when water was tested the day before the camp opened, it contained no coliform bacteria.

But separate tests by camp directors and the health unit July 17-18 showed a coliform count of more than 80, indicating the water was contaminated, he said.

The health unit was not told of the camp's test and did not receive the results of its own test until July 21, after the camp closed, Mr. Hutchings said.

Provincial health inspectors, who visited the camp July 21, found the chlorinator's chemical line was blocked, he said. The chlorinator was fixed and a test the same day indicated the water was safe. Three subsequent tests taken by the camp also proved satisfactory.

However, three tests taken by the health unit since the outbreak, without the chlorinator, again showed the raw well water was contaminated, he said.

Another possible source of the disease might have been a 3,-000-gallon water cistern used to supplement the regular supply after a leak developed in the water line, he said.

The water in the cistern came from an area quarry which has been tested and proven to be "reasonably satisfactory," he said. The truck in which that water was transported might have been contaminated.

The health unit is also checking the wholesale and retail outlets from which the food for the camp was purchased and is searching for a possible carrier of the disease.

Dr. Richard Mathias, a field epidemiologist with the national department of health, said there were about 30 visitors at the camp who had been working in Haiti and several church missionaries from outside North America.

A 17-year-old Durham, Ont., youth, admitted to hospital Sunday in Whitby, is the only suspected case in that region, health officials said. The youth was one of 75 Durham residents known to have attended the camp.

A 17-year-old Durham region youth, admitted to hospital Sunday in Whitby, is the only suspected case in that region, health officials said. They youth was one of 75 residents of the Durham region near Oshawa known to have attended the camp.

Fear of Crocs Warranted

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — A man who lived in terror of crocodiles was eaten by one 15 feet long with three legs and no tail in far north Queensland, a coroner's inquest was told today.

The inquest into the death of Peter Reimers, 35, was told he was so scared of crocodiles he never would wade in water more than a few inches deep.

Witnesses said they believed the crocodile was aware of Reimers' habits and stalked him for days before it took him at the end of a hunting trip on April 26, while Reimers was sitting in shallow water cooling off.

Two work friends and police found his severed legs at two separate points along Mission Creek near the waterhole. They threw explosives into the waterhole, and the crocodile was dragged from the water dead. Reimers' body was found inside in eight pieces.

Early Decision Expected

No Objection at Open Meeting To Mall Expansion Rezoning

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

A special meeting of the city's subordinate planning advisory committee to consider three rezoning applications by the Quinte Mall, will be held in September, with mall spokesman saying site preparation for mall expansion will begin next week.

Ronald Ellingwood, executive vice-presidnt of Cambridge Leaseholds Ltd., told the advisory committee Wednesday fill operations will begin in a few-days in preparation for large-scall centre expansion.

At present the property to the west of the existing mall is low-lying and carries run-off storm water from the area of Highway 401.

Mr. Ellingwood said that site preparation, mall expansion and apartment construction is expected to cost a least $10 million and that "I have a hunch our complete project will make us the city largest, single taxpayer."

Mr. Ellingwood said, at 1975 rates, the existing mall pays a total business and property tax of $260,000.

The addition and apartments would boost this total to approximately $600,000.

The planning committee held a public meeting Wednesday to discuss the proposed property re-zoning which will allow mall expansion, construction of two apartment towers on the south side of Bell Blvd. and formation of industrial sites to the west of the mall.

There were no objections to the proposal and the re-zoning question has been referred to Quinte Planning Board staff for comment.

Committee chairman Ald. Joe Cox said a special meeting of the committee will be held to give "speedy" consideration to the scheme.

Ald. Cox said he expects a special meeting will be called in the early days of September in time for the committee to make a recommendation to a council meeting set for Sept. 22.

In his presentation to the committee, Mr. Ellingwood said the mall expansion will include a facility for a second "major department store — and floor space to accommodate about 20 more smaller stores" He did not name the major tenant.

Ronald Ellingwood

He said if the project wins the approval of council, he hopes the new shopping areas to be complete by the fall of 1976.

The apartment buildings will each contain 150 units.

The firm withdrew an application for re-zoning allowed which would have allowed construction of a motel on the site.

Mr. Ellingwod also stated development of the industrial sites is not expected right away, "unless one major industry takes the entire parcel. We're talking with one industry capable of using 15 to 25 acres right now'," he said.

Britain Admitting PLO Men

LONDON (CP) — The government announced Wednesday it is ready to admit members of the Palestine Liberaiton Organization (PLO) into Britain to attend a conference.

With the decision, Home Secretary Roy Jenkins has grasped a political timebomb of the kind the Canadian cabinet defused three weeks ago.

About 100 MPs of all parties have backed a Commons resolution condemning the visits of PLO members to a meeting of the 75-country Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU).

But Jenkins said in an open letter to one of the petitioners that his power to grant or refuse visas "should be used only to safeguard national interests, and not to express moral approval or disapproval of a particular person or visit."

The Canadian cabinet faced a similar issue last month, amid public outcry against PLO attendance at a United Nations conference on crime in Toronto.

External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen announced July 26 that the government felt the conference could not succeed anywhere. But a UN committee disagreed and decided to hold it in Geneva this fall.

The four PLO men invited to the IPU meeting as observers represent the PLO's political arm, the Palestine National Council. One has lived in Britain since 1971 and another carries a Kuwaiti diplomatic passport. Visas are to be issued to the two others.

Jenkins said in his letter he could "find no grounds on which it would be proper for me to refuse entry to the individuals concerned."

Mountie's Gun Kills Motorist In Breath Check

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP in nearby Richmond have opened an investigation into the death of Richard Petersen, 20, who was fatally shot Wednesday by a bullet fired from a city policeman's gun.

An RCMP spokesman said it appeared Constable Richard Musgrave, 28, a five-year veteran of the Vancouver force, had his gun drawn when he approached Petersen's car with the intention of taking him to Richmond RCMP headquarters for a breath test.

The police spokesman said Constable Musgrave got out of his car and was attempting to apprehend Mr. Petersen when a struggle ensued and the policeman's service revolver went off.

Former gangster Mickey Cohen said Hoffa "fell into a trap" and never will be seen again—dead or alive.

Asked who set the trap, the retired boss of West Coast rackets replied that "I cannot tell you that."

German Fire Quelled

HANNOVER, West Germany (Reuter) — About 11,000 troops and firemen today brought widespread heath and forest fires under control after a seven-day battle, police said. Strong winds which had fanned the flames across the parched Lueneburg heath dropped during the night, reducing the risk that the fires would spread further.

Quebec Situation Alarms

OTTAWA (CP) — An aide to P. B. Lesaux, assistant deputy Indian affairs minister, said the high mercury level in fish eaten by Indians in north-western Quebec "looks much, much more serious" than the situation in the Grassy Narrows and White Dog reserves near Kenora, Ont. Of 98 Indians tested this summer near Lake Matagami and Miquelon, 16 had more than 100 parts of mercury per billion in the blood and six had 75 parts per billion. Three others had levels above 500 parts per billion, the highest ever recorded in Canada. The normal blod mercury level is probably under 10 parts per billion.

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. Bronfman Case

Tape Shows Youth Alive

YORKTOWN HEIGHTS, N.Y., (AP — A tape recording indicating that kidnapped whiskey heir Samuel Bronfman II may still be alive is reported to be in the hands of his father after the father said he would pay what is believed to be a $4.5 million ransom.

The ransom, if paid, would be a record in the United States.

The recording of the 21-year-old Seagram heir's voice was received by his father, millionaire Edgar Bronfman, late Wednesday night. It was the first time Bronfman had heard from his son since he telephoned early Saturday to say three men had kidnapped him.

On Tuesday, the family received a warning by mail that Samuel had been "buried" somewhere in Westchester County with only 10 days supply of water and air.

A Westchester County police alert urged all departments to patrol remote areas where Samuel might be "buried."

Bronfman is reported to have received a telephone call late Tuesday, instructing him to pick up a package in New York. He flew to the city early Wednesday and went to an undisclosed location where he collected a tape of his son's voice and the kidnappers' instructions, sources said.

The case has become increasingly reminiscent of a Florida abduction seven years ago after virtually-identical personal advertisements appeared Wednesday in New York's three major newspapers. The ads read:

"Jack, please come home. Your mother is very anxious, we will be happier in the future." They were signed, "Fred Dollard."

The New York Daily News said the ads were placed by a Jack Mullaney, believed to be a Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) employee. The FBI would not comment.

The newspaper said the advertiser filled out a form saying he was placing the ads for a friend trying to locate a missing relative, but the address of the friend, "William McCrystal," turned out to be Mullaney's.

The New York Post said its records showed "Dollard" gave a Princeton, N.J., address, nonexistent on maps. The business address the man listed, Cornwall Associates at 663 Fifth Ave., was used as a mail drop.

The Post said that when its photographer went to the building, two blocks north of St. Patrick's Cathedral, a man in a blue suit leaped from his chair near an elevator, grabbed a brown satchel and fled with a second man. ..

A call to Cornwall Associates resulted in a long pause from the man who replied. He then claimed Cornwall was a management consulting firm.

Meanwhile, a news conference Wednesday, the family and official spokesmen said a lid of silence was being clamped on developments. They said silence might be a factor in Samuel Bronfman's safe return.

New Record

CHICAGO (AP) — Into the glare of television cameras and a horde of reporters emerged 40-year-old Henry Rabin, Chicago's newest champion. Nobody before had gotten so many parking tickets, 468, all unpaid, traffic court officials said.

"It just got out of hand," Rabin told Judge Richard LeFevour.

Rabin said: "I was working for this real estate firm located around Clark and Madison and I'd be in and out of the office all day, parking, you know, so it was a ticket here and a ticket there. Pretty soon, well, there were a real lot of tickets. So many I figured there was no way I could pay them. It sort of pyramided."

Five Diabetic Warnings To Children

If a child begins to drink great quantities of liquids but is continuously thirsty; if he eats more food than before, but loses weight steadily; if he begins to wet the bed after having previously stopped doing so; if he suddenly seems less peppy; and if he suffers from severe constipation — take him to the doctor as soon as possible..

These five symptoms present at one time are indications of a possible diabetes. A quick detection in children can be live saving. When treated early, diabetes, a chronic disease, can be controlled.

Resource Manual Summer Project

By RON HIUSER
Staff Reporter

PICTON — One of the summer projects under the Experience 75 program in the Quinte area is the compiling of local information to be used as a resource manual.

Since July 2, Brenda Burd has been involved with the project with co-operation with the Prince Edward County Board of Education.

"We're covering general information for tourists and local people which will list clubs, and other special activities," said Miss Burd.

The 18-year-old graduate from Prince Edward Collegiate said there will be sections for arts and crafts, schools, and short stories on local color.

"One of the sections will be on county ghosts, and other interesting tales," said Miss Burd.

The Sandbanks, first settled around 1800, said Miss Burd, is just one example.

"At that time, it was thickly forested and when the land was cleared the top soil began to shift, which started to cover roads and ruin the farming," said the PECI graduate.

The sand started to cover trees, and eventually entire farms, Miss Burd stated.

The government then stepped in and had the people moved to new locations and the Sandbanks were left with enough re-forestation to control the spread of the shifting sand, Miss Burd noted.

County history will also be part of the directory said Miss Burd.

"There will be charts and maps giving the location of historical points as well as all the rural routes and the county post offices."

Small histories of the local social clubs, as well as general information about industry, merchants and churches, giving names and phone numbers will be part of the booklet, stated Miss Burd.

Miss Burd said her project over-laps with two others being done by the Board of Education.

The other projects are a survey of the students who have received special education and the mapping of all the county school bus routes and the location of the students homes, throughout the county.

The co-ordinator of the project is Dianna Majury of Kingston who will hand in the reports once they are completed, said Miss Burd.

Miss Burd said she plans to take a course in honors science at Queen's University this fall.

Murray Wants Trenton Tie Before Giving Up Land

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

WOOLER — Trenton will not have any more land "handed to them" from Murray Township on its western boundary until the town ends its separated status ad joins politically with Northumberland County.

The indication of the township's sentiment was expressed in a brief it has filed with the Northumberland commission studying government restructuring in the county.

"It is obvious," says the brief, "we, as the abutting municipality, are not about to agree to wholesale lopping off of large tracts of land and dollars assessment . . . to permit Trenton's growth at Murray's expense."

The brief, composed by clerk Ken Rose and countersigned by Reeve Harry Lafferty, suggests, as an alternative, Trenton join "governmentally" with Murray and possibly with Brighton, both village and township.

Included in any such move there would be an agreement to protect rural residents from "enormous tax hikes" resulting from amalgamation.

If its terms are not met with favor, the township wants Trenton to remain as it is and join with Hastings County in the future.

The brief argues that before Trenton can chart its financial and development picture in the future it must undertake a study to determine its most advantagious position.

It calls for the study because it sees no restructuring study in Hastings County. Without one, Trenton cannot decide its destiny.

"There seems to be a reluctance on the part of elected people to relinquish the "separated town" status, but that special category is quickly becoming extinct," suggests the document.

It is one of 40 briefs that have been submitted to Northumberland commissioner Donald King, from special interest groups and councils in the county. The documents will be used as a basis on which to recommend alternative forms of government structuring in the county.

Mr. King has said his report will be complete by December this year. Now, the commissioner is in the midst of a series of public meetings to gauge public reaction to restructuring alternatives.

For its own future Murray Township suggests it join with the two Brightons in a larger municipality, one of several to be formed by amalgamation of Northumberland's 15 local governments.

"Some amalgamations are inevitable if we expect to realize any economics in operation," it sates.

It proposes that special purpose boards — boards of hospitals, libraries, and planning — all be eliminated as bodies that "go merrily along demanding financial support but avoiding and often even denying the necessity for co-operation and accountability".

Responsibilities of boards would be passed to local councils.

It predicts the end of "monthly meeting" councillors and "official function" reeves and mayors. Their jobs would become more inovlved in their posts, ones that would attract "suitable and capable candidates".

Postmaster Retires After 27-year Career

MADOC — Postmaster Cot Edwards has retired from the Madoc post office after 27 years in the mail service.

He said his last farewells to the heavy mailbags the wickets and the multitude of mail boxes last Wednesday afternoon. Also retiring is his wife, Kate, who has worked in the post office full time for the past 13 years. She worked there 4½ years prior to that on a part-time basis.

Mr. Edwards was born in England and he left home and came to Canada as a young man in 1926. He was first employed as manager of the Dafoe Hardware store.

In 1939 he went overseas during the Second World War and returned to Canada in 1946. He worked at the post office on a part-time arrangement for over seven years before he was named postmaster.

Although the couple has made no definite plans for their retirement, they will continue to reside in their home on Highway 62 just south of here.

They have one daughter, Joy, still at home. A student at Centre Hastings Secondary School she will be in Grade 13 when the fall term begins next month. There are two other daughters, Mrs. Shirley Devolin and Mrs. Grace Gimpel and two sons, Butch and Bud.

The new postmaster will be Mr. T. Gauthier from Pembroke, while Mr. Les Jackson, from CFB Astra in Trenton is replacing Mrs. Edwards.

Dairy Van Damaged

CORBYVILLE — A single-vehicle accident near here Wednesday has resulted in $400 damage to a van owned by Foster's Dairy of Tweed.

Belleville OPP said the accident occurred about 1:50 p.m. on the Fifth Concession, Thurlow Township. Driver of the vehicle, Raymond Murphy, 19, RR1, Tweed, was uninjured.

The van was southbound on Highway 7 when it attempted to pass another car. It ended up in the ditch. Police have laid a charge of unsafe passing against Murphy.

12-year-old Hurt in Mishap

BLOOMFIELD — An accident on Stanley St. here, Wednesday morning, resulted in a 12-year-old boy being taken to Kingston General Hospital with what police report as a broken pelvis and a skul fracture.

Transferred to Kingston from Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital was Thomas Foster of RR1, Bloomfield.

Police said the accident occurred when a 1974 van driven by Austin A. Wheaton, 27, of 1925 Silverberry Cres., Clarkson was in collision with the back of a tractor and haywagon on which Thomas, his brother Terry and sister Elizabeth were riding. The tractor was driven by Ross Foster, father of the children.

The other children of Mr. Foster, Elizabeth, 13 and Terry 10, were also taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital and treated and released, police report.

Constable Lintner of the Picton detachment of the Provincial Police said Mr. Wheaton was charged with careless driving.

The $10 Million Hobby That Bryce Mackasey Says Makes His Job Tolerable

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Bryce Mackasey collects stamps.

Canadian stamps, that is, on the First Day of Issue.

It is a $10 million hobby — for the Post Office — and the "only thing," growls the ever-troubled but still amiable Postmaster General, "that makes this damn job sufferable."

The $10 million is the revenue generated from the printing of commemoratives, up from $2 million.

They are the outsized pictorial-type stamps — as contrasted to the regular, more routine, well, let's say "standard" issue carrying Her Majesty's likeness.

They are printed in strictly limited quantities, seldom more than several million in any one issue, and go off sale and into collections within a year of First Day of Issue.

Apart from the regular Christmas issues, and the surcharged special stamps marketed as revenue-raisers for the Montreal Olympics, the commemoratives appear, ideally, at the rate of one each month.

Primarily — apart from revenue purposes — they are issued, this year, for example:

In celebration of the Calgary centennial . . . in recognition of the culture of sub-Arctic Indians . . . in honor of Canadian authors, Robert W. Service and his world-famed tales-in-verse of the Yukon's Trail of '98 gold rush, and Lucy Maude Montgomery and her Anne of Green Gables . . . in tribute to a Canadian institution, the Supreme Court and its first 100 years . . . in participation of an international event like International Women's Year . . . in salute to a national organization, the Royal Canadian Legion and its 50th anniversary.

What makes Bryce Mackasey and his Post Office — apart from their perennial problems — of topical interest right now is one of the special commemoratives.

So special that they are breaking all the rules and announcing its issue a year — to be precise 10 months — in advance.

The list of commemoratives routinely has been one of the best-kept secrets of the Post Office.

There is tight security on it until the Postmaster General, with a flare of trumpetry from the departmental flacks in a blast of press releases, lets go the official pronunciamento late in the year, along about the end of November.

They have to keep the lid on, because all manner of organizations have their high pressure lobbies pushing for commemoratives.

Cities want them. Provinces, too. Industries clamor for them. So do special interest groups.

To say "yes" to one and "no" to another is to cause one more problem and protest the Post Office, of all federal departments, doesn't need.

So when stamp collector Bryce Mackasey broke his own Postmaster General's vow of silence and proclaimed the issue, next June, of a stamp commemorating 100 years in national service of Royal Military College, the pressure on him had to be unbearable.

It was.

Letters, telegrams, phone calls, personal representations like the Post Office never before had.

"The letters," related Bryce Mackasey, "were that deep one day on my desk" (indicating a stack of a good two feet) "from cadets, ex-cadets, their wives, kids, parents, friends — even from people who never had any connection with RMC apart from admiring it from afar."

There were some distinguished ex-cadets, too, who might have twisted an arm; like former Conservative Trade Minister George Hees, Science and Works Minister Charles M. Drury, and Senator Hartland deMontarville Molson, all noted parliamentarians.

What is to go on the stamp?

Bryce Mackasey and Frank G. Flatters, chief of the Design Division of the Post Office, have three ideas:

A cadet in pillbox and scarlet jacket in front of Fort Frederick . . . the cadet wing on parade in scarlets on the RMC square . . . and the wing, again in scarlets, marching in through the Memorial Arch.

But they are open to ideas.

Ideas are their business.

Like with this year's Christmas stamps.

They have had kids in the schools all across Canada busy this past year designing the six holiday stamp specials.

Who better than kids to picture Christmas? Nobody, really.

And so the Post Office is culling through 80,000 entries. You will see the winners early this year, on sale for Christmas mailing, starting October 22.

Linguistic Anomalies

Laborious and ostentatious and even phoney as it oftentimes is, the concept of bilingualism in Canada is here to stay.

At the same time, the lengths to which ministers expect it to be carried can be too much.

It is harmless enough, if tedious, on occasions such as the prizegiving after the recent Canadian open golf championship in Montreal, to hear a galaxy of officials go through the entire exercise in both languages — inspiring Jack Nicklaus for one to say how marvellous we are up here, in taking the trouble to become bilingual when in fact, if he only knew, it is only a comparative few of the entire population who indeed are. And they, of course, are mostly in Quebec.

But when it threatens to interfere with public safety, in the context of air travel and a government plan permitting use of French in communications between pilots and air traffic control, it is a matter of concern.

Not surprisingly, pilots are protesting and threatening strike action, with possible support from the controllers.

For the fact, is, the language of communications from air to ground around the world, as it is in commerce, is English, be the pilot English, French, Turkish or whatever. Imagine the confusion if it were otherwise.

Pilots who have flown over French air space — and this is an ironic touch — will tell you that dealing with the controllers there can be more than a little confusing and even frustrating. And THEY are speaking in English.

Let's have French where it is feasible, but where it is more uniform and practicable and relevant to public safety, as it is in this instance, let's stick to English.

Quinte Race

Mayor Robin Jeffrey's nomination as Conservative candidate for the Quinte riding is the first step in what could be a promising career in provincial politics.

Mrs. Jeffrey is a candidate of obvious promise. In her second term as Mayor of Belleville, she has been a firm leader and capable administrator. It was these qualities, plus her experience, which no doubt weighed with delegates and gave her the edge over another fine candidate, Trenton insurance agent Doug Whitley.

Four successes at the polls to win a place as city alderman and subsequently the position of Chief Magistrate have helped Mayor Jeffrey to the position in which she finds herself today. The campaign is on and Mrs. Jeffrey may be said to have a head start. Five weeks of campaigning remain in which she may well prove the wisdom of the delegates' choice at Monday night's nomination meeting.

Political Intrigues

There is someone in this area who gets his kicks by mailing to non-afficiandos, or soulmates, material of a political nature.

He relishes addressing the receiver as "Comrade" and it goes without saying that such material relates to life under certain authoritarian regimes around the world.

The latest is a cover of Time magazine showing three members of the shaky new government in Portugal, with the heading: "Lisbon's Troika — Red Threat in Portugal."

The situation in Portugal of course is so fluid there is no knowing whether these three worthies are still in a position of leadership or not. One of them appears to be a police or army chief who has featured in some reports. In any event this is one embryo Communist set-up that is not having things all its own way.

What does transpire eventually will have a significant effect on the European and world scene, with Portugal's membership of NATO now suspect, and even neighboring Spain's political future, after the aging Franco goes, in some doubt.

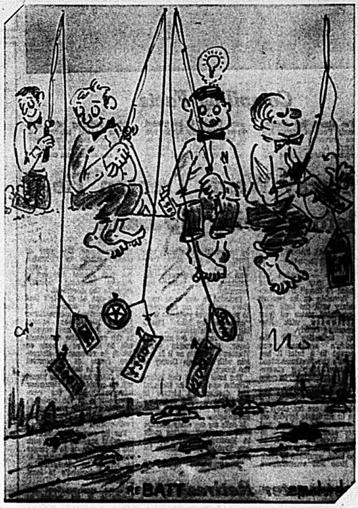
Hoffa Mystery

The disappearance of one-time top union boss James Hoffa may prove to be as baffling and insoluble as that of heiress turned political activist Patricia Hearst.

The United States is a very large country and the opportunities for going underground are demonstrably easy.

The kidnapping of 21-year-old Samuel Bronfman 11, whose father is chairman of the board of the Seagrams company, is another story of potentially mysterious proportions.

Whatever the public's image of these disparate personalities has been, there must be sympathy with their families in what has become, for some, an ordeal of our time.



Thorold, on Niagara Peninsula, Second Largest Pulp Centre And Typical of Community Evolution

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — This government puts out so many publications now that one hesitates to suggest yet another, but there is a booklet it could publish that I believe would be both valuable and most interesting.

This would be a capsule history of Ontario communities and cities.

This struck me when I was reading a news release on the unveiling of a plaque to mark the founding of Thorold.

This community in the Niagara Peninsula became Ontario's 40th city on July 1 this year.

Founded in 1828, it has had a fascinating growth.

It really grew out of the construction of the Welland Canal in 1824-29, and initially was built around a large flour mill.

By 1831 the community had two sawmills and a population of 370. Some years later Welland Mills, one of the largest flour mills in Canada, was built there. Then it got Ontario's first cotton factory.

It slowly but steadily grew and flourished until it now has a population of more than 15,000.

And it has the unique distinction of being the biggest pulp centre in the province outside of Thunder Bay, with five companies having major mills in the city and area

The most interesting party of a community can be its people, and in Thorold the major name is Keefer.

Jacob Keefer was the main figure in starting and developing Thorold, and Keefers have been prominent locally ever since.

But the family reached far beyond Thorold.

Thomas Keefer, a son of Jacob, developed into one of Canada's most distinguished engineers.

For a dozen years he headed the public works department of Canada and built the Victoria bridge in Montreal and Niagara bridge among many other accomplishments.

His early experience in childhood of watching the Welland Canal being built is generally credited for his keen interest in and knowledge of engineering.

Other descendants also had distinguished careers.

Every community has its stories along these lines, and a compilation of them could not only be fascinating but contribute to our knowledge of and pride in Ontario.

I know that Nova Scotia has, or at least had, such a booket, and on my last visit there I found it intriguing.

Western Pacific Rim Has Market Potential For Canadian Exporters

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce Commercial Letter

In recent years the western rim of the Pacific Ocean has attracted considerable attention as one of the most populous and dynamically growing areas in the world. Roughly 1¼ billion people, over one-third of the world's total population inhabit the western Pacific rim and its market potential is being aggressively explored by exporters throughout Europe and North America.

Japan has been and remains the economic mainspring of the entire area. The rapid post-war development of Japan created a substantial market for both the raw material exports of resource-rich neighbors like Australia, Indonesia and Malaysia and the lighter industrial products of countries like Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong. Japan's Asian neighbors have benefitted further from the steadily rising flows of direct investment and aid which have accompanied Japan's industrial development. Japan now rivals th United States as a major contributor of development aid to the area.

As each country has become more inter-dependent with Japan through trade, aid and direct investment, greater interaction among all of the nations of the Western Pacific Rim has become apparent. However, regional integration within the area remains limited. Disparate economic conditions and a patchwork of languages, customs, religions and political ideals have tended to discourage international co-operative efforts. Consequently, the current profile of Canadian trade in the Western Pacific Rim countries and the outlook for Canadian exports vary widely throughout the area.

In 1974. Canada's exports to the Western Pacific Rim totalled $2,434 million or 10.8 per cent of exports to all countries. Imports from the area were valued at $2,501 million, and represented just under eight per cent of Canada's total foreign imports. Canada's surplus on trade with the Rim thus amounted to almost $1 billion. Japan is by far our largest market in the area, absorbing just under 65 per cent of our Western Pacific rim exports last year. The People's Republic of China purchased over 12½ per cent of our exports and sales to Australia and New Zealand combined accounted for almost 11 percent of the total. These Pacific markets are referred to as the "Big Four" and combined accounted for over 88 per cent of our total exports to the Western Pacific Rim in 1974.

A very rapid acceleration in Canada's trade with the Rim has occurred since 1960 when Canada shipped less than $400 million worth of goods to this market. Between 1960 and 1974, the value of exports from Canada to the area grew more rapidly than our trade with the United States, the United Kingdom, or the original six-member European Economic Community.

Dramatic changes in ocean transport technology have been responsible to a large extent for this acceleration in trans-Pacific trade. Larger vessels, new deep water port facilities and containerization are just a few of many innovations which have sharply lowered ocean transort costs and encouraged Canadian exporters to ship goods across an ocean which is 6,000 miles wide and which covers more than one-half of the globe. The 1960s were also years of very rapid economic growth and high import demand in the Western Pacific Rim. Japan in particular, grew rapidly with annual growth rates often exceeding 10 per cent.

More recently, the acceleration in the growth of Canadian exports to the Western Pacific Rim can be attributed to a number of additional factors including some import liberalization measures in Japan, Australia and New Zealand. Global inflationary pressures also boosted Canadian export earnings in 1973 and 1974. This was particularly the case in the Western Pacific Rim where food and industrial commodities, which showed the most sizable price increases, weigh heavily among Canadian exports.

Nigerian Leader Deposed

The Christian Science Monitor

The ouster of Gen. Yakubu Gowon as Nigerian chief of state, while without civil disorder, leaves unsolved many problems for black Africa's richest and most populous country.

There are more than 250 ethnic groups among the country's 79 million people, with rivalry dating back centuries. Nigeria's oil production ranks sixth in the world, and the resulting wealth has led to inflation and corruption. Since independence was gained from Britain in 1960, there have been three coups d'etat, and the country has been under military rule for nine years.

General Gowon was an honest leader who had made admirable progress in healing the divisiveness among Nigeria's many groups, particularly following the unsuccessful attempt at Biafran secession eight years ago.

But he had been less successful in addressing the problems attending the country's changing economic status. This was reflected by labor demonstrations in reaction to growing inflation and government corruption. When he announced last year that the planned return to civilian rule scheduled for 1976 would not be carried out, students protested.

To his credit, Brigadier Muritala Muhammad, General Gowon's successor, does not appear to be emphasizing his position as a member of one of Nigeria's dominant ethnic groups, the Muslim Hausas. One point of controversy has been over questions of population and revenue based on a 1973 census; the new chief of state quickly sought to allay minority group fears by announcing that earlier census figures would be used. Also, his public statements since the takeover include goodwill gestures toward the deposed General Gowon. This, too, should help the transition to what it an be hoped will be forthright movement by the new government to solve Nigeria's social and economic problems.

Third World's Intellectuals a Potent Influence in Shaping Policy of 70s

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

GENEVA PARK — Guyana is a small country in the standard terms of population, geographical size and her place in the regional power structure.

She is one of the world's major bauxite producers, it is true, and is playing a major role in one of the Third World's new commodity cartels on bauxite pricing.

Her government already set the stage for future action on foreign-owned bauxite operations by nationalizing the Canadian and American-owned facilities in that country in 1971 and 1974.

The Guyaneso experiment in "co - operative democracy" which concentrates mainly on agrarian developments, looks like the much less successful experience in Tanzania along the same lines, which is called Ausha.

Therefore in trying out models for self-reliance, Guyana is intimately linked with other smaller Third World nations which must still pay their way from their natural resources and will do so from now on through concerted action rather than individual negotiating.

The other side of the picture is the way Guyana, oil-shy like many other developing nations, was hard hit by the price hikes of her oil-rich associates in the Third World.

Local arrangements in her Caribbean region chiefly from Venezuela, have been made to supply not only this tiny South American country from the British colonial heritage with oil, but also her hard-hit Central American Spanish-speaking neighbors.

But Guyana has another asset now coming to the fore beyond her borders, in the kinds of leaders, men of great oratorical and persuasive skills who are playing a growing role in both Third World activities in general and Commonwealth ones more particularly.

S. S. Ramphal, the former Guyanese foreign minister and first secretary-general of the Commonwealth from the Third World, is one of these.

He is an articulate, incisive, yet light-hearted performer who speaks with skills honed in the law courts of Gray's Inn and the legal academic world of the Harvard school of law.

He has established such expressions as calling the Commonwealth ""a sample of the developing world" a phrase which should go in the lexicon of phrases which capture hard-to-grasp concepts.

He is a man of great humor and much optimism, yet warns us we must find the road to consensus before the larger areas of confrontation will overwhelm us.

H. E. Dr. Robert Moore who had to terminate writing a book on Myth and Race in the Caribbean to become a diplomat as his country's high commissioner to Canada, is a superb performer on his feet.

He reminds his audiences that such apparent irrelevancies as memorizing sentences from the Book of Jeremiah each morning in school, digesting large dollops of Shakespeare have helped form his style and his magnificent behavioral view of his country and its multi-racial society.

Listen to his explanation of Caribbean immigration. "The history of the Caribbean is one of immigration into it, and emigration out, a pattern of one in and one out. It has always produced people bigger than the structures, people who have broken through the ceiling and ended up in Toronto."

Technology he has called "a new form of imperialism in machines."

And then there is Forbes Burnham, Guyana's forceful, dynamic and often angry prime minister who brings yet another style of oratory and persuasion as a Guyanese man.

All three are determined Third World men each speaking with some scorn of the colonial era they have left. But has it left them?

Its positive heritage surely, is the way the British educational system transferred to the Caribbean has shaped their speech, language and made them forceful, committed men for a time when the old empire would fade away.

Convicts Fight Fire

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Convicts from the Monteith Correctional Centre near here are earning up to $50 a day fighting a 500-acre forest fire about 60 miles northwest of Chapleau, Ont., the prison superintendent said Wednesday.

For two years firefighters from the ministry of natural resources have been training prisoners, Donald Griggs said, but this is the first time prisoners have been used in the field.

Each of the 25 men is serving a sentence of under two years, he said.

One guard travelled with the prisoners, all volunteers, when they were sent to the fire at the end of last week but worries about escapes were minimal because the area is remote, Mr. Griggs said.

The prisoners received about one week's training earlier this year in all aspects of fighting forest fires, including helicopter lifts and drops and water bombing.

Gray Won't Run

OTTAWA (CP) — Former cabinet minister Herb Gray ended months of speculation Wednesday, announcing that he will not be leaving federal politics to run in the Sept. 18 Ontario general election.

Mr. Gray, consumer affairs minister until shuffled out of the cabinet a year ago, was reported to be dissatisfied with his federal role as MP for Windsor West.

Plan Safeguards

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will amend the food and drug act this fall to force manufacturers to change their method of processing plastic food containers, which often contain vinyl chloride, a chemical linked with fatal liver cancer.

Dr. W. P. McKinley of the health protection branch said new regulations for the chemical will be recommended as a precaution. Exposure to it has been linked in the U.S. to 16 deaths from a rare type of liver cancer.

Explain New Law

OTTAWA (CP) — The corporate affairs department will hold six one-day briefing sessions in major centres across Canada during September and October to explain details of proposed new bankruptcy legislation.

The sessions start in Halifax Sept. 25 and wind up on Oct. 23 in Montreal. There will be meetings in Vancouver Oct. 8, Winnipeg Oct. 21, Edmonton Oct. 20 and Toronto Oct. 2.

Wagons at Kenora

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian wagon train, reduced in numbers but professing to be high in spirits, made an overnight stop at this Northwestern Ontario tourist centre before pushing on Wednesday in the long trek to northern Alberta

Only 11 of the 50 people, and five of 46 horses, remain from the group that started from southern Ontario in the spring. The original 13 covered wagons are down to two and an automobile has been added to the cavalcade.

Miss CNE Chosen

TORONTO (CP) — Janet Kennedy, 17, of Elliot Lake, Ont., was selected Miss CNE on Wednesday, winning over 82 contestants from Ontario.

Janet Kennedy, representing Massey Agricultural Society, succeeded Wendy Walford of Sudbury who also represented Massey Fair. She won a $1,000 cash prize, a trip to Vancouver and other prizes.

First runner-up was Karen Dejong, 16, of Centralia, representing Exeter Agricultural Society. Second runner-up was Kathy Gibson, 17, of Hastings, representing Roseneath Agricultural Society.

Police Talk to Motorist Who Thinks He Saw Kelly

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — A police representative has flown to Edmonton to meet with the unidentified motorist who believes he picked up suspected murderer Donald Kelly about 15 miles from North Bay and drove him to Calgary, Det.—Insp. W. C. Craig of the provincial police said Wednesday.

The motorist has identified a picture of Kelly as the hitchhiker he picked up Friday morning and left in Calgary Sunday afternoon, Insp. Craig said.

The motorist and policeman will retrace the route from Edmonton to North Bay, in an attempt to corroborate the man's story, he said.

Kelly, 37, who escaped from North Bay District jail Aug. 2, was being held on two charges of murder after being captured in Edmonton.

Edmonton police believe Kelly may be heading for that city in a bid for revenge on one and possibly two city police detectives and a woman who were instrumental in his arrest there.

A desk clerk in a Calgary hotel told police in that city that a man resembling Kelly came into the hotel Sunday and asked for a room.

The clerk said the man was "pretty scruffy looking" and when she told him the hotel was full, he left.

She said that when Calgary police showed her a drawing of Kelly, 37, she recognized the scars on the man's forehead and "thought it was him but she wouldn't swear to it."

Insp. Craig said Sunday that "until we are positive that he is there, we have to assume he is still in our area.

"There have been many cases of mistaken identification and we can't take chances of this being another one."

Record for Fires

TORONTO (CP) — The ministry of natural resources said Wednesday that Ontario has set a record for forest fires in one season, with 2,289 reported since April 1.

Ministry officials said the previous record of 2,264 forest fires was set in 1936.

Police Plan Demonstration Backing Capital Punishment

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The Police Association of Ontario (PAO) voted Wednesday to hold a demonstration in support of capital punishment on Parliament Hill Oct. 22 if the federal government commutes the death penalty in the case of Rene Vaillancourt, convicted of murdering a Toronto policeman.

Delegates to the annual PAO convention voted to schedule the demonstration on the same day as a association's quarterly meeting in Ottawa, so that representatives from the 131 police associations in the province who plan to attend the meeting can participate.

Vaillancourt, 26, of Montreal is convicted of the 1973 slaying of Constable Leslie Maitland. He is sentenced to be hanged Oct. 31, but the date of execution has been postponed twice.

A PAO spokesman said the organization plans to inform the Canadian Police Association of the demonstration. Off-duty Ottawa policemen are expected to participate.

The PAO conference also heard a report Wednesday calling for changes in 25 sections of Ontario's Police Act. Submitted by Rod Gilmour, PAO director, the report includes proposals to give police associations increased bargaining powers in contract disputes, allow policemen to moonlight, and improve officers' rights at internal police trials.

"We must demand equal rights with the criminal as they pertain to the deportment of a hearing or tribunal," Mr. Gilmour said in a letter accompanying the report.

The Police Act, which he described as a "literary piece of harassment," puts the burden of proving innocence on the accused policeman rather than on the prosecution, he said.

Don Stannard of the Windsor Police Association, called for changes in the Municipal Act to increase pension benefits for policemen. He said officers should receive a pension based on their salary at retirement rather than career earnings and military service should be included as pensionable time.

PAO delegates were also told that current gun control legislation is sufficient but courts must impose penalties for abuse of firearms under the Criminal Code.

Meryle Cameron, president of the PAO, said the gun control issue will be discussed at a Canadian Police Association meeting in September.

The conference ends Friday.

Reid Denies Knowing Tax Details

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MP John Reid denied during eight hours of questioning Wednesday that he had advance details of a government tax bill and said information he passed on to businessmen in his riding was based on "intuitive knowledge."

Mr. Reid, parliamentary secretary to House Leader Mitchell Sharp, said Montreal Gazette was wrong when it reported last month he was fed advance details of tax proposals.

He was appearing before the commons privileges and elections committee, ordered by the speaker at Mr. Reid's request to investigate the allegations.

Publisher Mark Farrell of The Gazette said in testimony Tuesday that the newspaper stands by the story, but added he regretted the original article had the time element wrong. The first story said the leak came before the budget, but the newspaper later apologized and said the information was fed to Mr. Reid in advance of an amendment to a tax bill.

Mr. Reid said he was exaggerating when he said flatly to Gazette reporter Jacques Hamilton that the tax would come off. What he meant was that by listening to "scuttlebutt and gossip" and by watching pressure build against the tax in the Liberal caucus, he formed the conclusion the it would be removed.

He did not blame the reporter for taking the words "we knew six weeks in advance" the tax was coming off in a different sense than was intended.

But he said the reporter's notes, tabled before the committee Tuesday, show that in a second interview he had said a letter to some constituents outlined "my opinion that" the tax would be coming off. That showed a contradiction in the reporter's notes, Mr. Reid said, adding that the reporter should have checked back to clear up the matter before writing the story.

Mr. Reid also complained that the newspaper apology had been carried in the body of a front-page story and in an editorial, but in another case where it made a mistake the newspaper carried a prominent correction on the front page.

He also said changes made in a transcript of House of Commons proceedings discussing the story might be seen as taking out comments favorable to him and leaving in those that supported the newspaper's case.

Managing Editor Brodie Snyder said Tuesday the deletions were made because of space limitations and "human error" was involved. He apologized to the committee and denied there was any malicious intent.

Mr. Reid said he had spoken with Finance Minister Turner and "came away convinced the tax would be removed." But that was his opinion and not any categorical statement from the minister.

Peterborough Man Made Error in Reid Affidavit

OTTAWA (CP) — A Peterborough, Ont., businessman said in an affidavit to a Commons committee Wednesday he was wrong in earlier statements about advance information on a budget speech.

Thomas McMillan, president of Outboard Marine Corp. of Canada Ltd., said in an affidavit July 25 that he was told two weeks before the federal budget Nov. 18 an excise tax was being imposed on boats.

He said the information came from a boat dealer in Kenora, Ont., who said he got it from his local MP, John Reid.

But in a second affidavit to the Commons committee, filed Wednesday, Mr. McMillan said: "I regret I confused the matters."

A review of his files showed the call from the Kenora dealer came after the budget, saying the proposed tax might be removed.

The affidavits were given to the Commons committee on privileges and elections, now looking into allegations contained in a Montreal Gazette story last month.

The newspaper said that Mr. Reid was fed advance details on the tax measure and had communicated them to businessmen in his riding.

Mr. eid has deniedR the allegations. He said all he had was "intuitive knowledge" the tax would be repealed, based on his experience in the Commons and watching closely statements by the minister in the House.

He said he told constituents who asked about the tax that it "would likely" be removed.

Saskatoon Easier Now

SASKATOON (CP) — City playgrounds may again be filled with children today after the bodies of four youngsters were discovered Tuesday night and a suspect was arrested.

But Wednesday was a day of grief for eight parents after they learned their missing children were dead.

A man picked up for questioning early Tuesday on an unrelated matter was questioned by detectives assigned to the missing children's case.

Late Tuesday, police were led to two separate gravesites in the bush covered with debris just outside the city limits.

Because of community feelings, security was heavy Wednesday when a 30-year-old truck driver was charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment.

David William Threinen of Saskatoon stood impassively with his tattooed arms folded as Judge Robert Conroy read the charges in magistrate's court.

Ontario PC Trust Funds Double Those of Liberals

TORONTO (CP) — Statements filed with the provincial commission on election contributions and expenses show that Ontario Progressive Conservative riding associations have more than 20 times as much money in trust accounts as their Liberal counterparts.

The statements, filed to comply with the Elections Expenses Act, show that as of Feb. 13, the day the bill was introduced in the legislature, 72 of the 125 Conservative riding association had a total of $905,906 on hand in trust accounts.

For the Liberals, 29 riding associations reported a total of $44,772 and the NDP reported $25,150 held by 16 ridings.

The reports indicate that Conservative Douglas Kennedy, MPP for Peel South in the last legislature, has a riding trust account of $26,100, the largest total for any single riding.

That contrasted with the poorest of the Conservative riding associations, Peel North—to become Brampton under the new redistribution—which reported $6.35 in trust. The member for Peel North in the last legislature was Premier William Davis.

Hovercraft to Be Used

KAPUSKASING, Ont. (CP) — A cable hovercraft ferry system which would provide a year-round crossing between Moosonee and Moose Factory was announced Wednesday by John Rhodes, minister of transportation and communication.

Mr. Rhodes said at a special open cabinet meeting that his ministry is negotiating with community leaders to establish the new service as soon as possible.

The hovercraft, towed along a cable, should be capable of carrying up to 15 tons of freight and passengers. The 1½-mile crossing would take an estimated 15 minutes, said Mr. Rhodes.

Niagara Peach Crop Big

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Niagara peninsula peach growers face a bumper crop but fewer sales.

Crops are estimated to be 41,000 tons this year, a 4,000-ton increase from 1974. But processors who purchase most of the peach crop have indicated they still have fruit stored from last year.

John Bright, president of the Bright Canning Co. of Niagara Falls, Ont., said Wednesday his company has told growers it will take 25 per cent fewer peaches for processing this year.

And Niagara Fruit Products of Stoney Creek, Ont., the area's largest cannery, has closed.

CHIPPING THE PRICE

DEVON, England (CP) — Customers who take their own potatoes to the Spanish Bar restaurant have 33 cents chopped off their bill. Owner Barry Newlands said: "With potato prices rising almost daily, this is the only way I can keep my prices down."

GM to Raise U.S. Prices

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors, the world's largest auto-maker, said Wednesday it will raise retail prices in the United States an average of $268, or 4.7 per cent, when 1976 models go on sale this fall.

GM said base prices will rise an average $206, or 4.4 per cent, while options go up an average $62, or six per cent.

The suggested retail price of an average-equipped GM car will increase to $4,970 in the U.S. The price does not include shipping charges, dealer preparation or taxes.

The largest percentage increases were applied to the firm's small cars, which have grown in popularity as a result of higher gasoline prices.

Tourists Spend Less This Year

By MICHAEL SASGES
CP Staff Writer

Tourists, looking for savings this summer, appear to be putting fewer miles on the family car and spending less money.

That's the over-all indication from provincial and federal tourism departments and the Canadian tourist industry whose combined statistics show a typical Canadian traveller stays near his home and shares a campsite with another resident of his province and an American.

This is especially true in Ontario, visited by 22.8 million of the 35.2 million Americans who travelled in Canada in 1974.

Recreational vehicles are more popular as travellers opt for higher gasoline bills to try to save on restaurant meals and hotel and motel accommodation.

And fewer young people, if the decrease in occupancy rates at hostels is an indication, are hitch-hiking across Canada this summer.

Government and industry statistics also show trends about holidaying Canadians who cross provincial boundaries.

Travellers to Saskatchewan visit primarily to see relatives or friends, statistics from that province's tourism branch show.

If the tourist is a Newfoundland resident, chances are he will head for Prince Edward Island, say P.E.I. tourist industry statistics.

And if the tourist visits Newfoundland, he will stay about two weeks, the longest average stay by tourists anywhere in Canada, say government officials.

Only Ontario, where the average visit was 13.1 nights in 1974, comes close.

The visitors to British Columbia will face a higher cost of living than he is used to and labor problems.

Airline companies report that the number of passengers, if it hasn't decreased, has increased less than expected.

Ontario is Canada's tourist centre. About 25 million people visited the province last year and no drop is seen by the government this year.

Americans spent $700 million last year and Canadians, 76 per cent of whom were Ontario residents, $369 million.

And the government reports more Ontario residents are staying in the province this summer to beat inflation.

Many of these appear to be heading for provincial parks. A natural resources ministry spokesman says park use increased 25 per cent in the first two months of the tourist season from a similar period last year.

Some hotels and motels report 10-per-cent drops in occupancy rates. Others report normal business, although some patrons appear to be put off by high costs.

"There's noticeable resistance these days to having bellhops fetch your luggage, which means tourists are trying to save on tips," said Peter Grise, manager of one of the larger lake resorts in Ontario.

Tourism is the No. 1 industry in Quebec and although figures on tourist spending aren't kept, the No. 2 industry—pulp and paper production—produced about $1 billion last year, says Robert Prevost of the province's tourism, fish and game department.

American visitors, the most numerous last year, dropped slightly in number in the first three months of this year.

Montreal hotels say occupancies generally are down from normal summer rates and Montrealers who live off tourism are facing their own recession.

Because mining, newsprint production and fishing are the big industries in Newfoundland, that province is considered on the fringe of the tourist industry.

Hotels and motels in St. John's are always full because of conventions and a shortage of rooms.

Newfoundlanders are a stay-at-home crowd and spent $74 million of the estimated $114 million in tourist dollars last year.

Officials of the 49 provincial parks say visits by recreational vehicles, which increased by almost 20 per cent between 1973 and 1974, could increase by that percentage again.

On Prince Edward Island, it was not known how many of 600,000 tourists last year were from out of the province.

The latest government figures show that almost 39 per cent of this year's visitors are using camp grounds, although the hotel and motel business remains stable.

Tourism, the third most important industry on the island after agriculture and fishing, is expected to grow five per cent this year.

In Nova Scotia, tourists have increased nine per cent from last year, government statistics show. And Americans, assured of a steady gasoline supply, appear to be increasing their numbers.

Tourism, Nova Scotia's third industry after fishing and manufacturing, was worth $76 million last year—and most of that was spent by non-residents.

Hotels and motels at border crossings report brisk business but it's not the same in other areas because of rising gasoline prices.

New Brunswick officials say business looks good. More recreational vehicles are being spotted this year, but hotels and moetls are not losing business.

Tourism is the fifth-largest industry in Manitoba, which attracted a record 3,380,000 visitors last year.

Of almost $296 million spent last year by tourists, $194 million was spent by Manitobans. Figures for this year are not available yet, but the trend probably will be repeated.

The use of provincial parks and campsites is up to where it's almost impossible to find a spot, say spokesmen, but hotels can't complain.

Occupancies have increased in Winnipeg since 1974 and are static across the province because room prices have not increased at the same rate as in Eastern Canada, a Manitoba tourism department spokesman said.

In Saskatchewan, a government spokesman said more people are staying at home this summer. Provincial parks were busy in July and overflows were reported at campgrounds each weekend.

Northern Saskatchewan is being visited by more tourists—especially Americans—this year because of good weather and road improvements.

Albertans are another stay-at-home group of tourists.

Of the 6,662,000 tourists in Alberta last year, 4,700,000 were residents and this doesn't appear to be changing.

The Alberta Motor Association says use of recreational vehicles appears to be growing and provincial parks report heavy business and overflows on weekends.

But hotel and motel occupancies have either increased since 1974 or remained stable.

Kelly Jaber, an Edmonton taxi driver, said he believes tourists are trying to save money.

"They still tip, but more of them seem to be taking buses."

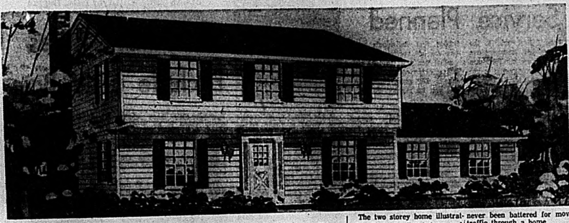
Tourism, worth about $869 million to the British Columbia economy last year, is expected to increase 12 to 15 per cent this year, says Hugh Main of the Greater Vancouver Visitors and Convention Bureau.

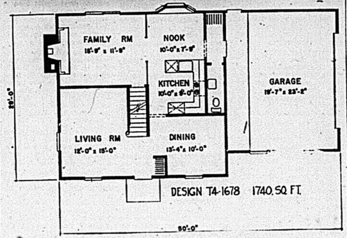
But the hotel industry in the province's Interior and in Vancouver and Victoria reports business is off.

Duncan Myers of the Cariboo Tourist Association says operators are disturbed by the number of tourists camping free on Crown land.

The B.C. government says more people are visiting the province this year and Mr. Main says inquiries at the bureau's office are about 10 per cent ahead of the 1974 rate.

Home of the Week





DESIGN T4-1678 1740 SQ FT.

The two storey home illustrated is finely detailed indoors and out. It should have particular appeal to those who enjoy antiques and who could furnish it to complement its traditional Colonial styling.

The heart of this home is the spacious family room with adjoining kitchen and nook the modern counterpart of the old Colonial family kitchen.

In its modest 1,740 square feet of living space there are four bedrooms, two and one half baths, a separate formal dining room and very generous closet space. The centre hall plan has never been battered for moving traffic through a home.

In spite of its appealing exterior, the design is a basic cube with a simple gable roof and it should therefore provide living space at the lowest obtainable cost per square foot.

Also available is design T4-1658, essentially identical inside but with its exterior showing the New England "salt box" rather than the Colonial treatment.

Plans for Design T401678 cost $35 for the first set, $11 each additional set and are supplied by return mail. New second editions of two books, "Home Designs for Canadians" are available from Home Planning 40 Jarvis St., Toronto for $1.50 each or by mail Book 1 presents 95 designs for homes up to 1,600 square feet for one storey and split level, 1,850 square feet for one and one half and two storey. Book two shows 91 larger home. (Ontario residents please add 5 per cent to all purchase orders to cover Sales Tax.)

Airplanes Replace Towers In Forest Fire Spotting

BIG ROW AKE, Ont. (CP) — For Gladys Ball and Russell Jocko, sunshine, cloudless skies, busy camp grounds and hikers all spell one thing—disaster.

Mrs. Ball and Mr. Jocko are forest-fire spotters, the last two persons in Ontario who spend lonesome summers perched in spindly-legged towers watching for wisps of smoke.

Once there were hundreds in fire towers across the province, but now only two towers in Algonquin Park remain. The others have been replaced by the airplane.

After 30 years as a housewife, raising four girls and living a quiet rural life in the village of Denbigh, Mrs. Ball announced to her husband she had a job as a fire-spotter.

She is the first woman to be employed for the job and daily she must climb a 500-foot-high cliff to get to the base of the 100-foot-high tower. Then she must climb, hand over hand, up a metal ladder between the girders that hold up the cabin.

It's a hard job for anyone but Mrs. Ball, 63, said with pride: "It took me an hour to get to the top from the cottage when I first arrived but now I can get to the tower in 25 to 28 minutes and I'm doing just fine."

Once in the towe rshe stays there for 6½ hours and scans the horizon constantly, and occasionally helps the curious hiker who manages to clamber through the trap-door into the octagonal, eight-foot-wide cabin.

She must keep in touch with district fire stations by radio, detail weather conditions and record relevant information in a log book.

Fifteen miles to the west is her companion fire-spotter, Mr. Jocko, whose own 85-foot-higher tower can just be seen by Mrs. Ball.

Mr. Joiko, a 38-year-old Algonquin Indian from Golden Lake Reserve, has been a towerman for eight years after working in the bush as a forest fire-fighter, a reforestation worker and lumber mill hand.

He said he likes his single life in the tower and spends his free time sketching and writing poetry.

Both he and Mrs. Ball earn $25 a day and sign new contracts each season.

Until September, when they return to their homes, mrs. Ball and Mr. Jocko will carry on being fire-spotters—a tradition that had its origins when the first tower was erected in the park in 1922.

Deal With Seizures

EDMONTON (CP) — Police trainees are taking courses sponsored by the Edmonton Epilepsy Association on what they should and shouldn't do when they encounter an epileptic having a seizure. Association executive director Betty Holmes said the group decided to assist in the police training program so constables will be better able to identify and treat epileptics who have seizures in public.

SIGHT RESTORED

LONDON (AP) — More than 65,000 blind people in 13 countries had their sight restored during 1974 in medical projects sponsored by the Royal Commonwealth Society for the Blind. Princess Alexandra, the society's president, announced the figures at the annual meeting and said this big expansion in the world's largest sight-saving program was made possible by increased giving by the public.

Research Community

KIPLING, Sask. (CP) — Two Canadian researchers are studying the pattern of life of the Hungarian community in this southeastern Saskatchewan town. Dr. Gaza Rowhan of the National Museum and Dr. Robert Bloomstock, a professor at McMaster University in Hamilton, will examine family structure, religious problems and assimilation patterns. Results will be used for university research.

CUT DOWN ON EGGS

WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1945, the average American ate nearly 400 eggs a year. Last year he ate only 287, and consumption in 1975 is expected to drop another dozen, according to the United States department of agriculture. Spokesman for the department attribute the cut in egg consumption to low-cholesterol dieting.

From Mouths Of Babes

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Mary Keshen, president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals here, said she recently tried to explain to a small boy just what her organization does. "We're not just interested in cats and dogs, I explained, but ducks and horses and bears. We're interested in all animals." She told a Rotary club meeting the boy was a bit puzzled but "after a minute he looked up at me and said, quite incredulously, 'Even snakes?'"

Too Many Impaired

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Yellowknife has more drunk drivers per capita than Edmonton, Red Deer or Lethbridge and the RCMP has urged all residents to take note of the situation and assist in controlling the problem. RCMP estimate that 300 persons will be charged with impaired driving in Yellowknife this year, one in every 27 residents of the northern city.

Chauffeur Service Planned

By ISABEL HUGGAN

"In helping others you end up helping yourself too," says Enid deSmidt, as she talks about the plan she hopes will receive a Local Initiatives Project grant.

Mrs. deSmidt, herself slightly handicapped, wants to help Belleville citizens who have trouble getting around in the winter because of age or physical disability. She is organizing a free chauffeur service that will run from November until May if the grant is approved.

"This project will be as good for me as for the people who will use it," she says. "I've always wanted to do something useful like this.

"When I first went to the Manpower LIP representative (Terry Wilton) my idea was to invite elderly people to use my home as a kind of centre. But then in conversation this idea evolved and it seems a better, more useful one. It'll be good for children as well as older people."

Mrs. deSmidt has carried out a survey to see whether her service is needed in the city, and so far has had an encouraging response from several organizations; the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Bellcrest Nursing Home, Cheshire Home, the Canadian Cancer Society and several senior citizens' groups.

However, Mrs. deSmidt is hoping that individuals who can use her service will also contact her now, so that she has evidence of its usefulness for the LIP grant committee. She can be reached at 966-5094.

"There will be four chauffeurs available during the day to drive people to stores or appointments. It's so important that handicapped people feel independent, able to get where they want to go.

"Sometimes people with disabilities are too proud to ask for help of any kind, but I've learned myself that it's silly to refuse assistance if you need it."

Recently separated from her husband, Mrs. deSmidt and her two sons moved to Belleville last November. She has had several years of experience in office work, and looks forward to handling the phone calls and the organization of her service.

Preparing the way for this project has convinced Mrs. deSmidt that there is a need not only for her city-wide service, but for drivers to take individuals back and forth to Kingston for doctor and clinic appointments. She's hoping that someone else will take over in that area.

"Because of the limited funds available for mileage, we may have to use small cars, and I'm not sure what we'll do about wheelchairs," she says, "but I'm sure we'll find solutions if problems arise.

"I feel so happy at the thought of getting the service started."

Enid deSmidt, planning a chauffeuring service for handicapped citizens of Belleville, says that events in her life have persuaded her that the most important reason for living is to serve others however you can.

ALL IN THE FAMILY/by Isabel Huggan

Restaurant Rules Exclude Little Boy

In the middle of last week's heat wave, a young couple headed for dinner at an air-conditioned restaurant in the city. Although they were hot, they had dressed up a little for the event. Their three-year-old son, however wore a pair of terrycloth shorts.

"Sorry!" said an employee at the entrance to the restaurant, "You can't come in. Your little boy doesn't have a shirt on."

"But he's only three and it's so hot," argues the parents, their mouths watering for the steak they could smell as they stood inside the door.

"Sorry, our policy says everyone must wear shirts," said the rule-conscious employee, and no amount of persuasion could change her mind. There were going to be no half-naked children in this restaurant, no matter how clean, tidy or well-behaved.

The couple went to another restaurant eventually, both shocked and amused by the incident. Although they had encountered dress discrimination before — and had learned to either avoid those places or go along with the regulations — it hadn't occurred to them that a pre-school child would be expected to obey a dress code.

It wouldn't occur to most of us, would it? Surely most people aren't offended by a three-year-old's bare chest. Surely there is no sensible reason that we should make children conform to adult peculiarities.

And dress regularities are pretty peculiar, even for those who are grown up.

For instance, in one of the city's night spots, customers may not enter if wearing blue jeans. Last spring, a young man in a spiffy, brand new pair of jeans, when refused admittance, went home and changed into old, stained, grungy corduroy pants. When he returned, he was allowed inside, although his appearance had definitely changed for the worse.

At the same establishment, young men were also being refused entry if they were wearing fashionable sleeveless cotton T-shirts. But a young woman, in exactly the same outfit, with much more reason to be more completely clothed — had no problem getting in.

It all seems quite confusing, doesn't it? And maybe just a little silly.

Restaurants and bars have a perfect right, of course, to set standards of dress for admittance. But surely those rules should be more realistic, more consistent, and certainly, more flexible.

For example, if a pub or club hires rock groups and installs decor that appeals to young people, it should be prepared to admit jeans-clad patrons.

And if the city is in the middle of the sultriest hot spell in years, its restaurants should bend established rules to allow lightly-clad customers to dine in comfort.

And if one sex is allowed entry in one kind of outfit, surely the other sex should have equal privilege.

The deciding factor about suitable dress should have to do with neatness and cleanliness, not style or material. And elements such as age and weather should surely be taken into account.

A phone call to the restaurant mentioned at the beginning of this column brought forth the excuse that the bare-chested child had been turned away by a relatively new employee, and that a seasoned member of staff might have interpreted the house rules differently.

But this was a defensive explanation; besides, the employees shouldn't have to bear the responsibility for interpreting a set of rigid rules.

Perhaps the answer is the one found by restaurants requiring ties, that keep a tie or two at the door for tieless customers. Our "no bare tummies" restaurant could stock a series of cover-all bibs for immodest babies, solving the problem all round.

Holiday Near Home

You can have a reasonable holiday and not have to go further than Belleville. With the price of gas being so high these days, we all hate to put many miles on our car but still it is great to have a holiday. From 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. a family can enjoy holiday fun for just $10.00 a day. How? Join the Poolside Gang at the Four Seasons Hotel. That $10.00 entitles you to a day room where you can relax, watch T.V. or change for the pool. Besides the swimming pool, you can enjoy the facilities of the exercise room, the sauna, tennis courts or shuffleboard. What more could you ask for on your holiday? Well, the real finishing touch would be dinner in the Terrace Dining Room. Call 968-3411 for reservations.

For Antique Lovers

There are many people in our area that enjoy antique furniture and are fascinated by the period homes from which this furniture has come. If you are one of these people, give yourself a real treat one day and have lunch at the Inn on the Bay Tavern in Picton. You'll be welcome to wander through the tavern and ball room where you'll be fascinated by interior design that's over 100 years old and a few select antique furnishings. The main house was built around 1805 but the transformation didn't take place until around 1860 when four towers of French Gothic style were added. Let your imagination take you back a hundred years, but don't forget to enjoy your scrumptious luncheon. You'll want to go back again and again.

You'll Be Floored!

At this time of year many people are moving in order that they will be settled in in time for their youngsters to start school. Once the furniture has gone, a big chore in moving is to have your present accommodation ready for the new occupants. This can be a real back breaking job if you have to get down on your hands and knees and strip all the tile floors. Before you start, give ServiceMaster a call at 967-1672 and inquire about the cost of having them do it for you. I think you'll be pleasantly surprised. Their prices are reasonable and an average floor can be finished within an hour — stripped, rinsed and waxed. You'll never believe your floors could look so beautiful!

Plan A or Plan B?

The price of everything is so high these days that we are always glad to hear of some means of saving money. We have brought to your attention before the Parts Replacement Plan that Moira-Schuster has available for their customers. It also covers the high cost of labor, plus once a year cleaning. (And we all know a clean furnace is an economical furnace.) Now, however, Moira-Schuster have another saving plan for you. It's called the Furnace Replacement Plan. If covers everything in the Parts Replacement Plan, pus the repacement of your furnace should you need it. Inquire today for cost and further information at 962-4504.

Ann Landers

Dreams Aren't Horseradish

Dear Ann Landers: My neighbor is a good-natured, semi-moronic slob who has been driving me up the wall for months with her dream interpretations. I've always believed in facing reality, so dreams are not my dish.

Last week I became so fed up that I bought her a rather expensive book on what dreams mean, hoping she'd leave me alone. I was mistaken. Now she comes over with the book I bought, reads aloud what it says about her latest dream and asks me a million questions. My head is about to split.

Will you please tell me if dreams have any meaning? Personally, I think it's a lot of horseradish. Please tell her I'm right, and cool it.—Sick Of Mrs. Clattertrap

Dear Sick Of Mrs. C.: Dreams aren't "horseradish." They have real significance. But very few untrained people are able to interpret their dreams. Most dreams are loaded with symbolism, substitute people and a whole host of confusing elements.

Since your friend is hooked on this hobby, tell her, flat out, to practice somewhere else because you don't want to hear any more.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm glad I didn't read your answer to "Miss 16" when I was 16. It would have caused me considerable anguish.

Like "Miss 16," I adored my mother, hated my father, and kept falling in love with other girls. Fellows turned me off.

While most of my female friends outgrew their schoolgirl crushes, mine continued through college. I was too inhibited for physical sex, but the love object of my fantasies was a woman teacher.

At 23, I fell in love with a boy for the very first time. He was 18. After that I had a beautiful platonic relationship with a man my father's age.

At 29, I met my husband and felt like a starry-eyed, love-sick teen-ager. We have been happily married for 20 years and have four wonderful children.

The rate of emotional growth varies tremendously from person to person. Mine was extremely slow, which wasn't so bad in my day, when sexual choices were delayed. I just hope the "slowpokes" who read your column won't agonize about being homosexual because they prefer the wrong sex at age 16.—Straight Turtle

Dear Turtle: You write well, but you don't read too hot. "Miss 16" not only preferred girls, but she had several Lesbian relationships—along with "despising boys."

You had fantasies about a woman teacher but you never acted them out. From your letter, I gather your first sexual relationship at age 23 was with an 18-year-old boy. And then you met the man you married. A late bloomer? Yes. A Lesbian? No.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm not asking for help. I just hope certain people will see themselves and shape up.

Recently you printed a letter about a friend who was always late. Well, I have a relative who is NEVER late. She just doesn't show up. More often than not, she will phone 20 minutes before I leave the house and say, "I just can't make it."

Frequently when I arrive at the place we were supposed to meet, there will be a message. "Sorry—something came up at the last minute . . ."

It's impossible to discontinue our relationship because she's a member of the family—and sensitive, to boot. What can I do?—Slow Burn

Dear S. B.: Those frequent "no shows" are a sad breed. Often they make dates in advance fully intending to keep them, but when the time comes they can't seem to get it all together.

Simply plan around such people. Assume they aren't going to make it. When they do it will be a pleasant surprise.

Dear Ann Landers: This same thing happened twice within three weeks and I need to know if something is wrong with me because I really feel hurt. (I should tell you I'm a girl, age 14.)

I'll be walking with a friend and another girl will come up and invite my friend to a party, tell her how great it will be, and leave me out completely.

What is your opinion? Am I—Too Sensitive?

Dear Sense: Any person who would discuss a party invitation in front of someone who is not invited is a slob.

More Women Are Using Guns, Going Hunting

MONTREAL (CP) — You don't have to be a man to be an expert hunter and marksman.

More and more women own and use guns in the traditionally male-dominated field of hunting. Out of 510,000 people who have certificates and qualify for a Quebec hunting licence, about 38,700 or eight per cent are women, Paul-Emile Pageau from the Quebec Wildlife Federation says.

Jacques Boucher, an expert hunter and editor of the magazine Chasse et Peche, puts the estimate even higher, at about 10 to 15 per cent.

Statistics from the government are not broken down according to sex.

Since 1969, when the law requiring a certificate for a licence was passed, women from urban areas have been joining the field at a faster rate, Mr. Boucher said in an interview.

"Women are interested in changing their life-styles and being more active. Hunting is an enjoyable sport for serious people who can follow regulations and be responsible. Why shouldn't women be involved?"

To become a hunter in Quebec a person must first obtain a certificate, issued after completion of a nine-hour course and an exam on safety procedures and handling of a gun.

"The best way to become interested in the field is to join a hunting or shooting club," Mr. Boucher's wife, Jacqueline a hunter herself, said.

"There are good camping grounds with convenient outdoor facilities and running water. Most importantly, they are not in extremely isolated areas so there is no threat of wild animals invading the site, which used to be quite a problem."

In organizing a hunting trip it is best to choose men and women who will all share duties.

"A woman should not be confined to doing the cooking and cleaning," Mr. Boucher said. "The way to have a successful trip is to have responsible partners and to have everyone chip in."

Mr. Pageau said that women often go on big-game hunting trips but stay at the campsite.

"Most women hunt small game and go on the big-game trips just to be part of the fun. Hunting small game and big game are two entirely different things."

To keep comfortable during the wet fall and spring seasons, hunters need warm clothing. If the group is travelling by water and the boat overturns, a person could be in danger by being tremendously weighted down Mr. Boucher said.

With synthetic material available now, it is best to have lighter-weight but warm clothing. Certain safety regulations, however, require special outfits.

You Can Live Anywhere If You Use Your Head

TORONTO (CP) — Actress Luba Goy and set-designer husband Ed Hanna live in what once was a boys' gymnasium.

They're among a growing number of young city dwellers who are using their ingenuity to find living space in an urban centre that is short on accommodation. Also, they claim they are rebelling against a straight apartment in a high-rise building.

The couple's apartment is on the third floor above some stores on a downtown thoroughfare.

"It was full of lockers and had a row of urinals," said Luba. "The room was broken up into strange little spaces. Ed took all the walls down and used the wood to construct a kitchen and a bathroom. He left the rest of the room wide open with plants and wall hangings as dividers."

"Living like this is real togetherness. There are no rooms to hide in," said Luba.

Artist Glen Elliott obtained a 10-year lease on a newly vacated restaurant that was a shambles before he started working on it.

"It took me six months just to clear out the garbage," Mr. Elliott said.

Space was a prime requirement for the artist because as a painter of large works he deliberately set out to find an apartment which would double as a gallery.

"I like to live with my paintings for awhile before I exhibit them, so I had to find an old house or warehouse which had lots of wall space."

When the former tenant vacated the restaurant, leaving the place in a mess, the owner gave Mr. Elliott the lengthy lease on condition he would renovate it.

"I started from scratch, pulled everything out and insalled proper plumbing, carpeting, wiring and plastering," he said. "That cost between $2,000 and $3,000. The rest of the construction was done with scraps of wood and pieces of furniture which I scrounged from friends and the Salvation Army."

Storage problems is one complaint heard from young people living in a small apartment. John and Dana McPherson have such an apartment measuring less than 500 square feet, about half the space of the average home.

The main room is both a living room and den.. A small alcove off to one side of it once was a pillow-flop space with a cosy fireplace.

But the McPhersons had to convert it into an office when John moved his custom-tailoring business home. Dana, a design consultant, uses half of the room for her drawing board. When the space is not in use they block it off with a bamboo shade.

Furnishings have been kept to a minimum.

"When you are decorating, you should take a good strong look at your life-style and relate it to the furniture you buy and how you arrange it," Dana said.

"Living in a small space forces you to do that," she added. "You use everything in the room constantly, so it has to work. But you also get tired of your possessions faster. The best thing about being confined is that it trains you to be efficient about what you buy."

Dana said that Europeans, who have learned to live in confined spaces, "have developed the use of built-ins, wall-storage units and smooth surfaces that don't eat up the space visually."

World-famous Hotel

Villa de'este, Lake Como, Italy is one of the world's most famous hotels and within easy distance of Milan. The town of Como is the centre of the Italian silk industry and is situated at the head of the mountain lake. (CP Photo)

Milan Cathedral Largest Gothic Structure in Italy

MILAN, Italy (P) — Napoleon insisted on a coronation in the Milan cathedral after conquering much of Italy. The cannon salute shattered most of the cathedral's narrow Gothic windows. Artistically it was for the best. The plain glass was replaced by the beautiful and brilliantly colored stained glass evident today.

The duomo (cathedral), standing in its own large square, is a combination of white marble with grey stone. It has 2,245 statues on the outside and almost as many inside.

Begun in 1386 by one of the Viscontis, Milan's great feudal family, it is the largest Gothic structure in Italy and wasn't finished until the 19th century when the last of the 135 spires was completed. Visitors can climb up among these spires to the roof for a view of the city.

Also facing the piazza is the stately 19th-century Galleria Vittorio Emanuele, so called because four street-like arcades or galleries radiate out from a dome-roofed and skylit centre.

Today it is filled with clothing, variety shops and cafes. One of the best known is Biffi, a combination cafe and American bar.

One arm leads to the Piazza della Scala and the famous La Scala opera house. Even if there isn't a performance, the museum is worth a visit, crammed with mementoes and portraits of the great singers and conductors, as well as many glass cases of musical figurines and gifts from well known-persons to the opera house.

Milan is Italy's second-largest city, about the size of Montreal, and its biggest industrial centre. Important are the exhibition grounds where fairs are held throughout the year. The International Trade Fair in April is one of the most important in Europe.

Milan has seven railway stations and a canal that runs under the city.

The huge Castello Storzesco was constructed in 1450 by Francesco Storza, a member of another important Milanese family. It lost its status for centuries and was used as barracks by invading armies.

Visitors enter through a great gate with two corner towers. The castle has been restored and now houses an archeological museum and art gallery. It features one of two masterpieces that lure many tourists to Milan—the Pieta by Michelangelo, his last work before he died.

The other work of art is the Last Supper by Leonardo da Vinci, painted on the walls of a former refectory outside the Church of Santa Maria della Grazie.

The fresco has faded over the centuries. An attempt to brighten the figures was not a success and the fresco was cleaned back to da Vinci's original colors.

Milan has many interesting churches, several old city gates, the 1778-built royal palace (now used for art exhibits) and for shopping, the fashionable Via Montenapoleone.

For travellers wishing to combine a city with a resort holiday, Milan is within easy distance of all three of Italy's northern lakes.

Como is the best known and is ringed by both fashionable and picturesque resorts.

Cernobbio, with its handsome villas including the world-famous Villa d'Este hotel, once was rented by European royalty.

Bicentennial Gift

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bonsai, the result of Japanese genius for miniaturization of trees, has become increasingly popular in the United States in the past 15 years. the arrival this spring of 53 choice specimens from Japan as a Bicentennial gift is expected to create additional interest.

British Switching Their Gas

LONDON (CP) — Britain's eight-year program to convert the country's gas users to North Sea natural gas will be virtually complete by the end of next March, when more than 13 million users will have been switched to the new fuel.

British Gas says more than 1.6 million conversions had been completed last year to bring the total above 11.8 million. This means that almost 90 per cent of all customers now have had their equipment converted to use the vast amounts of natural gas that are being brought ashore from the new North Sea fields.

In addition to converting equipment ranging from kitchen cookers to industrial burners, British Gas has also had to lay a vast new national network of distribution pipelines from the east coast terminals where the gas is being brought ashore.

Since the conversion program started in 1967 a million new customers have switched to gas from other fuels. Gas sales have more than trebled.

Although it is only 10 years since the discovery of gas in the North Sea, natural gas now provides almost 95 per cent of all gas supplied in the United Kingdom. Substitution of this home-produced gas for imported oil is providing an annual saving in balance of payments of some £1 billion ($2.25 billion).

Gas meets some 16 per cent of Britain's main energy requirements and by the early 1980s this is expected to rise to 20 per cent.

Five major North Sea gasfields now are in production and two others are being developed.

British Gas Corp. has also announced that it is to buy the natural gas that is produced from the Shell and Esso Brent oilfield. Deliveries are expected to start in 1979 or 1980.

Communists Honor Beheaded Priest

MUEHLHAUSEN, East Germany (Reuter) — One day late in May 450 years ago, a young German priest who preached and practised insurrection against the absolute power of the feudal princes was beheaded outside the town gates of Muehlhausen.

The execution of the priest, Thomas Muentzer, on May 27, 1525, hastened the end of the abortive German peasants' war, but his exploits were to turn him four centuries later into a folk hero for the present Communist East German state.

Muentzer, whose goal was to create "the Kingdom of God on earth," today is lauded here as the leading light of the "early bourgeois revolution" and an "important revolutionary in our history."

The German Democratic Republic, so the argument runs, embodies the best progressive traditions of German history and has carried on Muentzer's heritage by placing power in the hands of the people. Muentzer would not have realized it, but according to another German revolutionary, Friedrich Engels, he and his peasant followers were forerunners of communism.

Thus, the 450th anniversary is celebrated here with dozens of new books with titles like Prophet of a New World, art exhibitions, theatre productions, operas and academic conferences and seminars. Monuments have been unveiled and castles restored at considerable expense.

Muentzer's name graces a variety of institutions from schools to co-operatives like the potato combine in nearby Grossgottern.

Earlier this year, Muehlhausen, where for a short while the young cleric turned his visions of equality into short-lived reality, was invested with the honorary title of "Thomas-Muentzer-Stadt".

The German peasant war had its forerunners in various parts of Europe, like the prolonged insurrections in Flanders in the early 14th century, the "Jacquerie" in Northern France, Wat Tyler's revolt in England in 1381 and the movement spearheaded by Jan Hus in what now is Czechoslovakia.

'Jaws' Keeps Swimmers Closer than Usual to Shore

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) -- Parlee Beach, a popular summer resort on Northumberland Strait near Shediac, 14 miles east of here, still is crowded this summer.

But swimmers aren't venturing out as far, and they are watching the surface of the water more closely than ever for the dreaded triangular dorsal fin. Canadians too are tingling with at least some of the shark-horror that has gripped the United States.

It's all because of the movie Jaws and the gore-spattered realism which made millions almost feel the mangling crunch of a man-eater's teeth.

The Canadian bathers can relax with the knowledge that nobody has ever been killed directly by a shark in Canadian waters. But they aren't completely home free. A few attacks are on record, and some man-eaters have been sighted.

Sharks are not uncommon off Canada's East Coast, but the vast majority are species considered relatively harmless.

However, individual specimens of the white shark, most dreaded of the man-eaters, have been found in the Bay of Fundy and in Northumberland Strait as close as 20 miles from the crowded beaches of Shediac.

The most famous shark incident in Canada occurred off Cape Breton on July 9, 1953, when a large fish attacked a 14-foot dory carrying two men. The fish smashed into the boat, punching a 14-inch hole in its bottom and dumping the two men overboard. One of the men drowned.

A tooth found embedded in the hull identified the fish as a white shark, estimated to be 12 feet long.

Another incident occurred in 1968 in Cobequid Bay, the almost landlocked body of water at the farthest end of the Bay of Fundy near Truro, N.S.

Fisherman Aubrey Scott and his cousin discovered the shark entangled in their salmon nets with a three-prong fishing hook in its jaws.

The St. Andrew's Biological Centre, a federal marine research centre in St. Andrew's, N.B., reports that most sightings of the great white shark have been in the Bay of Fundy. But five have been sighted over the years in Northumberland Strait near Shediac, and two of these were more than 20 feet long.

Many of the records of the great white shark in this area have not been direct sightings, but rather have been inferred from the discovery of half-eaten porpoises.

The white sharks have been recorded in Canada in only two months of the year: July and August.

P. W. Arnold of the department of zoology at University of Guelph once said in an article that sharks have made several attacks on porpoises in the Maritime area and might be a significant predator of porpoises in the region.

For example, a 17-foot white shark weighing 2,000 pounds caught off Leonardville, N.B., in August, 1971, contained three porpoises in various states of digestion.

A 10-foot great white shark caught near Wallace, N.S., in 1962 had a full grown porpoise in its stomach. In 1963 half a full-grown porpoise was found at the mouth of Passamaquody Bay. Its rear half had been devoured by a shark estimated to be 14 feet long.

The risk of a man being attacked by a great white shark in northern waters is small, but there was a case in New Jersey in 1916. First, a 24-year-old man was killed. Four days later another man was killed 20 miles away. Four days later a 10-year-old boy was devoured and the man who tried to save him was so badly bitten he also died.

The entire seaside community was thrown into panic and a massive hunt was launched. An eight-foot white shark was brought back, and human bones were found in its stomach. The killing of the shark ended the attacks.

Jim Beckett, Atlantic programs manager for the St. Andrew's centre, says Canada is not doing much shark research now for a variety of reasons.

"One is that we lack the equipment to do it with. All we have is tuna fishing gear."

Nixon Repeats Attack On PC Party Integrity

HAMILTON (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday the integrity of the Progressive Conservative government has become a prime issue in the provincial election campaign, and he is not going to back away from the subject.

Speaking at a nomination meeting, Mr. Nixon discarded a prepared text to reply to a sharp speech made by Premier William Davis in Sault Ste. Marie on Tuesday.

That speech was a reply to Mr. Nixon's opening salvo of the campaign, in which he questioned the integrity of the government.

Mr. Davis's reaction was to demand the opposition leader "put up or shut up," a suggestion to which Mr. Nixon responded with vigor.

"When I talk about integrity, I'm talking about the need for a government that respects the taxpayer's dollars," he said. "If Mr. Davis believes that his government's integrity is not an issue, let him deny that Gerhard Moog contributed $35,000 and was awarded, without contract tender, a $44-million contract for the new Ontario Hydro headquarters.

"I'm not talking about Mr. Davis's personal affairs," he added. "I'm talking about matters that legitimately concern every voter in Ontario. I'm talking about the way Mr. Davis has run the government of Ontario."

He said he is ready to meet the premier in a public debate on the issue, adding the premier cannot expect the electorate to forget the last four years of Conservative rule.

"That's not dirt, that's not innuendo," he said. "Those are the facts that have come forward on the record during the Davis years."

He said the cabinet has grown old and weak and has lost confidence in Mr. Davis. At least five cabinet ministers were leaving politics because "they feel the Titanic is finally going to take the last plunge and they don't want to get their feet wet."

Radium-polluted Water Draws Lewis Criticism

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Ontario NDP Leader Stephen Lewis said Wednesday that uranium miners in Elliot Lake have been drinking radium—polluted water since 1958 while both the Ontario government and Denison Mines Ltd., have remained silent.

Disclosing what he said were previously-unreleased government reports, the NDP leader said at a news conference that pollution levels at Elliot Lake have exceeded government standards every year since 1958.

During the period, Mr. Lewis said, Denison executives used a separate, virtually pure water supply for their "executive village" while "the miners and machines" used polluted water.

The company was ordered to clean up its water supply by Aug. 31, after radium pollution became public knowledge last January, but Mr. Lewis said the company probably will apply for a deadline extension and the government likely will go along.

The maximum acceptable radium content for water is three picocuries per litre, he said.

He told reporters tests in 1958 showed pollution levels as high as 18 picocuries. The rate had soared to 39 picocuries in the mid—1960s and is still at least double the acceptable standard set by the Ontario goverment, he said.

Davis Day Quiet

CHAPLEAU, Ont. (CP)—Ontario PremierWilliam Davis resumes active campaigning here today with his busiest itinerary since he announced the Sept 18 provincial election date Monday.

Mr. Davis presided over what has come to be known as the travelling cabinet road show—an open cabinet meeting where local organizations and municipal groups are given the opportunity of presenting briefs to the cabinet members.

Wednesday's meeting heard a brief from the Civil Service Association of Ontario (CSAO), urging the government to [illegible] restrictions on Crown employees participation in election campaigns.

Resignations Key Factor in Seizure of Band Equipment

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

A lawyer acting on behalf of the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund said Wednesday the sudden resignation of two Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps directors led to the Tuesday seizure of band equipment.

The Yardmen, sponsors of the band, secured a rental truck and late Tuesday evening re-possessed all band equipment and uniforms.

"Since no directors are available to assume responsibility the equipment was taken into safe keeping," said William Argue, acting on the sponsor's behalf.

Art Lucas, assistant corps director and John Dorrington corps treasurer both resigned this week.

Corps director Hugh Bondy was in Montreal Wednesday and not available for comment.

Sponsors and representatives of the band met for several hours Wednesday to discuss the seizure of the equipment. Mr. Argue said "negotiations and discussions are taking place which hopefully will enable the corps to keep its commitments."

The drum corps faces possible fines of $2,000 if it does not appear at three concerts during the next two weeks.

The seizure of the equipment Tuesday marked another blow in a conflict that has been boiling between the band and sponsors for some time.

Earlier this summer, the sponsors withdrew their support protesting the band's Kingston Grenadiers. Support was returned within a week.

The equipment remains packed in the rented truck and it is not known yet what will be done with it.

"The Yardmen want the band to continue running but right now it's like a ship without a rudder," said Mr. Argue. "The sponsors are looking for some people who will take care of band management."

Summer Wheel

Ashley Miller, 7, was wheeling around this summer practicing her gymnastics exercises she learned during a recreation department's program. Ashley and more than 75 other youths took part in display night at the Belleville Arena, Wednesday, in an attempt to acquaint interested friends with the city's summer playground program.

Loyalist Teacher to Visit New Venezuelan Students

When the 22 Venezuelan post-secondary students arrive in Belleville next Wednesday to begin English studies at Loyalist College, they will not be completely in the dark about the college or the Bay of Quinte area.

Paul King, Loyalist dean of faculty and academic services, said Wednesday Catherine McEvoy, a full-time Spanish teacher at the college, will fly to Caracas, Venezuela to brief the students on Loyalist and the Belleville area Sunday.

She will return with the students as they fly from Caracas to Kennedy International Airport at New York, arriving at Toronto International Airport Wednesday evening for a bus ride to Belleville.

As with all aspects of the students' nine-month stay here, including educational recreational and accommodation costs, the Venezuelan government will pay the entire cost of Mrs. McEvoy's trip, Dean King pointed out.

He said when she arrives at Caracas, she will meet "with representatives of the Canadian embassy there . . . and dignitaries of the Venezuelan government involved with the (educational) program."

Dean King said embassy officials will brief the students about Canada in general terms and Mrs. McEvoy will give them the local angle.

A Belleville native, Mrs. McEvoy also teaches French at Loyalist. A four-year-honor graduate of the University of Toronto, she has taught at Bayside Secondary School.

She has done post-graduate work in Spain and has spent summers in Spain and Mexico keeping her linguistic talent up-to-date. She is Loyalist's only full-time Spanish teacher.

23-year-old Charged In One-car Mishap

A 23-year-old Toronto man has been charged with careless driving in connection with a one-car accident on County Rd. 34, just east of Avonlough Rd., west of Belleville, late Wednesday.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said today the man is identified as Zoltan G. Koleszar, of 33 Ladykirk Ave.

Two passengers in the car were treated and released for minor injuries at Belleville General Hospital. Randy Mayhew, 18, of RR1, Corbyville, suffered a sprained left ankle and Clarence Vardy, 26, of 19 Pepper Ave. in Belleville received bruises.

Police said the car was proceeding at a high rate of speed, went out of control, struck a telephone pole on the north shoulder, careened to the south side where it struck another pole and ended up in the north side ditch.

Constable Don Dowry estimated $400 damage to the 1964 Chrysler and $150 to the poles in the 11:45 p.m. mishap.

Driver Charged

An 18-year-old Belleville man has been charged with having no vehicle operator's licence in connection with a two-car collision Wednesday on East Dundas St. at the Newberry St. intersection.

City police identified the man today as Steven Boomhower of 9 Pearl St.

Police said a car driven by Stanley Alex McLean, 41, of RR 2, Ameliasburg had stopped in traffic while eastbound when it was struck in the rear by another car.

A passenger in the first car, Sylvia McLean, 36, of RR 2, Ameliasburg, suffered minor injuries but did not require hospital treatment.

Townhouse Development Wins Approval of City Committee

A Rollins Construction proposal to build 75 townhouses on North Park St. won the approval of the city's subordinate planning advisory committee Wednesday.

But, before approval was given, the developer faced a long list of requirements — the bulk of which were termed by a Rollins spokesman as "acceptable".

Rollins vice-president Bob Marcotte took issue with a number of the recommendations — particularly a note from Belleville's fire department which asked for three additional fire hydrants for the property.

"My firm cannot agree with the chief's recommendation and that he may be being overzealous in his request," said Mr. Marcotte.

Hydrants cost approximately $1,500 each. "The cost would be tacked right onto the selling price of the units," said Mr. Marcotte.

Another recommendation that a six-foot-high, chain link fence be constructed around the development was also defeated following an objection from Mr. Marcotte.

He commented "we don't like the ghetto effect you get with a fence of that type".

The committee, after a four-to-three vote, changed the height restriction to four feet at Mr. Marcotte's request.

A final area pointed out by the company representative and subsequently agreed to by the committee was that a clause binding the developer's responsibility to negotiate a sewer easement with Ontario Hydro be softened.

"We don't know for sure if we will be able to get an easement across the Hydro right-of-way though we are negotiating diligently," said Mr. Marcotte.

It is expected the committee's approval will be forwarded for council's next meeting for final ratification.

Cyclist Injured on 401

A 50-year old Wisconsin man suffered minor injuries but did not require hospital treatment after the motorcycle he was riding rolled over in the ditch on Highway 401, 1.8 miles east of Belleville Wednesday.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said today Herman A. Ogren of 1870 Sheridan Rd., in Kenosha was driving his 1971 BMW 750 c.c. motorcycle in the eastbound lane when he was passed by a tranpsort.

Police said an object thrown during the transport's passing became lodged in the motorcycle's front wheel throwing it out of control and into the south ditch.

Penny Carnival Ends Summer Rec Program

It's penny carnival time again and the Belleville arena will be filled with the sounds and shouts of more than 500 people during the annual event signalling the end of the recreation department's summer program, tonight.

More than 19 booths will be constructed for the players who will be tempted to spend their funds shooting out candles with water guns, gamble on winning a cake or play bingo.

"This is the first year we are trying to involve the children," said Karen Fraser, director of the playgrounds program for the recreation department.

"Formerly the supervisors built and staffed the booths but this year the members of the different playgrounds will help to construct the various stands," she said.

The highlight of the evening will be the choosing of a Miss and Master Penny Carnival with 44 contestants from the 22 playgrounds competing for the title.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey and Ald. Joe Cox will headline the panel of judges making the selection for the title.

Children Display Crafts

More than 100 children jumped, flipped, balanced, shot arrows and displayed craft work for visitors at the Belleville Arena, Wednesday night.

The group of youth, all participants in the recreation department's community school program were featured in the evening of displays produced for parents and friends.

"The summer was very rewarding and went exceptionally well," said Beckie Holway, director of the program for the seven community schools throughout the city.

The program was for youths from the ages of 12-16 years old and was attended daily by about 75 people.

"We offered them a place to come and play organized games like floor hockey and instruction in gymnastics, archery and crafts," said Miss Holway.

The crafts displays included pieces of pottery, needlework and batik, made under the supervision of Pat Mertl, a local artist who organized this years program.

Prizes were awarded to children who achieved high degrees of proficiency in the various courses offered or who had won contests competing against participants from all the community schools.

Home Entered

City police are investigating the theft of $200 in cash and personal papers from a residence at 301 Ann St. in Belleville, sometime between 7:30 p.m. and 11 p.m. Wednesday.

Police said entry was gained by removing a rear window screen. Dresser and desk drawers were ransacked.

Corps Takes Title

Belleville's Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Quinte has won a proficiency competition sponsored by the Navy League of Canada, the only corps in Ontario to win the award for corps under 75 members twice.

Lieut. Barry Bevvan, commanding officer of the Quinte Corps, said the award was won for complete all-round seamanship, involving five inspections. The assessment was made by navy league inspectors.

The Quinte Crops won the competition in the section with less than 75 cadets enrolled. The last time they won this award was in 1971.

The sea-oriented program for young men aged 13 to 18 years is sponsored by public-spirited citizens in the local Branch of the Navy League in 189 cities and towns in partnership with the department of national defence.

Store Target Of Thieves

City police are seeking cigar-smoking thieves who stole $116 in cash from two pay envelopes, $25 worth of assorted cigars, a case of matches and a package of playing cards from Stopette Variety at 94 West College St. in Belleville sometime after midnight today.

Deputy — Chief Harold Reid said Constable Bob Thompson was on patrol at 4:40 a.m. when he discovered the air conditioner pulled from an east side widow of the store through which entry was gained.

As well as the missing items, shaving cream was discovered sprayed over the floor and confetti spread around it.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance during a 24-hour period which ended at 8 a.m. today.

Thursday Aug. 14, 4:23 a.m. — mattress fire at 352 Front St., damage confined to mattress.

Throwing a Pot

Audrey Davies, local potter, sits at her wheel in the studio she shares with her husband Gordon behind their house. Mr. and Mrs. Davies will be in Ottawa for the Canada Central Exhibition displaying and working as one of 60 invited artists.

Retired Mechanic Starts New Career as Potter

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

Can a retired auto mechanic find happiness throwing pots with his wife?

Yes, if his wife is a nationally-known craftswoman and potter, and if he has prepared for his retirement activity by studying the art during his spare time.

Gordon Davies and his wife, Audrey, a well-known local artist, spend time sitting side by side at identical potting wheels in a workshop behind their Bellevville home.

Gordon has been throwing or shaping pots and other objects and studying seriously for four years, preparing for when he would retire this past fall and would have additional time on his hands.

"I worked with my hands for many years in my trade and I'm lucky I found something I enjoy that allows me to retain my manual dexterity" he said.

He had watched his wife work at her wheel for many years, attending her shows, offering support and being very patient, Audrey said.

"Then one day he came home and told me he wanted to learn how to throw a pot and I told him he had to go to school and learn the way it was done," she said.

"He spent many evenings studying and even took a month off from work rather than use our vacation time to learn," she said.

Slowly he developed the technique and was able to start working at his wheel.

"The first wheel Audrey had was an inertia model which I built for her," he said. "With the training I had it was easy to build the wheel".

The original wheel had to be sold when Gordon took up artistic residence with his wife, because it was too large to allow them both adequate working space, he said.

"It will probably still be used for making pottery long after I can't produce any more," Gordon said.

The two potters have worked together as artists-in-residence at the Port Hope Secondary School with the month-long program being funded by the Ontario Arts Council.

"Gordon does mostly functional or usable pottery with every inch of his work having a purpose while mine is more decorative even though it still can be used for flowers and plants," Audrey said.

In late August the pair will be in residence for the duration of the Central Canada Exhibition in Ottawa, the only potters among the 50-60 artists invited to exhibit and work at the fair's crafts display.

"We will be living and working at the exhibition and only leave to sleep," she said. "The people can observe us working in our normal environment performing our every-day routines."

Bell School Handles 5,000 Students

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Bell Canada's training centre at the Four Seasons will handle nearly 5,000 students this year with the addition of new traffic facilities, designed to train employees in planning of installations.

Bell's training centre, opened in 1959, is divided into three sections now. The original school was for engineer technical training. Since then computer communications was added in 1972 and this year the traffic facilities section was added.

Jim Phillips, supervisor training in methods and administration, said the engineering section will handle about 1,500 students, the computer communications about 2,800 and the traffic facilities about 500.

Mr. Phillips said the traffic section will train personnel in determining growth patterns and their application to installations or distribution of products.

Bell brings in employees from all parts of Canada and trains employees of other telephone companies, both private and government. A normal course lasts about three-weeks.

Belleville was originally picked for the location of the school because it was midway between Toronto and Montreal where most of the engineers were located. Facilities on Pinnacle St. were also available. The school moved to the Four Seasons in April, 1971.

Mr. Phillips said courses are extensive in that students attend lectures and seminars during the day and are given an assignment in the evenings. Most courses at the school also involve some field work or case problems.

"We try to encourage an informal atmosphere here to help ease any concerns the students have about leaving their families," said Mr. Phillips, "there's enough pressure on them being away from home."

The training centre occupies one-half of the first and second floors of the Four Seasons. For accommodation the training centre can occupy as many as 110 of the 125 rooms during a busy week.

New employees attend the school as well as Bell veterans. Mr. Phillips said the school has accommodated men with as much as 35 years of experience. On occasion, personnel from telephone companies in foreign countries also attend the school for special courses.

The training centre is the only Bell facility in Canada which operates a computer communications school. There are other engineering training centres in Quebec for French-language instruction.

The training centre has a staff of about 50 with 35 instructors in three sections of the school.

Warthen Sharp But He's Alone

MONTREAL (CP) — One of these seasons, Montreal Expos may find a clutch hitter but until they do life is going to continue to be miserable for their pitching staff.

The Expos dropped a 4-3 National League baseball decision to San Francisco Giants Wednesday night—their fifth straight loss—and wasted a brilliant pitching effort by rookie left-hander Dan Warthen.

Warthen held the Giants to one hit—a second-inning double by Marc Hill—for 10 innings before San Francisco struck for three runs in the 11th. Two scored on a home run by Gar Matthews while the other came in on an RBI single by Bruce Miller.

Montreal rallied to tie the score in the bottom of the inning on a run-scoring double by Larry Parrish and two-run triple by Pete Mackanin with one out but lost the game in the 12th when Matthews walked and scored on a double to the right-centre field gap by Willie Montanez.

But had the Montreal hitters been doing their job properly, the game would not have gone into overtime. Montreal had Giants starter John Montefusco in trouble in four of the first five innings but could not score.

In the first, Tim Foli doubled with one out but was stranded when Gary Carter flied to left and Mike Jorgensen grounded to first.

In the second, Larry Bittner drew a lead-off walk but was left on first when Parrish grounded out, Mackanin lined out and Barry Foote flied out, while in the third they could not score even though Jim Dwyer had doubled and Tim Foli had been hit by a pitch with one out.

Natives Are Restless As Phillies Stumble

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Philadelphia Phillies are in a tailspin and the natives are getting restless.

The Phils, given their chance to take over the National League East lead from the stumbling Pittsburgh Pirates, have declined the offer. Pittsburgh has lost seven of its last eight. The Phils have dropped five of their last seven.

And now they're calling for Manager Danny Ozark's head in the City of Brotherly Love.

"How good are the 1975 Phillies? How far can they go?," asks the Philadelphia Inquirer. "We may never know if . . . Ozark is allowed to spend the last month and a half of the season on the bench."

DANNY OZARK

The Philadelphia Bulletin counters that Ozark isn't doing a totally miserable job—he just lacks charisma.

The Phils dropped a 5-4 decision to Los Angeles Wednesday night and Ozark was asked about his critics.

"It doesn't affect me," said the 51-year-old skipper. "That's the perils of the job. I don't think it will affect my team. It shouldn't."

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta edged Pittsburgh 4-3, St. Louis beat Houston 4-3 in 11 innings, San Francisco edged Montreal 4-3 in 12 innings and San Diego defeated New York 8-5.

The Phils had to wait two hours, 20 minutes for the rain to stop before losing their fourth in a row. The long delay came in the bottom of the second and the Dodgers jumped on Steve Carlton, 11-9, for four runs in the top of the third, three of them on a home run by Steve Garvey.

Mile Lum knocked in the winning run for Atlanta with a bad-hop single in the seventh off Dave Giusti. Dusty Baker and Ralph Garr also had RBI singles for the Braves and Tom House, 5-5, got the victory with three innings of scoreless relief.

Luis Melendez beat out an infield hit with the bases loaded in the 11th inning to knock in the winning run for St. Louis. Ken Reitz had a two-run single for the third-place Cardinals who closed to within 4½ games of first in the N East. Doug Rader sent it into overtime with a two-run homer for Houston.

Bobby Tolan's three-run homer in the eighth off reliever Rick Baldwin capped a five-run inning to sink the Mets and snap San Diego's five-game losing streak. Mike Ivie also homered for the Padres and Dave Winfield had a pair of run-scoring singles. Jerry Grote and Rusty Staub drove in two runs apiece for New York.

Palmer Records His 18th Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jim Palmer got his 18th. So did the Tigers.

Palmer is Baltimore's ace right-hander, the winningest pitcher in the major leagues this season and perhaps on his way to the best year he's had in a long time.

He improved his record to 18-7 Wednesday night with his fifth consecutive victory, a dazzling two-hit, 3-0 shutout of Kansas City that enabled the Orioles to resume their charge toward the top of the American League East.

Detroit Tigers are close to becoming the losingest team in hte majors this season and perhaps on the way to the worst year they've had in a long time.

They dropped their record to 46-73 with their 18th consecutive defeat, an 11-inning 6-5 loss to Texas that continued their plunge toward oblivion in the American League East.

In the rest of the AL, California routed Boston 8-3, New York beat Oakland 3-1, Minnesota defeated Milwaukee 5-2 and Chicago edged Cleveland 4-3 in 12 innings.

Palmer, who wound up with six strikeouts, retired the first eight Royals he faced, gave up a two-out double to Bob Stinson in the third inning, then set down 16 in a row before Vada Pinson singled leading off the ninth. Two more batters produced three more outs—one of them a double play—and Palmer had his 16th complete game in 27 starts.

With one out and two on in the 11th, Len Randle hit a grounder to Detroit shortstop Gene Michael. He stepped on second for a forceout—but when he tried for an inning-ending double play, his throw to first was wild and the Rangers' winning run scored.

The Tigers' 18th consecutive loss is just two short of the AL record, six below the modern-day major league mark and eight shy of the all-time record of 26, suffered in 1889 by Louisville of the American Association when it was a major league team.

Mike Miley's two-run single capped a six-run third inning that permitted the Angels to breeze past Boston and cut the Red Sox lead over Baltimore to six games in the East.

Jim (Catfish) Hunter beat his former Oakland team-mates for the third time this year, this time with a three-hitter. Sandy Alomar's squeeze bunt gave the Yanks the winning run in the third inning.

Solo homers by Steve Braun and Danny Thompson in the sixth inning and a two-run belt by Phil Roof in the eighth offset a pair of blasts by Milwaukee's Darrell Porter and carried the Twins to victory.

Pete Varney drew a bases-loaded walk from Rick Waits to force in the 12th-inning run that enabled Chicago to top the Indians.

CFL Attendance Mark Set

Orange Equals Record In Argos' 27-7 Win

TORONTO (CP) — All that prevented Doyle Orange from setting a Canadian Football League record Wednesday night was another record in itself—41,474 screaming fans.

On the second-last play of the Eastern Football Conference game in which Toronto Argonauts defeated Hamilton Tiger-Cats 27-7, Orange equalled the CFL record for carries in one game with 37, set by George Reed of Saskatchewan Roughriders against Calgary Stampeders in 1967.

He could have broken the record, but on the final play, rookie quarterback Bill Bynam, apparently not having heard the public address announcement, handed off to Cleo House instead.

"I didn't hear it," Bynam said. "You can't hear anything down there. If I had known I would have given it to him 50 more times."

Bynam said he had already apologized to the fleet running back.

Orange, a 23-year-old graduate Soutehrn Mississippi University, said he heard the announcement, but not clearly.

"I heard him say it but I was in a daze. I knew I had accomplished something, but I didn't know what."

Orange also broke the Argo team record for carries of 32 set by Dick Shatto in 1958 and equalled by Dave Thelen in 1966. Both picked up 141 yards in their records, and Orange ended the gam with 175.

The attendance broke the previous CFL record of 39,417, set in the 1955 Grey Cup game in Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

The victory evened Toronto's record at 2-2, leaving the Argonauts in a three-way tie for first place in the Eastern Conference with Ottawa Rough Riders and Montreal Alouettes.

DOYLE ORANGE

Hamilton, 1-2, is two points off the pace.

Orange also scored a touchdown—the first by Toronto since the third quarter of the Argos' season opener.

House scored the other Argo TD, diving over from one yard after Steve Dennis had returned a Jim McMillan pass 33 yards to the Ticat one-yard line.

Kicker Zenoh Andrusyshyn, who had scored all but six of Toronto's points this season going into the contest, added 11 points on three field goals and two converts to bring his season total to 48.

The Argo defence added four more points with consecutive two-point safeties in the third quarter—Jim Datrice being hauled down by Gene Mack in the Hamilton end zone, and quarterback Jerry Keeling getting nailed by Jim Corrigal.

Keeling, who shared the quarterbacking duties with McMillan, scored the lone Ticat touchdown just before halftime with Ian Sunter adding the convert.

The Argo defence limited Hamilton—playing without injured running back Andy Hopkins—to 28 net yards on the ground.

Bynam, who went all the way at quarterback for the Argos, stuck mostly to the ground, almost exclusively with Orange but occasionally with House, who rushed for 56 yards on eight carries.

Toronto, after breaking up a scoreless game in the second quarter, dominated the contest, piling up 19 first downs and 263 on the ground.

Betty Ingram Ontario Champ

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Betty Ingram of Belleville Bay of Quinte Country Club fired an 83 Wednesday to win the Ontario senior women's amateur golf championship with a combined score of 164 for the 36-hole event.

BETTY INGRAM

Pat Austin of Peterborough, who had the day's low score with a 78, placed second in the tournament at Craigowen Golf and Country Club with a 165 total.

The Canadian and Ontario champion for 1974, Kay Helleur of Toronto, placed third in the championship with a total score of 169. Her second-round score was an 82.

Wednesday's round was delayed for two hours in the morning because of rain, lightning and high winds.

Members of the 1975 senior womens' interprovincial team, selected Wednesday after the final round, are: Kaye Helleur, of Rosedale Golf Club, Toronto; Betty Ingram of Bay of Quinte Golf Club, Belleville; Pat Austin of Kawartha Golf Club, Peterborough, and Iris Quarternaine, of Islington Golf Club, Toronto.

The team will represent Ontario in the national championships at Beachgrove Golf and Country Club at Delta, B.C., Aug. 20-21.

Series Tied

Black Diamond Blasts Posties

It was almost a week ago that the roof fell in at Sir Mackenzie Bowell Public School and The Intell came from behind seven runs to defeat UIC and win their Belleville Industrial Softball League quarter-final series. Wednesday night at Sir Mackenzie the Post Office would have settled for the roof falling in. As it was, the roof was followed by the sky. After winning the opening game of the semi-final series 8-1, the Postmen went down by a whopping 16-0 count to Black Diamond in their second game of the best-of-five match.

Terry Hiddleston led the onslaught with a triple, a home-run and a single to pick up six RBI's. Jack Francis collected three RBI's with a pair of doubles and a single and Myles McDonnell added two doubles and a single. Ron Bateman singled three times as the winners tagged Norm Lockhart for 18 hits.

Lockhart threw the first game for the Post Office and set Black Diamond down on four-hitter. Wednesday was one of those night's, though, where he might better have stayed home. A bright spot, was that he fanned eight batters.

However, if Black Diamond wasn't getting a hit off him, his teammates were booting the ball. In all they had six errors.

Ron Andrews was the winner. He walked none, struck-out seven and gave up two hits.

Bill Leitch and Lockhart were the only Postmen to reach Andrews.

Parson's And Tony's Winners

Neither side was having any luck generating a cohesive attack as Trenton Citizens Finance and Cobourg Tony's hooked up in a Bay of Quinte Soccer Association play, Wednesday at Centennail Park in Trenton.

The match might well have ended in a scoreless deadlock but for Cobourg's John VanBalen.

His perfect shot late in the first half took care of all the scoring. The ball nestled in the top left hand corner of the net and settled what turned into a series of poor finishing on both sides.

At Warkworth, Belleville Parsons spotted the home side a 1-0 lead on a goal by [illegible] but in the final seconds of the first half, the visitors had the equalizer and went on to pot three without a reply after the interval.

Dave Powell led Parsons with two goals. John Thompson and Tom Britton had the others.

Four Game Lead

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Newmarket Rays maintained ther 4-game lead atop the east division of the Ontario Fastball League Wednesday, defeating last-place Kitchener Evergreens of the west division 4-1.

Oshawa at Woodstock and Burlington at Hamilton were rained out.

A six-hit pitching effort by Larry Marshall sparked Newmarket, although the Ray's right-hander, making only his secnnd start of the season, needed ninth inning relief help from left-hander Bill Lunney.

Newmarket scored all the runs it needed in the second inning, combining singles by Les Downing and Derek Kinnersly with a sacrifice and ground-out for two runs.

Les Chiasson, who led Newmarket's eight-hit attack against losing Kitchener pitcher Keith Wagler, got three including a solo home run in the third inning. He then scored the game's final run in the eighth on his single and a single by Wally Cooper.

Two walks and Ab Henshaw's single knocked in Kitchener's only run in the last of the third inning.

Downing had two singles for the winners while Henshaw picked up two singles for the Evergreens. The victory was Marshall's first decision of the season while Wagler suffered his 16th loss in 26 decisions.

Swimmer Boosts Canada

Diane, who also carries her national colors in field events and basketball, won the Class 4 50-metre freestyle in 47.3 seconds and the 3x25 individual medley in one minute 37.3 seconds. Later, in track and field competition, she picked up a bronze in the Class 4 javelin.

Kevin Earl of Richmond, B.C., won a gold medal in the class 4 800-metre event and the Canadian 4-x-100 metre relay team won a silver medal.

Rod Laver

Disappointed Aussie Beaten

TORONTO (CP) — Rod Laver of Australia, admitting he had played "pretty erratic tennis," was upset by Colombia's Ivan Molina in second-round men's singles action Wednesday at the Canadian open tennis championships.

Laver, who attributed his poor play to his policy of playing in selected tournaments, lost the first set in six consecutive games, then rallied in the second for a 6-2 win before dropping the third set 6-4.

The No. 5-seeded Laver said his loss to the unseeded Molina, a clay-court specialist, disappointed him because "I know I can play the shots better."

In the 1973 Canadian Open here, Molina beat Laver at the same point in the tournament.

In other men's singles action, Ilie Nastase of Romania downed Steve Krulevitz of the United States 6-4, 7-6; Bjorn Borg of Sweden had little trouble beating Roberto Cano of Argentina 6-2, 6-3; Colin Dowdeswell of Rhodesia upset Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia 7-6, 5-2 (retired); Norman Holmes of the United States topped Barry Phillips-Moore of Australia 7-5, 2-6, 6-4, and Phil Dent of Australia defeated Paulo Bertolucci of Italy 7-6, 6-1.

In women's singles play, Margaret Court of Australia coasted past Sue Mappin of Britain 6-1, 6-3; Julie Heldman of the United States defeated Marita Redondo of the United States 6-4, 6-4, and Linky Boshoff of South Africa beat Janet Russell of the United States 6-4, 6-7, 6-2.

Some of the men's doubles matches scheduled for Wednesday were postponed when showers restricted play to singles competition.

In addition, the Manuel Orantes Juv Kamiwazimu men's singles match, scheduled for Wednesday, will be played today. The winner of that match will play two matches today.

Bolts Edge Caribous

GENEVA (CP) — Hopes for a final settlement of the dispute over fees for televising the 1976 Montreal Olympics looked grim Wednesday when the European Broadcasting Union (EBU) said only television viewers in North America would be able to watch direct broadcasts of the Games.

The EBU statement said the rest of the world would be blacked out because of the high asking price of the Canadian organizers.

The EBU said negotiations had broken down between the Canadians and five of the world's major television networks: EBU for West Europe; its East European equivalent, the International Radio and Television Organization (OIRT); the Asian Broadcasting Union; the Latin American Broadcasting Organization and the Radio and Television Union of the Arab countries.

The Canadian organizers rejected Tuesday a $9.3 million offer from these five networks. The Canadians set their base at $18.045 million.

Originally the Canadians asked for $20.9 million televising fee jointly from EBU and OIRT. A joint offer of $5.2 million was made by EBU and OIRT. EBU paid $1.7 million for the 1972 Munich Olympics.

In Munich, Willi Daume, vice-president of the International Olympic Committee (CIO), said an Olympic games without television was unthinkable. He said the networks and the Canadians were trying to bluff each other.

"The CIO did not expect an agreement so soon. I shall personally ask the CIO to intervene again to try to help the two sides reach a way out of the present impasse," said Daume.

Ken Tamke No Favorite—Just the Leader

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—It wasn't a day for the favorites, but Ken Tamke didn't care and neither did his Alberta Willingdon Cup team-mates.

Tamke, a 25-year-old law student from Edmonton, fired a three-under-par 68 Wednesday to take a one-stroke lead in the 72-hole Canadain amateur golf championship.

His score also helped to give Alberta a four-stroke lead over Nova Scotia in the Willingdon Cup interprovincial team championship which winds up today.

Alberta leads the 36-hole Willingdon portion with a 214 total, thanks to Tamke and a pair of 73s by Ken Wasslen of Calgary and Laurie Scott of Edmonton. Nova Scotia is next with 218 followed by British Columbia with 219.

Tamke, who admits he isn't a strong putter, credited that part of his game for giving him the lead over Greg Olson of Lucerne, Que., and Graham Cooke of Dorion, Que., both of whom had 69s in hot, sunny weather.

A 55-foot birdie putt on the par-three, 165-yard fifth hole got Tamke started.

"That . . . putt got me off the ground," he said.

Tamke isn't hoping for a repeat of last year's second round when he missed the cut with an 86.

"The greens are awful tricky," he said. "Everything goes toward the river on most holes. You have a tendency to over-read greens like these and I hope I play it careful in the second round."

While Tamke was enjoying the 6,244-yard Riverside Country Club course, others in the field of 112 were having problems.

Dick Siderowf of Westport, Conn., winner of this tournament in 1971, had a 77, which included a triple bogey seven on the seventh hole.

Kelly Roberts of London, Ont., and Jim Harrison of Toronto, 1974 national junior champion, both shot 75s.

Tied for fourth place were veteran Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont., who has won the amateur four times, and Robbie Jackson of Ile Bizard, Que., twice Canadian junior champion. Both had even-par 71s.

Defending champion Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver was in a group with one-over-par 72s. Others with that total were Gerry MacMillan of Kingston, N.S., Jim Nelford of Vancouver, Dave Webber of Dartmouth, N.S., and Cec Ferguson of Victoria.

Cowan, winner of the Canadian amateur in 1961 and five times a runner-up, had an even-par 36 on the front nine but slipped to two-over 37 on the back nine.

$3,000 Bursary Eases Pain

TORONTO (CP) — The pain in Yvonne Saunders' back is more bearable when she knows someone is thinking about her future.

The Canadian woman track star, convalescing from a recurring ailment, learned recently she is the first recipient of a $3,000 track bursary.

The sponsoring firm, Kilborn Engineering, is giving the money to the Ontario Track and Field Association but has it earmarked for Yvonne's preparations for the Pan-American Games at Mexico City in October and the 1976 Olympic Games at Montreal.

Miss Saunders, enrolled in a health and fitness instructor's course at George Brown College, says the problem should be cleared up to allow her to attend the Canadian track team's training camp in Colorado next month.

"That's important," she said, "because I've never competed at a high-altitude like they have in Mexico City."

The Jamaican-born star established a Canadian record of 2:00.1 for the 800 metres at an Oslo track meet in June, a time which still stands as the third-fastest for women in the world this year.

The ailment will force Yvonne to pass up the national championships at Sudbury next month and a later dual track meet with East Germany.

"We like the idea of individual sponsorship like this because it gives us more feeling of direct participation," said John Dew, president of the engineering firm.

First Period Barrage

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Peterborough Gray-Munros scored 12 goals in the first period Wednesday and went on to defeat Whitby Builders 17-10 in an Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A semi-final contest.

Peterborough leads the best-of-seven series 2-0 with the third game Friday in Whitby.

Peterborough led 12-2 at the end of the first period and carried a 14-6 lead into the third period.

Palmer in Upset

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Marilyn Palmer of Kamloops, B.C., scored an upset Wednesday with a 5-and-3 victory over defending champion Cynthia Hill in the second round of the U.S. women's amateur golf championship.

Miss Palmer, a seven-time British Columbia provincial champion, won four of the first five holes.

"This is the third time I've played in the U.S. Amateur and only the first that I've won two matches," she said. "The irons are the strongest part of my game, but I played everything fairly steady today."

Miss Palmer won the first hole with a birdie three, but Miss Hill came back to take the second. Miss Palmer then won the next three holes.

She led by three holes after nine and her lead was cut to 2 up when she took a bogey on the 12th. However, Miss Palmer won the next three holes to end the match.

Marlene Stewart Streit, 42, of Stouffville, Ont., the 1956 U.S. champion and 11-time Canadian winner, came from two holes back with three to play to edge Marlene Floyd 1 up.

Ambrose Breaks Tie for Trophy

SOUTH MARCH, Ont. (CP) — Colin Ambrose of Lion's Bay, B.C., broke a four-way tie in individual competition Tuesday to win the Macdougall Trophy for marksmanship at the Dominion (DRCA) meet near Ottawa.

At the end of regular competition, Ambrose was tied with William Cox of Toronto, Chris Fitzpatrick of Oxford, England, and Andrew Tucker of Surrey, England, with 99 out of a possible 100 points.

The tie-breaking match was held after regular competitions Tuesday but official results were not made available until Wednesday.

Regular competition for the trophy called for 10 rounds each at 200 and 500 yards. Tie-breaking contestants were allowed five rounds each at 500 yards. Actual scores in tie-breaking competitions are not calculated.

Ambrose also will receive a gold medal and a cash prize of $25. Tucker, Fitzpatrick and Cox placed second, third and fourth respectively.

In other shooting Tuesday, Alan Mead of Kent, England, broke a two-way tie with fellow Briton Charles Holt of Colchester to win the Gibson Trophy. Both are members of the Great Britain rifle team, as are Fitzpatrick and Tucker.

Regular competition for the Gibson called for 10 rounds each at 300 and 600 yards and each contestant scored 99 out of a possible 100 points. The tie-breaker called for five rounds each at 600 yards.

Mead also received a gold medal and cash prize of $25. Holt was awarded a silver medal and $20.

About 100 army cadets are competing for 18 positions on the 1976 Royal Canadian Army Cadet team which will attend the Bisley rifle matches in England next summer. As well, about 350 civilians are competing for the trophies and prize money, to be awarded Saturday when the meet ends.

Will Boycott Race

ROME (AFP) — Luca de Montezzemolo, Ferarri racing team manager, said Wednesday that Ferarri's Formula I racing team would boycott the Canadian Grand Prix Sept. 21. He was confirming the team's position in a row between the Formula 1 Constructors' Association and organizers of the Mosport, Ont., Grand Prix over money and safety precautions. Ferarri driver Niki Lauda of Austria leads the drivers' world championship by 17 points over Carlos Reutemann of Argentina (Brabham Ford) and 18 points ahead of world champion Emerson Fittipaldi (McLaren Ford) of Brazil.

Britain Wins Admiral's Cup

PLYMOUTH, England (Reu- Cup yachting series today, the world's greatest test of ocean racing, when her three cup yachts finished in the first 10 placings in the 605-mile Fastnet event.

The British victory in the four-race series was clinched when the smallest of her three boats, Yeoman, crossed the finishing line here early this morning in the Fastnet race.

Because of her low rating, Yeoman vaulted to ninth place on corrected time among the 20 cup yachts which had then finished the five-day race. The two other British Cup yachts, Noryema and Battlecry, were fifth and 10th respectively.

The final points table could not be made up until all 57 cup boats had crossed the line, but it was regarded as certain the top 12 or so placings on corrected time would not be altered.

IN MEMORIAM

GRAHAM — In loving memory of a dear mother, Roby Mabel who passed away August 14, 1965.
I lost a mother with a heart of gold,
Who was more to me than weath untold,
Without farewell she fell asleep,
With only memories for me to keep,
I have lost but God has gained,
One of the best mothers the world contained.
—Ever remembered by daughters Roby, Ilamae and families.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Fri., Aug. 15

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You set high goals today. However, you can't afford to kid yourself as to what can be practically done.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Things are not always what they appear to be. Investigate if you're seeking or searching for something important.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're fortunate today in dealing with someone with very high standards. Don't let small, selfish desires upset this relationship.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your work habits are clean and precise today. Stick with it. Don't mess-up by involvement in another person's business.

LEO (July 23Aug. 22) You'll be happiest doing the things in life that are free. There's really no need to waste money having fun.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You achieve a sense of well-being today with the family. Don't let one member's selfishness ruin your mood.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your feelings could easily be hurt, but you possess the mental discipline to forget it and enjoy the rest of the day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A friend could interfere and stop you from getting something deeply desired. You don't have to let her get away with it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Someone could prevent you from getting recognition you deserve. Keep your feelings to yourself. The truth will out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your pensive mood could cause you to think everything is against you. It's a foolish worry. It just isn't so.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll discover someone you thought to be your friend isn't. Don't fret. The loss is really very negligible.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Something will happen to-day. You feel unjustly accused of having a hand in it. Fears that it will affect your reputation are groundless.

Opening lead — 10♠

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

One of the standard, book plays is what might well be described as the submarine, trump play. This play consists of leading a low trump from both hands so as to continue to hold full control.

This hand from Test Your Bridge is a simple illustration of this play.

South is faced with a sure loser in trumps at his six-heart contract. He can't afford to lose another trick so he must ruff the spade lead. If he proceeds to cash the ace and king of trumps, he will have to lose a spade later on, unless something especially good happens in the minor suits.

There are two other ways to play the hand and both work. One is to lead a diamond to the ace, ruff a spade, diamond to the king, ruff the last spade, club to the ace and then lead trumps.

The simpler, play is to submarine a trump immediately. Then draw trumps and discard the last two spades on dummy's clubs.

Ask the Jacobys

A reader from Nebraska asks us to describe the rule of 11.

When a player leads the fourth-best card of a suit, he holds three higher cards. Thus, if he opens a deuce there are nine higher cards held in the other three hands. If he opens a three there are eight higher, etc. In all cases the number is equal to 11 minus the spots on the card led.

Thus third hand can tell how many higher cards declarer holds; declarer can tell how many higher cards third hand holds. See tomorrow's article.
